

LEGION AUXILIARY BOASTS RECORD OF SERVICE, LOYALTY

Harry Ray Post, No. 65, American Legion, is no longer a "bachelor post." So states the history of the Women's Auxiliary, which appeared in the Sixth district convention souvenir history, circulated at the convention held at Greenville recently. The history of the auxiliary was written by Mrs. Jennie Mather.

Names of the officers of the Auxiliary are given as follows:

Mrs. Ralph Whisler, president; Mrs. Charles F. Williams, vice-president; Mrs. Henry Vogelzang, second vice-president; Mrs. Charles N. Cook, secretary; Mrs. Jennie Mather, historian; Mrs. William Reed, treasurer, and Mrs. Addie Warfel, chaplain.

The post history follows: In September, 1919, the Harry Ray Post 65, was organized and remained a "bachelor post" for eight months. On May 24, 1920, the Wayne County Chapter, American War Mothers met in the legion rooms and formed a unit to the American legion, known as the American Legion Auxiliary to Harry Ray Post No. 65.

Since this time the women have been tireless in their efforts to help the ex-service men and their families. Baskets of fruits and flowers are sent to sick men and at deaths. All men sent to hospitals are provided with lounging robes, slippers, pajamas, and all necessities. The auxiliary often provide whole families with food and clothing.

The auxiliary has co-operated with the legion in celebrating all special days and in taking the recent census. The community is realizing that the American legion and its auxiliary sponsor only those things that make for better citizenship and higher ideals. The legion is planning to purchase a new home and the auxiliary has pledged to furnish the kitchen and one other room for them.

The auxiliary has only 35 members for this year, but expects to make even that small number a vital force in this community to be felt for all good.

THEATRES

WASHINGTON

Is she short or is she tall?

Is she a "flapper"—or a debutante just passing out of her teens?

Perhaps of all motion picture stars Little Miss May McAvoy is most bewildering in the manner by which she apparently changes in appearance and stature during varying stages of a characterization.

"Being small — and yet possessed of a perfect figure, gives Miss McAvoy a tremendous acting advantage," says William D. Taylor, who directed her in "Morals," which opens at the Washington theatre for three days beginning Thursday.

"For instance, in this picture we want her in the early scenes to fully emphasize the youth of the character. In a fetching harem costume Miss McAvoy gains every possible bit of the appeal we desired for Carlotta, young and absolutely ignorant of the virtues of life."

"Then the little Anglo-Turkish girl is transported by a dramatic series of incidents into the household of Sir Marcus Ordeyne, where she is gradually molded into the habits and customs of conventional England. And she literally grows before our eyes. The appealing little girl who sought aid from Sir Marcus in the English young woman who looks a foot taller than her real inches in a modern evening gown."

MURRAY

H. B. Warner had all eyes glued on the screen at the Murray theatre today where John Moroso's story, "Dice of Destiny," was rapidly unfolded. Vividly, realistically and artistically told is this strong, gripping plot that involves real human beings in a series of incidents that play on the heartstrings and hold with a vise-like grip.

Beginning with Warner's bold rescue from arrest of his pals, a gang of jewel thieves, the tale relates the romance between Warner and his ward, for whom he goes straight; a frame-up that puts him in prison; a daring getaway; his rescue of the girl from the villain's clutches; his flight from an accusation of murder, leading up with tremendous power to the big climax when Warner, now a doctor, finds a man, upon whom he is to perform an operation, is the detective he has sworn to be avenged on. It is the real test of the crook's character. Life for one man means death for the other. But Destiny, shaking the dice, plays a straight, clean game.

H. B. Warner, as always, gives a polished, intelligent performance. Lilian Rich is a headline lady who bears close watching, and the remainder of the cast is particularly effective.

MURRETTE

"Have a Heart," implored a hokum weary public.

"All right, have a heart," replied the obliging film producer. "Have a couple of hearts."

Motion picture folk today are wearing their hearts on their sleeves. Not the prime verde or puppy-love heart.

Jiggs Delights With the Oom-pah-pah

George McManus

It is a notion with George McManus, famous cartoonist and creator of "Bringing Up Father," that an artist should be versatile in the arts. That he who works his effects with words should pick up the sculptor's chisel now and then; that the sculptor and the man who lives by brush or pencil should pour out his message in music if he can. In the snapshot reproduced here he is putting his theory into practice on the bass horn.

