

SEN. NEW SAYS DUTY KEEPS HIM AT CAPITAL IN ADDRESS BY RADIO

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Senator New was in Washington last night, yet he was the "principal speaker" at a political gathering in Indianapolis. The senator was seated at his desk in the senate office building, while his audience was assembled 600 miles away in the Propylaeum at the Hoosier capital.

He delivered a 900-word address in the interest of his campaign for re-nomination. The radio-wireless telephone made it possible for him to do this bit of long-distance campaigning. It is said to have been the first time for a member of congress to use this modern invention to deliver a campaign address.

The senator spoke through an ordinary telephone. His phone was connected with the great anastasia naval radio station—this station's call being "NOR"—and through the radio set at this station his voice was sent out through space in all directions for the ears of all who listened at radio receiving phones.

Senator New spoke in part as follows: "This occasion affords for me just one regret, and that is that I cannot look into your faces and thank you for your presence tonight. The best thing that can come to a public servant is the knowledge that he has the confidence and good will of those he represents, and for this evidence of that welcome fact I give you boundless thanks and gratitude that knows no limit."

Welcomes Women.
"I welcome the participation of women in our political affairs. I approve of it, first, because I believe it the duty of every citizen to interest himself in the administration of government, and I find an added reason for approval in the unquestioned fact that the ideals of women are of the highest and best. I believe that there is nothing more dear to the heart of American women than the guarantee of a country at peace, and I know further that this administration has given us that guarantee as nearly as human power permits."

"The world is to be felicitated on the outcome of the great disarmament conference, the accomplishments of which are far beyond the fondest expectations of those by whom it was called, and the success of which was finally consummated through the ratification by the united states senate of the most important treaties negotiated by it. The ratification of the four-power treaty left no doubt of the speedy ratification of those remaining and this done, I feel that we may look forward to a long period, and I hope an unbroken one, of peace and friendly relations between the peoples concerned."

Duty Causes Absence.
"A man should be wise enough to recognize an emergency when he meets it. I hope I know one when I see it. I am sure you do. I knew that there was an emergency in 1917 and 1918. I have felt that the need for the ratification of the treaties before the senate constituted another, which demanded that I should remain at my post of duty here in Washington to contribute my vote as a senator, and such effort as I am capable of giving, to their ratification, and it is that I may not neglect your business here that I am denied the pleasure of greeting you at closer range tonight."

"There are voices of public men and near public men that have never yet been raised in support of the work of the conference or the effort for peace being made by this administration, but at neither end of the war nor the events that have grown out of it have I stood mute. With the prospect of peace and prosperity ahead I hope to find the task of a senator no more difficult than it has been in the five years that have elapsed since you first honored me with your commission. "I have noted, too, that there are those who deplore my infrequent contributions to the vocal activities of the senate. I confess I do not speak unless there seems occasion for it. I promised you I would not when I was a candidate six years ago. I renew that promise now for the new term with which you are about to honor me. There may be those among you who think there are some who talk too much. Brevity is sometimes preferable to volume. I have sought to keep this in mind and shall continue to do so."

"Some of the few things I have said have been honored in receiving the attention and favorable comment of some well-known Americans. "Let me renew my thanks for your presence, your patience, and your friendship, which I esteem beyond my power to express. Good night."

WINCHESTER STREETS, BASEMENTS FLOODED

WINCHESTER, Ind., March 31.—Heavy rains here Wednesday night and Thursday caused White river to leave its banks and spread over adjacent farm land. Salt and Wild Cat creeks running through the residence districts of Winchester overflowed Thursday and dozens of basements were flooded. In many cases, to a depth of over two feet. The Union traction line from Muncie to Union City was put out of commission on account of the high waters early on Thursday and remained so all day and all Thursday night.

West Washington street is covered to a depth of from one to three feet for a distance of over two blocks. City mail carriers had to be taken across this expanse of water in wagons in order to deliver mail to patrons in the west end of the town. County roads in many places are flooded and they can not be traveled by automobiles. Thursday afternoon the rain was accompanied with strong winds and many roofs were reported to be blown off.

WANT WORD TO FIT RECKLESS AUTOIST; PRIZE IS OFFERED

(Special to The Palladium)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 31.—

"What is the name for the reckless driver, corresponding to the term 'jay walker' as used for the pedestrian?" asks the Hoosier automobile association in a bulletin issued today. "What is the term or word that will best fit the boob or hick driver who never signals; who is rowdy and always pushing his car ahead of general traffic; who cuts corners regardless and who turns corners with no thought for the welfare of pedestrians; who dashes through intersections without thought of possible traffic coming from other directions and who leaps on across railroad crossings without any effort to see whether or not a train or car is coming; and who, even when he sees such train tries to beat it across?"

"I realize that is a long question," says M. E. Noblet, manager of the Hoosier association, "and it will take some word or phrase that will point out all these things as thoroughly as the term 'jay walker' applies to the careless pedestrian."

"However, I am pleased to say that it may be worth while for Hoosier to get busy, put on their thinking caps and try to coin such word or phrase, for the American Automobile association is now offering a cash prize of $25 to the person who unearths a fitting sobriquet that will at once convey ridicule and opprobrium on the foolhardy and reckless motorist."

The contest, which is open to all, will close May 15 and the award will be made May 29. Persons wishing to submit names should address Contest Editor, American Automobile association, 1108 Sixteenth street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

COSTS LESS TO GET INDIANA MEMBERSHIPS

Indiana membership solicitors for the United States Grain Growers, the farmers co-operative grain marketing corporation, have secured members at a lower cost than in any state yet worked, according to a report compiled by William Eckhardt, treasurer.

Members contracts in Indiana have been signed at a cost of only $4.77 as compared with $5.55 for Nebraska, $6.37 for Missouri, $6.39 for North Dakota, $6.58 for Iowa, and $7.12 for Illinois. The cost for Illinois is made larger than usual by the fact that the hardest campaign against the farmers' plan was waged in that state.

Gross receipts are exceeding expenses by a constantly growing sum, says the treasurer's report, and it is understood that debts contracted early in the organization work are now being paid off.

In Wayne county, Center, Boston, Abington and Washington townships have been solicited with work now proceeding in Wayne township. Meetings for explanation of the plan and introductory to the organization campaigns are to be held in Economy Friday night and in Fountain City on Monday night.
