

If You Are Sick

It is because some of the organs of the body are not doing their work well. There is a lack of that nervous energy that gives them motion. Consequently you are weak, worn-out, nervous, irritable, cannot sleep; have headache, indigestion, etc. because there is not sufficient nerve force to keep the organs active and allow them to perform their natural functions. Dr. Miles' Nervine restores health because it restores this nervous energy.

"I have been sick for a year, and did not know what was the matter with me. I tried many remedies and none of them removed any pain. I heard of Dr. Miles' Nervine, so I procured a bottle, and before I had taken half of it I was better. I would have had nervous prostration if it had not been for this. I will write and continue to take it until I am entirely well. I have since recommended it to five of my lady friends, and they have all thanked me for doing so, for it benefited them all."

passengers; but in any event support would have been assured.

Bevins, foreseeing the difficulty of his task, asked and obtained permission to invite the British admiral to accompany him, the wisdom of which was evidenced. Favored by the difference in time, the speedy Roberts on that very night crossed the Atlantic and deposited letters to secret service agents in London, instructing them to obtain positive knowledge of where the king might be found the following evening. On her return she conveyed Fields and the Dreadnought to the key, preparatory to the momentous journey.

That night which was again to disturb the thrones of Europe was accomplished without incident, but not without difficulty. The Roberts swooped down from the heights of air, unscathed save by her, to find spread between the earth and sky a blanket of fog, thick and impene- trable. Into it she slowly dropped, groping this way and that over the unsuspecting city, whose sounds came up to her but gave no hint as to locality. Aimlessly she wandered here and there in the murk, taking desperate chances in her quest. Suddenly something loomed directly below the open port, from which Bevins was leaning and peering down, and only a quick change of course avoided a collision. Fields joined him, and identified the dome of Saint Paul's. It was a narrow escape, but enabled them to set their course and gain the deserted greens of Saint James' Park, where Bevins was lowered by ropes to the earth.

He stood for a moment while the bulk of the radioplane and the Dreadnought which she was carrying rose into the air and disappeared from view. He felt alone in an unfriendly city, but set his teeth and stumbled out to a street, where he enlisted the services of a constable and a hansom, and was conveyed to the Cecil, whose lighted doors stared out upon the fog-washed courtyard leading from the Strand. His message of the previous night had met with instant response, and no one would have suspected that the two men who lounged in the hotel entrance in seeming idle conversation, smoking and watching passersby, were important agents in the hands of fate.

As nonchalantly as they had met them, one returning within doors, and the other sauntering back to the waiting hansom which was to convey the admiral to the hippodrome and a daring audience with the king.

Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup is nearly everywhere, because it not only heals irritation of the throat and stops the cough, but it drives the cold out of the system through its laxative principle by assuring a free and gentle action of the bowels, and that is the only way to cure a cold. You can't cure it as long as you are constipated. Insist upon Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup. Sold by B. F. Fendig.

And in both surmises he was correct; but the distress in the American republic was perhaps the most keen. Not since the beginning of hostilities had the president and his associates suffered such grave apprehensions as when it became known to a certainty that Brockton's endeavor had met with accident or disaster.

On the first day when the expedition failed to return from its voyage of conciliation no undue alarm was occasioned, it being considered entirely possible that it had been compelled to return directly to the key to avoid observation. Another 24 hours of silence caused comment; but again it was regarded as tenable that a barrier in the first quest had required a second trip. The third day passed with anxious expectations but no news. The fourth, however, was a memorable one; for then it became known to the entire civilized world that the heads of a nation had been abducted, and the situation in Washington grew almost unbearable.

In response to an urgent message to the plant, "Old Bill" Roberts, Norma, and Bevins appeared on the fifth night, utilizing the new radioplane for their visit. The gravity of the consultation which followed was intense; but the faith of the inventor in his work afforded some measure of relief.

"It would be almost impossible," he asserted, "for anything worse to befall them than delay. They may have been cast away in the air or on the land by an accident to their steering gear, which would require flight in straight lines. Nothing but a blow such as was sustained by Seventeen in battle could even temporarily stop both dynamos; hence it is improbable that they lost their lives."

