RUSS FOREIGN TRADE SURE TO INCREASE, SAYS PITTSBURG MAN

(By Associated Press) MOSCOW, Jan. 25.—There is bound to be an ever increasing amount of foreign trade in Russia, despite all her handicaps, in the opinion of Adolph Tordy, of Pittsburgh, Pa., who came here with the American Relief Administration as cashier.

"There's no doubt that the Soviet government will continue going to the right, as opposed to the red left, in its economic policy," said Mr. Tordy. "So soon as Russia can get her transportation system righted so big freights can be handled, many of her present problems will correct themselves. One of these would be the famine. There's enough food in Russia, if its distribution can be affected."

"Cooking eggs has become such a part of her routine in life that she does it now solely from force of habit. I told her once that I liked eggs for breakfast, but she forgets that my longing for them might wear off after the first eight years.
