

USERS OF COSMETICS ARE WORLD CHEATERS, SAYS SALVATION HEAD

(By Associated Press)
SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Jan. 25.—Women who powder their noses, touch up their hair with a bit of golden glint or add the bloom of youth to their cheeks are positively dishonest, Evangelist Booth, national commander of the Salvation Army, declared while here recently.

Women use "makeup" to deceive, Miss Booth said. "A woman has no right to fool the world," she added. "The woman with blushing cheeks, indigo eyes and curly hair is a cheat."

Many divorces are caused by the fact that women have attempted to deceive their husbands regarding their appearance, she thinks. Man, she added, wants women as nature intended they should be.

Cosmetic Sale Disgrace.
The enormous sale of cosmetics in the United States is a disgrace to the country, Miss Booth feels. "If our young women of today would only take the money they use for paint and powder, and buy milk for the poor, starving babies of the world, they wouldn't need any artifice to make themselves attractive," she said. "In their cheeks would be the hue of joy that comes from the heart and in their eyes the light that comes only from giving service to the world."

Miss Booth thinks moderation and utility should be the guide when it comes to clothes. Following the style of the Salvation Army, she says, skirts should be five or six inches above the ground.

"Too many women today destroy their true womanliness by immodest dressing and they have only themselves to blame when their characters are questioned," she asserted.

THE FORUM

We as members of the Chester M. E. Sunday school, one hundred and twenty-one members today, commend the officers for the effort they have set forth to enforce the 18th amendment of the constitution of the United States. And we feel that by that enforcement it will make a better place for ourselves and our posterity.

Signed, Chester M. E. Sunday School, committee, Raymond Farst and Everett Hunt.

AMUSEMENTS

MURRETTE.

There is nothing which quickens the human pulse more than heart interest. It is the need which never produces a discordant note, the heart string which never fails to respond to the master's touch; it is the dominating theme of life. It is life!

In selecting his initial vehicle for presentation through the Associated Producers, J. L. Frothingham decided upon filming "The Ten Dollar Raise," a Saturday Evening Post story from the pen of a popular American writer, Peter B. Kyne.

"The Ten Dollar Raise" was decided upon for the reason that it is a drama wherein ninety million people of America's population can see themselves, a story of every-day life with every-day situations brought out in a way to make you imagine you are one of the characters upon the screen. It closes at the Murrette theatre tonight.

It is the story of an elderly bookkeeper, who existed on a small salary for 20 years and lived on the hopes of a 10 dollar raise, which a miserly employer promised annually, but always put off until the following Christmas. For years he waited for the raise that he might be financially able to propose to the head stenographer in the same office.

"You can't wreck this ship when my pup can't swim!" So said Peet, the big Swede seaman on board the "Thomas Doane" when he overheard the plans of the rest of the crew to run the ship on the rocks in order to collect the insurance money for the owners. That was the signal for a fight, on the outcome of which hung the fate of the sturdy little schooner. Bradley Nickerson, the mate, thinking it was mutiny, and unaware of the owner's orders to sink the ship, joined in with the Swede. It was "some fight," but they managed to reach the wheel just in time to change the course of the ship and avoid disaster. This is but one of the many thrilling spectacular scenes included in "Partners of the Tide," Irvin V. Willat's latest production, released by Hodkinson, now showing at the Murray the atre. It is a story of the sea adapted from the novel of the same name written by Joseph C. Lincoln. Shipwrecks, daring rescues, a fight between divers inside a ship on the bottom of the sea, and a tender tale of love, have all been combined by Irvin V. Willat into a picture that has real heart interest.

RICHMOND

There are screen heroines who appeal to one's sympathies from the moment they appear in a picture; there are others who seem to grow upon one as the story progresses; some few, unfortunately, who never succeed in enlisting the sympathies fully despite their hardest efforts.

Jane Novak, the charming heroine of and leading woman in William S. Hart's new Paramount picture, "Three Word Brand," which begins at the Richmond theatre today, is of the first named type. Miss Novak was born in St. Louis and was educated in a convent of that city. Her first recognition as screen player came when William S. Hart chose her for "Selfish Yates," his leading woman. She then did the feminine lead in "The Tiger Man" with Mr. Hart. Later she appeared opposite Charles Ray in "The Claws of the Hun" and "A Nine O'Clock Town." Miss Novak is a fine type of the American girl, simple and wholesome, demure and winsome. Her home life reflects her screen personality or vice-versa. Great things are expected of her because she is developing new strength and power with every production in which she appears and the screen future of the actress is assured. She has an exceptionally strong role in "Three Word Brand."
