INVENT WIRELESS COMPASS. WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—Experts of the bureau of standards have invented what is believed to be the first completely satisfactory type of airplane compass. A department of commerce announcement today gave credit for the invention to Dr. P. R. Heyl and Dr. L. J. Briggs, who it was said have designed a compass, which is now being successfully tried out by the army air service by using the principle of the "revolving coiled wire" instead of the magnetic needle.

Her tearful plea that she be allowed to return to her five-year-old son, Jean, at home alone, finally caused them to free her. Later the men abandoned the car.

How to Build Chimneys and Fireplaces

Of the mistakes commonly made in home building none is more frequent than faulty design and construction of chimneys and fireplaces.

Though the use of the fireplace is one of the oldest methods of house heating there are few who understand its principles, and even experienced masons frequently fall into errors in building which seriously detract from its efficiency.

No defect in the construction of the house detracts more from the comfort of the home, and none is a greater menace to life and property than a poor chimney and fireplace.

Bad chimney design is also the cause of much avoidable expense in heating the house.

An illustrated bulletin has just been issued which gives the householder and prospective builder a working knowledge of the principles to be observed in planning and building these important parts of the house.

This is a free Government bulletin, and our Washington Bureau will secure a copy for anyone who sends two cents in stamps for return postage. Be sure to write your name and address plainly on the lines of the coupon.

(Do not send the coupon to The Palladium. Mail it direct to Washington, D. C.)

QUEBEC TO BOOST LITERARY EFFORTS

(By Associated Press) QUEBEC, Feb. 1.—The provincial government is to encourage production of literature, a bill just having been passed by the legislature providing three annual cash prizes for budding authors. The highest is $2,500.

The bill was sponsored by Athanasie David, provincial secretary, himself a writer and the son of L. O. David, of Montreal, a French-Canadian historian of note.

Literary efforts will be judged by a jury of nine comprising professors of literature in the universities of Montreal, McGill and Laval; one member of the French section of the Royal Society of Canada; one member of a Quebec literary society; and the provincial secretary or his representative.

For some years the government of Quebec has given encouragement to young writers of the province by buying large numbers of copies of their work.

Microbes in connection with disease were first written about by a German scientist in the seventeenth century.
