

GET PREMIUM LISTS FROM HAY AND GRAIN SHOW ORGANIZATION

LAFAYETTE, Ind., May 31.—Members of the Indiana Corn Growers' association and Indiana exhibitors in the International Hay and Grain show, conducted annually at Chicago in connection with the International Livestock show, are receiving premium lists from the Hay and Grain show organization offering $10,000 in premiums, to be divided among entries, with the large portion going to corn displays. Other premiums are offered for wheat, rye, oats, barley, kafir corn, milo maize, alfalfa, clover, alsike, sweet clover, timothy, soy beans, cow peas and field pea seed exhibits.

That the show is not a money-making affair, but is conducted solely in the interest of country life and under the direction of representatives of state institutions and associations, is especially pointed out by G. I. Christie, of Purdue, who is superintendent of the show. W. Q. Fitch, assistant county agent leader in Indiana, is assistant superintendent of the show and will be in personal charge of it.

Joseph Helms, well known corn grower, living in Boston township, and the Jenkins brothers, of Harrison township, both were prize winners in this show last year. Mr. Helms exhibiting corn and the Harrison township farmers showing soy beans which they specialize in growing.

Third prize was won by the soy beans, and strong efforts are being made for a higher position this year. Clarence Jenkins reporting that a special plot of soy beans, well fertilized, is being groomed to furnish the exhibits. A point in favor of local exhibitors is the fact that competition has been further limited this year by the decision of the management to have the two districts, which showed together last year, compete separately this year.

Indiana Crops Saved

Indiana crops have been saved, in spite of the long continued wet weather and late spring rains, by the use of tractors, according to an inquiry just completed.

"The whole state of Indiana has piled into the seat of the tractor and pulled the Hoosier state out of the mud so that she is assured of crops," says a statement issued by investigators. Indiana is the greatest tractor state on the map this spring, more 'iron horses' having been sold this year up to May 1, than in any full year before.

High school boys, while continuing studies, took turns running the tractors after school. Headlights of night-operated tractors wigwagged a message of time saving to passengers on trains. With many bottom land farms overflowed, and slow draining of flat land, causing delay in work, farmers in all sections turned to tractors to supplement the horse labor, and by their aid, were able to complete the field work, and get the crops in on time or only a little later than usual.
