

BIBLE BUREAU GETS VERSES PRINTED IN 1,000 PUBLICATIONS

CINCINNATI, Ohio, April 28.—At an expense of one dollar for every million readers, the Bible Bureau of Cincinnati, is getting one verse of scripture printed daily in about one thousand American newspapers and magazines. Its total daily scripture readers are estimated at 10,000,000 now, two years after the bureau's inauguration.

A goal of 110,000,000 Bible verse readers daily is announced, with a five year program to make it effective.

The bureau's idea is that daily reading of one Bible verse makes for good citizenship, and that the best pulpit through which to reach all persons is the daily press. The organization is non-sectarian, its daily verses going to publications of all faiths, free of charge, and not only to newspapers but to trade journals, and to society and labor publications.

How the idea started and its rapid growth is described by George W. Hartzell, a Dayton, Ohio, manufacturer, an advisory member of the bureau. The chairman is James N. Gamble, of the Procter and Gamble company.

Started Two Years Ago. The bureau was inaugurated two years ago by Addison Y. Reid, of Cincinnati, who is now its secretary. He had been conducting a propaganda for prohibition, sending daily contributions to a number of newspapers, and paying for their publication. With the adoption of the prohibition amendment, Mr. Reid stopped that work, but decided to try a campaign of Biblical verse.

At first he paid for the publication of daily Bible verses just the same as he had paid for the propaganda. The verses went to only a few newspapers. After about six months paid publications, other newspapers, becoming interested, and discovering that Mr. Reid was furnishing the scriptural quotations, asked him to supply them also, offering to make publication without charge. Thereupon Mr. Reid stopped paying for insertion of the verses, and the present bureau was inaugurated.

The Home Garden

FERTILIZERS FOR VEGETABLES
The most profitable vegetable fertilizers are those which cause the crop to grow quickly and produce high quality as well as large quantity. S. C. Conner, soils chemist on the experimental station staff of Purdue University, offers some good hints on fertilization of garden products.

Market and home gardens should be on deep, fairly loose soils well supplied with organic matter as well as containing a liberal supply of properly balanced fertilizer elements. Succulent, quick-growing plants require relatively larger supplies of nitrogen than those in which the seed is the final product. With few exceptions garden vegetables require a soil with plenty of lime.

Asparagus, beets, celery, lettuce, onions, parsnips, pepper, radish and spinach are injured more by soil acidity than any other vegetable crops. Cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, chard, cucumbers, eggplant, muskmelon, peas, pumpkins and rhubarb need some lime for good growth.

Classes at Garfield Discuss Grant's Life

General Grant's birthday was celebrated in all of Miss Thompson's classes Thursday, at Garfield. The topics which were taken for the celebration were: boyhood, at West Point, early married life, as a general in the civil war, as president, last part of his life, wife and children.

In Miss Thompson's 7-B class, which is studying China, a Chinese exhibit was held.

STORY OF VOCATIONAL WORK WILL BE TOLD BY WINDOW DISPLAY

An exclusive exhibit will be displayed by the Vocational Arts department of the high school in the east window of the Starr Piano company, starting May 3, and lasting until May 8. The exhibit is being prepared by the vocational director and instructors of the high school.

Actual work of the vocational students and pictures of them in their classes will be in this unusual display, which will be systematically arranged in order to tell the complete story of the vocational course which is being offered in the high school.

In the first section, which will start at one end of the window, a short explanation will head the exhibit and the work of the drafting, pattern making, machine shop and printing classes will follow in order, with full explanation of the work.
