

THE SPECIAL SESSION ADJOURNS SINE DIE

Held Over An Extra Day Because Representative Knisely Made Charges Against the Governor.

The special session of the state legislature adjourned Wednesday afternoon at 3:13, after having vindicated Governor Hanly from the charge of bribery preferred by Representative Knisely.

Following the successful vote on the county option proposition, Knisely made a sensational charge that Governor Hanly had offered to give him an appointment provided he would vote for the county option bill. He made the charge in the shape of an affidavit, and some of the most ardent saloon and brewery sympathizers thought they had the governor in a fine trap, and the democratic leaders were making the very most out of the scandal.

But at this juncture Governor Hanly stepped in with a demand that the charges be investigated and a non-partisan committee was appointed to investigate the charges and they brought in a report unanimously signed, and which completely exonerated Governor Hanly. The house took Knisely mildly to task for having made the affidavit and the session adjourned with a complete failure of the plan of the brewers to make a criminal out of Governor Hanly.

The outcome was a victory for the governor in every way, and many who were opposed to the calling of the special session now agree that it was the entirely proper thing to do, and Governor Hanly has the credit of it solely to himself. But the loyalty of his party and the heroic determination of the six democrats in the house to do the right thing regardless of consequences, makes the session and its accomplishments stand out as a conspicuous argument that the right prevails.

Governor Hanly has signed all the bills passed at the legislature except the mining bill which he has taken under consideration.

FROM OVER INDIANA

The Indiana Federation of Labor, in session at Vincennes adopted a resolution to appoint a committee to ask William J. Bryan to display the union label at the head of his editorial column in the Commoner.

The corner-stone of the new $100,000 Scottish Rite Cathedral was laid at Fort Wayne with imposing ceremonies. Thousands of visitors were present.

John D. Myers, a Goshen contractor, fell from a roof and was instantly killed. Mr. Myers was an old soldier, and was a member of the 74th Indiana regiment of volunteers.

Harry Moore and John Oran, each aged 16, charged with holding up Geo. Bell and wife near Evansville late Saturday night, were bound over to the Vandersburg circuit court without bail.

Daniel Rathfuchs, of Michigan City, fell from the porch of his house. He struck on his head, his skull being fractured, and death was instantaneous. He is survived by a wife and eight children.

For stealing $1,100 worth of tickets from the Evansville Street Car company, Edward Schellhasse, a former conductor, was sentenced to the reformatory at Jeffersonville for a term of from one to fourteen years.

Cut off from saving his horses by a fire of unknown origin in his barn, William Baker, former, eight miles southwest of Warsaw, collapsed, and he is in a serious condition. Eight horses were cremated, and the season's crops were destroyed.

The Tom Marshall club, of Peru, Monday night read Burton Green out of the democratic party. Mr. Green represents Miami county in the legislature and he is a candidate for re-election to the house, but because he voted for the county local option bill the Tom Marshall club demands his removal from the ticket.

Meanwhile, where does the entry marked "township and ward local option" get off?

Albuquerque, N. M., Sept. 21, 1908.

Dear Editor: I was requested to write you a small letter about this territory.

My first experience of the west began at La Junta, Colo. I could look for a distance of a hundred miles and see the Spanish peak. It looked about 10 miles to me. Arriving at Trinidad, Colo., I looked a distance of about 18 miles and on the left could see what is called Fisher's Peak. It stands out in relief like a castle. By looking at it from the city a person would judge it to be about 50 feet square, but one is surprised at the top to find it is some hundreds of acres square instead of fifty feet.

Motor cycles can not reach the top, as when they get about one-third of the way up the machines fail to work. On looking to the right you can see Simpson's Rest. Simpson and his family are buried there. They were the first settlers of that vicinity.

From there I ascend the Raton Mountains. The top is about 7,688 feet in altitude. When descending the mountain from there one beholds such fine green valleys, inhabited by Indians and Mexicans. Then you keep on descending the mountains for about 1.75 miles.

Then you ascend the noted Glorieta Divide, with an altitude of 7,537 feet. It is noted for its great canyons.

Then I arrived in the capital of New Mexico. While I was there I saw an old church made out of mud, which is called adobe. It is supposed to be in the neighborhood of 500 years old. The church is still used to hold services.

Leaving the old city I arrived in my present home, which is in Albuquerque. Here I remained three weeks with friends. But now I am in a house of my own—a ranch about 10 miles from Albuquerque. There are canyons back of the house. The names are Bear Canyon and Wild Cat Canyon and Panther Canyon. I am on the cow boys ranch, of about 30,000 cattle and sheep.

The beauty of this country is you can get up any morning and see the sun. I can look on either side of me and see the Santa Fe mountains, also the San Pedro and the Arizona mountains and the Albuquerque mountains.

Reece Cavinder sprung a surprise on his folks here Saturday evening by bringing home with him from Knox

C. M. Greenlee and Sam Holmes, the latter of Rensselaer, returned home from their visit to Tennessee Tuesday morning.

Bruce Banta, of Valparaiso, arrived here Monday evening, but too late to attend the funeral of his sister. Bad train connections were the cause.

E. E. Kennedy has moved from the M. E. Corliss farm up near Newland, and a man from that region is coming on the Corliss farm we understand.

The long drouth was broken Sunday night when we were greeted with a fine rain lasting until after midnight. Then the wind got into a northwestern direction and blew quite cool all day Monday.

H. H. Stewart and son, the former Hanging Grove stone road contractors, are planning to have their engine and some other fixtures on the McAfee farm, loaded on a car and shipped to them at Kokomo.

Richard Foulks was in McCosburg Tuesday afternoon, the first time for quite a while. He reports his wife as in quite poor health this fall, and will probably take her to Logansport the latter part of this week to secure better medical aid.

Noble Moulds is another one of our good citizens that will hunt different pasture next year. Just last week he was over to Pontiac, Ill., and he and a brother, Geo. Moulds, closed a deal for a store in a country town about ten miles from Pontiac, located on the Illinois Central railroad. From all reports it is quite a busy place. Mr. Moulds expects to have a sale and move out there about Jan. 1st.

A message was received here late Saturday afternoon by Mrs. J. R. Phillips, stating that Alice Banta had died at Milford. She lived in Chicago for several years and was engaged at dress making most of the time. It was during her stay there that their only child Lola died and was back here for burial only 2 or 3 years ago. But since that time she has suffered considerable nervous breakdowns and worry which resulted in her death. Her body was brought here for burial in Osborne cemetery where the rest of the family that have preceded her are buried. Only a few people outside of relatives attended the burial.

Sunday morning about 3 a. m., Mrs. R. V. Johns was awakened by the noise of someone walking in the summer kitchen. Her first thoughts was that Mr. Johns or their son Robb, was up for something, but on hearing the noise again she called to Mr. Johns who was in an adjoining room. Finding all the family asleep, it might soon developed that a thief was out in the summer kitchen. Just as Mr. Johns sprung from his bed he heard the thief open the door and make good his escape. Nothing was missing however except a loaf of bread and some butter. In making his escape the intruder upset some fruit jars.

One of the greatest plays of the age has suddenly taken the country by storm. "The Devil," which is now being played to crowded houses and thousands of people are being turned away unable to secure a seat. "The Devil" which is novelized by the famous Hungarian writer, Franz Molnar, and the only correct version of this great play that will appear in this city shortly. "The Devil" is a collection of all the man's make-up. The plot of the play continues to hold an audience spellbound throughout until the last drop of the curtain. The most talked about play at present over two continents. There is every reason to believe that seats will start with a sudden rush and that the house will be sold out to capacity before the curtain rises on the night of Monday, Oct. 5th.
