

Philadelphia Team is Dazed by Unexpected Assault of Stalling's Braves

Betting Changes in Quaker Town After Defeat of Macks

Athletic Money Disappears Like June Snow—Braves do Not Fear Lefthanders Says Evers—Connie Crew in Daze.

BY FRANK G. MENKE.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—Here are a number of interviews bearing on the second game of the "old series" which was scheduled for today. With the weatherman:

"Don't worry—it will rain today. The farmers need the rain. However, bless the farmer, what baseball, Oh, yes, come to think of it, I did hear something of some one wanting nice weather. But the farmers need the rain. They shall have it today."

Filled yesterday in his efforts to sprinkle the landscape, the weather man evidently did not intend being foiled today. In addition to bringing up an array of heavy, gray clouds to back him up early today, he also brought an intermittent misty rain that started at dawn and which threatened to become steady and heavy before the day was done.

With the betting commission: "The odds today are 5 to 4 that the Braves win the series and 5 to 4 that they win the next game and lemme tell you mister, there ain't much Athletic money in sight. I heard tell about $40,000 of Athletic money that was going begging yesterday for all kind of odds, but there is not $40 in sight today. The Athletic fellows kinda got cold feet I guess. There is some betting today but most of them is hedge bets."

And now, ladies and gentlemen, the speaker is Johnny Evers, a Bawston fellow. Lend your ear while he articulates:

"Left handers are pie for us. Only once since the middle of July has a southpaw beaten our regular team. That fellow was Aubrey of Brooklyn. But we got even with him the next time. Hammered him out of the box—that's what we did. I hear they are going to pitch Plank against us in the next game, if they do, we'll look 'em up."

WHAT THE LEADERS SAY ABOUT THE GAME

By George Stallings, Braves: "I knew my boys would come through. What they did Friday justifies my confidence in them. And what they did Friday they'll do again. We will win the series sure. And the series won't go the limit either. We'll finish them before it is necessary to play seven games. I've always thought I had one of the best young teams ever put together. What they did today seems to bear me out."

By Connie Mack, Athletics: "Well Friday was Boston's day. Saturday is another day. And there are a few more games after that. Of course I am not predicting that we're going to win out ultimately—predicting isn't in my line, but I have every confidence in the world in my boys. You can't always win you know and this was the time for us to lose. But losing hasn't disheartened or discouraged us. Watch us Saturday."

for the home crowd, has these few words to slip into you:

"Beaten but not disgraced. Vanquished but not effaced."

Mr. Collins doesn't talk in rhyme, normally. But Mr. Collins wasn't quite normal this morning. Something happened to him and to his fellow men yesterday. It was something horrible and it all happened so rapidly that Collins hasn't quit figuring it all out and, therefore, must be excused for speaking in a sort of poetical vein.

Stallings Silent. "Who are you gonna pitch today—if it doesn't rain?" was asked George Stallings, baseball manager with pugilistic aspirations.

"Pitcher," answered Mr. Stallings, whereupon he left for parts unknown. However, it was whispered if the day be dark, William James, who has a great assortment of fast balls, will do the heaving for the Beantown gang. Otherwise, George Tyler, left-handed person, will be on the job.

Speaking of being on the job brings to mind the ticket speculators. The small army of them that was jailed yesterday and the day before are out peddling their wares again.