The picture was taken on a deck of the Homer, the ship which is bearing him to Ireland, where he proposes to buy a country estate and absorb, for a season out of every year, the joys of Irish life and scenery from beneath the security of his own roof tree. A harp, perhaps, would have been the ideal instrument with which to express in melody the sentiments of an artist about to gain himself a retreat in Irish hills. Lacking one, McManus borrowed a brass horn from the Homer's band and told the world in deep nor the vampire heart, nor yet that heart-palpitation, the bathing beauty. They have chosen the heart that everyone, young and old, has — the heart that beats in the most fundamental of affections for home and mother.

The genuine heart interest picture arrived with the production of "Over the Hill," the William Fox story of home and mother that ran uninterruptedly for a year in New York at Broadway houses and is to be seen at the Murrette theatre now. It offers nothing melodramatic, nor does it make one clutch the arm of the chair in suspense. It pleasantly introduces the audience to a group of everyday people as much like the family next door or one's own folk as possible. Then it proceeds to take one over well-trodden footpaths, that in their familiarity have an exquisite charm.

Quaint, homely, reminiscent, tapping a spring of beloved memories, compelling the tear and the smile. The public demands bare hearts where once it demanded bare limbs. So other producers took a tip from "Over the Hill" and are putting out dramas of the heart and home.

PRIMARY COSTS 40 CENTS

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., May 22.—Jap Miller, living at Morristown, who was the subject of a poem written by James Whitcomb Riley and was a close friend of the late Hoosier poet, asserts in his statement of primary expenses that he spent 40 cents for cigars which he passed out on election day, and that the only promise he made was that "he would give justice to everybody whether they want it or not." There was no opposition to the Democratic nomination of Mr. Miller as justice of the peace in Hanover township and he will run for the election in the fall.

CHECK BLOWN BY WIND DISTANCE OF 150 MILES

WARSAW, May 22.—Clarence Sicks, residing four miles southwest of Silver Lake, recently found a check for $140 in a field where he was working. The check was given to George W. Ford, made payable to C. V. W. Adams at West Lebanon, Ind. The house occupied by Ford was wrecked by a windstorm and the contents blown away. The check evidently was carried by the wind to the Kosciusko county farm, a distance of about 150 miles.

Do You Believe in Providing For the Future?

Every man with the ordinary instincts of common sense knows that he should provide, as far as is in his power, against possible emergencies in the future.

The very first of such precautions is the acquirement of a savings account.

The secret of successful saving is not the amount deposited, but it is the regularity with which deposits are made. Even a small amount, such as a single dollar, deposited regularly each week on pay day, will grow surprisingly.

This bank welcomes small accounts, and invites you to make an initial deposit of one dollar or more.

Three per cent interest is paid on all savings accounts.

SUIT IN INJUNCTION FILED IN GREENVILLE

GREENVILLE, Ohio, May 22.—J. E. Harter and Mary Harter have filed suit in injunction against Walter E. Tejan, Fern Tejan and the board of county commissioners of Darke county, Ohio, to prevent the latter from constructing a section line road and placing an open sewer under said roadbed and force surface water on the lands of the plaintiffs in section 13, township 11, range 1, east, in Liberty township, this county.

The plaintiffs claim the construction of the road will cause them irreparable damage, and they ask the court for a restraining order and for all other relief.

Will is Probated.

The last will and testament of Charles Thomas, late resident of Ansonia, has been filed with Probate Judge Younker for probate and record.

The will provides that all of the just debts be paid out of the estate and that the sum of $200 be expended for the erection of a suitable monument and that the remainder of the estate, both real and personal, shall revert to the widow, Eva M. Thomas, during her natural life, and at her death is to be divided among their surviving children or their heirs.

CONCENTRATE U. S. DEAD.

The American dead in Europe, according to plans submitted to President Harding for approval, will be concentrated in four American cemeteries in France, one in Belgium and another in England, over which the Stars and Stripes will wave forever. Originally the bodies were scattered in 2400 burial places and 10,000 isolated graves.

Zinc is the metal most generally used for roofing in all cities of Europe.