Step by step he reasoned out the course which would be pursued, and at last gave it as his opinion that the Norma had come to ground in Canadian woods. He suggested searching expeditions, even though it entailed the exposure of the secret, the abandonment of the Oriental campaign, and the opportunity to establish permanent peace. The president alone stood steadfast for the latter hope, and was quick to offer a new plan. It was that the people of Great Britain themselves should have a conclusive and final demonstration, and, yielding to his arguments, it was agreed upon.

The project was no less daring than that which had been executed before. The Dreadnought was to be deposited in the Thames under cover of darkness, and in an apparently impossible position, where the people of London might look upon it as an object lesson. Immediately afterwards the king and his most powerful officials were to be shown the working of the radioplane, that they might be in a position to advance measures for peace and disarmament, fortifying their arguments by their own observations. The utmost secrecy was to be maintained, because in the meantime the Chinese armada might have sailed. In case it had not, the secret would be given out and search begun actively for the missing Norma and her disir-

The Real Temperance Situation.

Two-thirds of the republicans in Jasper county are in favor of advanced temperance.

Two-thirds of the democrats in Jasper county are in favor of advanced temperance.

The state conventions of both parties were enthusiastic for legislation that would lead to the elimination of the saloon from the state. The democratic convention met first and declared for a plan of voting on the saloon question in the townships and city wards. The republicans, soon after, adopted a plan for voting by counties on the saloon question.

It is difficult to tell just when the brewers and saloon interests first took a hand in the affair. They did not care whether they cast their lot with the democrats or with the republicans. They proposed to determine where they were hit the worst and then line up with the other fellows.

They figured from the experience at other places that the adoption of a county option law meant the closing of vastly many more saloons than did the township and ward proposition, and they had the working example of other places to justify their belief.

Then the brewers got busy to prevent the passage of county local option. With them it was a question of "two plans to defeat the saloons, let us choose the one that is most effective."

The brewers, for business sake, went democratic.

The temperance interests, for temperance results, went republican.

The democrats of Jasper county were not to blame. They abhor the brewers as heartily as do the republicans.

The republicans of Jasper county deserve no credit for having secured the county option plank, more than the fact that the delegates to the state convention helped to pass upon it.

But both interests got busy.

The democratic party did not go to the brewers; the brewers went to the democratic party.

The republican party did not turn itself over to the anti-saloon league; the league and its co-sympathizers lined up for the county option plan because they realized that it meant the destruction of hundreds of saloons.

Governor Hanly called a special session of the legislature and the county option bill was the chief matter of consideration. The lines on which it were fought were plainly distinguishable. The breweries did not so much line up with the democrats as they did against the passage of the county option bill. The anti-saloon league and the ministers did not so much line up with the republicans as they did for the passage of the county option bill. Its passage was secured. And to accomplish it six democrats in the house voted for it.

It is a law. Not a republican law; not a democratic law. But a law of all the people of Indiana.

No legislature will repeal it. It means the destruction of saloons in many counties, and it will have the support of democrats as heartily as of republicans.

It means that almost every county in Indiana will within the next year vote on the proposition.

For the saloon.

And it means that the temperance people of every county, without regard to politics, will vote "against the saloon."

The Jasper County Democrat says that republican orators and republican newspapers have called the democrats "breweryites", "saloon bums", "drunkards", etc.

We have not seen it, nor heard it, nor been guilty of it.

The republican orators and newspapers have ardently purposed to set thinking democrats right upon the subject. And we believe that many of them are now able to see that county option is a progressive step in temperance, and that they will feel their duty just once to vote for James E. Watson and a legislator that will support the county option proposition.

It is a matter for each individual to decide, and is the greatest issue before the people of Indiana.

In Ohio within the past two weeks, a county option law has been tested. Up to 32 counties have voted upon it and 31 have voted the saloons out. It being thus seen that county option is successful, there is every reason to expect that since temperance people will vote for it.

How to Cure Indigestion

Well Known Family Physician Gives Good Advice

"When a person cannot eat ordinary food without discomfort afterward, when he has heartburn, sick headache, gas in the stomach, water brash, belches up sour food, and this condition has continued for a week or more, it certainly is time to do something and do it quickly." That's what a popular physician recently said to the writer. "First thing you know you'll have dyspepsia if you don't, said he.

The quickest and best way to
