CHILE, PERU HOPE TO DEVELOP DIRECT ISSUE IN FEW DAYS

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, May 20.—With the conference sessions again in recess the Chilean and Peruvian delegates to the Washington conference on the disputed territory of Taana-Arica resumed their private and informal consultations today in the apparent expectation of defining a direct issue within a few days.

Communications with their home governments over the week-end was expected to put both groups in a position to state more definitely their policies when they come together again on Monday. So far it has been indicated the exchanges have not brought the major issues to a decisive stage because of the divergent angles from which the conference problems have been approached by the two groups. Although the delegates themselves would not discuss the prospects of decisive developments led to an increase in speculation in diplomatic circles generally over the possible form of arbitration to be considered in case of a deadlock. It was considered certain that should the issues of direct settlement arbitration be urged strongly upon the conference as a means of solution.

Arbitration Agency.
Many ways have been suggested of selecting an arbitration agency. By some it has been proposed that the controversy might be left to The Hague, and by others that the International court of justice created by the League of Nations might be invited to act.

The method most frequently mentioned in these speculations would contemplate an award either by the United States acting as sole arbitrator, or by a tribunal composed of the United States, Brazil and Argentina.

There also was a feeling in some quarters today that should Chile and Peru reach a deadlock, the United States might as host tender its "good offices" in such a manner as to make arbitration unnecessary.

Although in their present stage the Washington government is taking no part in the negotiations, it is known that the state department officials desire to do everything possible to make the conference a success and that their study of the situation has provided them with ideas which might be found of value in promoting a direct settlement.

It was said today, however, that the department was prepared to prepare to volunteer its aid and would not do so unless it received information that its mediation would be acceptable to both sides.

FINE ARTS CENTER FOR CITY BECOMES REALITY AT DINNER

A fine arts center for Richmond passed from the dream stage into the realm of reality Friday evening when a fund of $625 was established for such an institution at the annual dinner of the Richmond Art association. The action which lays the foundation for one of the most significant and lasting achievements growing out of the association also marked the passing of the first 25 years of its history. The cornerstone for the new institution was in the form of a nucleus of $250 voted from the association's treasury for a fine arts center which, it is stipulated, is to be an art museum for housing art, music, drama and community activities. The growing power of the nucleus was immediately demonstrated when Mrs. William Dudley Foulke announced she would add another $250 to the fund.

Mrs. W. W. Casar then contributed $50 to the fund. Mrs. Clarence Genett $25, and Mrs. Frederick S. Bates, $50, making a total of $625. Mrs. Bates, as president of the Woman's club, stated that if the future museum becomes a center for women's activities as well as for the fine arts, she felt certain the Woman's club will have a substantial donation to put in the building.

Will Give Collection
To give added impetus to this new movement, William Dudley Foulke, the president, announced that he would give his collection of colored photographs of the Old World schools as a gift to the new institution if the sum started was raised to $1,500 by next fall. The collection offered by Mr. Foulke is a unique one, of rare historic interest, which he has collected during many years' residence abroad. It includes work from the Umbrian, Florentine, Venetian and Netherlands schools, showing by its sequence and arrangement the gradual development of art in each school.

Announcement was made Saturday that Mrs. Maude Kaufman Eggeneyer, one of the group of Richmond artists, had given a picture to the new cause, the money from its sale to be added to the fund.

Mrs. Johnston, who suggested the movement to secure a larger art location for the city, prepared to prepare the present one is rapidly growing too small and is inadequate for a gallery or gathering place now. In making the suggestion Mrs. Johnston said: "The sum will be very small, but if it is not started it will never grow. When it is known that we have started such a fund, we will find people here, just as they are found elsewhere, who will want to contribute to it."

Woolen Main Speaker
Evans Woolen, president of the John Herron Art Institute, and prominent in Indianapolis banking circles, was the chief speaker of the evening. Addressing the audience Mr. Woolen explained the worthwhileness of art, said in part:

"The art association is not worth while if it be only for the advantage of us who are here now. Life and time are too precious unless used for a result that expands through the community. We can readily go to art galleries in other cities and see the results of the worthwhileness of art, said in part:

"The museum's real function," the speaker said, "is to increase the joy of the community which it serves." Closing, the speaker paid a warm tribute to John E. Bundy, whom he described as "that precious possession you have."

The Richmond group of artists was also praised with other artists Mr. Woolen said: they tend to be "sparked."

"If," he advised, "you cannot support the Richmond group and the museum, forego the museum and support the artists."

Robert W. Gratton, of Michigan City, one of the best known of Indiana artists, and one who remembers Richmond as the place where he held his first "one man" exhibit, praised highly the association and the interest which the community manifests in art.

Submits Report
Mrs. Ella Bond Johnson as director of the exhibit submitted her report. P. H. Slocum spoke briefly on the famous picture contest and Francis H. Edmunds submitted the treasurer's report.

Mrs. Johnston's report showed that the gallery had been used during the past year for 196 formal uses, including department club meetings, musical lectures, social functions.

Additions to the permanent collection this year the report showed to be as follows: "Creek in Winter," by Z. E. Pottenger, the gift of Mary T. R. Foulke; "The Old Homestead," by Lynn T. Morgan, from the Mary T. R. Foulke Purchase Prize; battle, by Herman Sachse, gift of the maker; five daguerotypes, gift of Mrs. Paul Ross; and a collection of French posters, presented by Josiah Marvel.

Sales in the gallery for the year totaled $555.20. Total attendance for the year was 16,921 visitors. Officers of the association for the past year were unanimously re-elected. The four directors whose terms expired this year were re-elected for a three year term. The officers re-elected are: William Dudley Foulke, president; W. G. Bates, vice-president; Mrs. Paul Comstock, second vice-president; E. C. Cline, secretary; Francis H. Brown, treasurer. The four directors who will serve another three-year term are: Miss Hettie Elliott, John H. Johnson, Allen D. Hole and Francis H. Brown.

EXPECT TAG SALES TO BEAT LAST YEAR

With 28 booths stationed in the business district and in the outlying parts of the city, including the tabernacle, the fourth annual tag day for the Richmond Day Nursery, being held Saturday, bids fair to be a great success. Reports from taggers show that despite the rather unfavorable weather conditions the public is responding generously to requests for donations. Those in charge of headquarters predict that the total return for the day will approximate $1,500 or possibly $2,000.

One thousand two hundred dollars was received last year on the tag day, but it is hoped that the unusual number of generous checks that have been received from individuals will make this year's total even greater.

All persons in charge of booths are requested to bring in their money and extra tags by 9 o'clock Saturday evening to the headquarters at the Starr Piano display rooms, Tenth and Main streets.
