

WILL DECIDE DAYLIGHT SAVING NEXT MEETING; CITY PLANNING RESTS

Decision to allow the daylight saving measure to rest until next meeting was reached by the city council Monday night. The date upon which it would become effective was advanced to meet this change. Should it be passed by council at the next meeting, the measure would become effective at 2 o'clock the morning of June 11.

The resolution comes up for final vote at the next meeting. Councilmen Stillinger, Strate and Brown voted against having the measure put through at this meeting.

By unanimous consent, council decided to let the city planning measure take its regular course in council business instead of passing it under suspension of the rules in a single evening. The request for a more gradual procedure was made by Councilman Joseph Waltermann, who desires to conduct a campaign of education among his constituents for the purpose of getting in thorough accord with them before he votes on the measure.

Council voted to table indefinitely the measure regulating hawkers and peddlers and the limits within which they must operate on or near Main street. The resolution was tabled on the advice of the city attorney, who stated that it was unnecessary in view of the fact that the police already have this authority.

Try to Change Wording

Efforts of the board of works to save the city the sum of approximately $400 out of the $1,700 that had been appropriated for the purchase of a police car, by changing the wording of the appropriation to read "rebuilding" instead of "purchase" of one high powered car, were unsuccessful.

Walker E. Land, president of the board of works, presented to the council a proposal that had the endorsement of the police board by which the patrol body would be changed over to another chassis, to be purchased new from the factory. A new touring car body would then be placed on the old patrol chassis, which is powerful enough to provide ample speed for any emergency.

The cost of these two transfers would fall far enough short of the $1,700 to allow the purchase of a small car in which the police department could carry on investigation work without the necessity of taking out the large car every time.

Ordinance Delayed

The resolution to amend the ordinance changing the wording to provide for rebuilding instead of purchase of cars, was read once, and Councilman Harry Strate moved it be read again. Councilmen Williams and Waltermann voted against the proposition, and it was lost for the present. It will come up again at the next meeting.

A plea for action in the matter was made by Walker E. Land later in the evening. He stated that it was not the desire of the board to influence the council but they had presented the proposal merely as a chance for saving some money. If the council intended to turn down the proposal, he stated, why not allow the original ordinance take effect?

Comfort Station.

Need for a public comfort station was touched upon by the mayor in his report to the council. Councilman John E. White endorsed the statement. Councilman Waidale suggested that the county commissioners "might wake up to the fact that the courthouse is the logical place for such a thing."

Two written complaints against carnivals were called to the attention of the council by Mayor Handley. The first was a communication from a local Parent-Teacher association. The second was from the United States public health service, and it stated that a favorite trick of these shows is to get the backing of some local organization, but that they should be denied entrance to a city unless they have been thoroughly investigated. Many of these shows leave behind them a wake of disease, the letter stated.

The mayor announced the removal of Webster Parry from the trusteeship of Reid Memorial hospital, and the appointment of Frank McFall to succeed him. Mr. Parry's resignation was presented because of his duties as city controller.

Asks Co-operation.

Walker Land, as president of the board of works, asked councilmen to co-operate with the board by suggesting locations for fireplaces, as they had in the survey of the city lighting system some time ago. He also stated that the light plant is to take over the alley lights between Fourth and Twelfth streets in the downtown section. This is a matter that was brought up some weeks ago, when the police department tried to get merchants to supply lights for the alleys, in view of the fact that the city was furnishing the current free.

Additional playground facilities at Glen Miller park were recommended by Mr. Land.

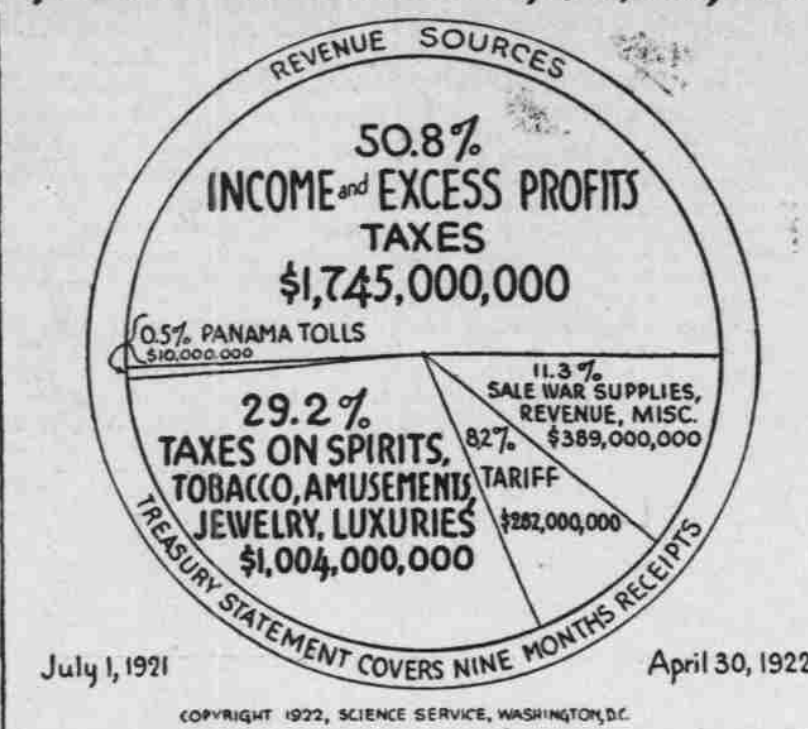

Light Plant Supplies.

An ordinance appropriating $11,000 for light plant supplies, of which $5,000 was for meters, $3,000 for wire at an especially low price, $1,000 for office expense and $2,000 for bookkeeping and billing machines which will save the city the expense of some additional clerks in the light plant office, was held up because of the desire of Councilmen Williams and Waltermann to have one of the minor items investigated.

D. C. Hess, superintendent of the light plant, explained that unless the ordinance was passed at once, he would lose an opportunity to make a very advantageous purchase of some wire for the plant.

Councilman Williams explained that he did not intend to hold up the purchase of the wire. He promised Hess that all the superintendent needed to do was go ahead and contract for the wire and the council "would stand behind him."

GOVERNMENT COLLECTS $3,430,000,000

Councilman Williams was the leader in the movement to put through a resolution to turn over to the board of works $1,250 for the opening of Southwest First street. The resolution was given all three readings and passed Monday evening.

Authorize Appraisal

The board of works was authorized to have appraisers appointed for the old touring car with which the police are "making out" until a new one can be secured. Councilman White asked if the board expected to get enough out of the old car to pay the appraisers. There was no reply.

Authority to sell the old horse-drawn hose wagon in the city building now classified as junk, was granted the board in a resolution passed at the request of Chief Ed Miller.

The new traffic ordinance, which will supplant old measures which have since grown out of date, was given first reading at the meeting Monday night. It contains 30 sections. The reading occupied 15 minutes of the time of the council.
