Started Long Hike—But That's All

Far away in California was the goal of these two girls, Eleanor Sweet (left) and Stella Johnson, seventeen and fifteen, respectively, when they started to hike westward in knickerbockers from their homes in a Philadelphia suburb. They wanted first to visit relatives in Palisade, N. J., and got as far as Newark, when their father and the police overtook them. Their hike went bloody right then.

BUS LINE MAY OPERATE FROM DAYTON TO CITY

The beginning of a bus line service between Dayton and Richmond within a short time is announced by a company in Dayton, which is operating lines to other cities. The competition of bus lines has caused railroad and traction interests of that city to consider plans of meeting it.

Hints that the legislature may be appealed to for relief if the bus business continues to expand were made.

Martin Ackerman, general manager of the Cincinnati & Dayton Traction company, Saturday said his line has not yet suffered from bus service, although competition is greatest on that road.

"I think it is unfair to traction companies to permit these busses to operate without licenses and proper franchises," Ackerman said.

"Traction company rates are based on their franchises and mileage, while the busses file a tariff rate with the public utilities commission."

DECLARES MEN HELP WOMEN TO CAREERS

In an article on the study of medicine by women, Emma Feltz, in a Cincinnati newspaper, says the following about a Camden, Ohio, girl:

"Miss Vera Coombs, of Camden, Ohio, was interesting herself intensively in sociology at Miami university at Oxford, Ohio, when various professors urged her to take up medicine. She believes that no intelligent professor of today tries to hold back women from professions formerly held exclusively by men. When a worthwhile man sees a woman heading toward a career he is more inclined to push her on into it than to hold her back. Miss Coombs believes. Her father is a physician, and she had always wanted to follow some allied pursuit, but until well into her university days she had not decided definitely what it would be. Her father had not wished her to be a nurse, and other doctors had said, 'Don't be the bossed; be the bossier.'"
