FOUR WAYS TO MAKE DELICIOUS ICE CREAM.

It is amazing that more housewives do not prepare water ices frequently as the family dessert during warm weather. For it is a popular dish with almost every one, is made much more easily than ice cream and other frozen desserts, and it is considerably cheaper. No rich milk or cream is needed for water ices. Fruit juices, sugar and water are the only ingredients needed.

Almost all water ices are made alike. Boil the sugar and water to a syrup, then add the fruit juice, set aside to cool, and then pack in the ice cream freezer. Be sure that the sugar and water are boiled long enough to form a very thick syrup so that the finished ice is velvet smooth. Freeze as with ordinary ice cream and then let stand for a few hours to ripen.

A variation on the simplest water ice may be made by adding the white of egg or some gelatine as in some of the following recipes:

Lemon water ice.
4 cups of water,
2 cups of sugar,
1-2 cupful of lemon juice,
Rind of one lemon.
Make a thick syrup of the sugar and water and boil with the thinly pared lemon rind for five minutes. Then strain and set aside. When partly cool add the strained lemon juice, then let it get cold, pack and freeze.

Any fruit juice may be prepared in this way except that one cupful of sweet fruit juice is used instead of the half-cupful of lemon juice. A spoonful of lemon juice or orange juice or other fruit will give an additional pleasant flavor to the water ice.

Tutti Frutti Ice.
1 cupful of sugar,
1 cupful of water,
1 teaspoonful of gelatine,
2 tablespoonfuls of cold water,
3-4 cupfuls of pineapple,
1 each orange, lemon, banana.

Boil the sugar and the water five minutes. Soak the gelatine in cold water, stir and add to the syrup. Mix the juice of the lemon, orange, grated pineapple and mashed banana and add. Set aside to cool, then freeze.

Strawberry Ice.
2 cupfuls of water,
1 cupful of sugar,
2 cupfuls of strawberries,
1 egg white.
Boil the sugar and the water to a syrup about five minutes. Add the mashed berries, set aside to cool, then freeze. When partly frozen add the stiffly beaten white of egg and finish freezing.

Jelly Ice.
1 glass of jelly,
1-2 cupful of corn syrup,
3 cupfuls of hot water,
1 lemon.
Mix boiling water with the syrup and pour over jelly. Stir until it melts, then add juice of one lemon, pack in freezer. If desired, the whites of one or two eggs may be added when partly frozen and then continue freezing.

Adele Garrison's New Revelations of a Wife "Their Second Honeymoon"

HOW MADGE WON LILLIAN'S ENTHUSIASTIC APPROVAL.

"You shouldn't do that, Madge." Lillian Underwood shook her head at me with laughing disapproval. "Do what?" I asked, bewildered. "Begin to say something and then cut it short. Much better get it out of your system. Tell me how you're going to manage to meet Harry."

I looked at her with the amazement I always feel at her almost psychic reading of the thoughts of those around her. A scheme for accomplishing our purpose had come into my mind, but I had stifled the impulse to tell Lillian of it, fearing she might think me presumptuous.

"I mean it," Lillian persisted, and I fancied there was a note of irritation in her voice at my delay. "If you have any idea how we're going to work it I want to hear it."

"Why, the thought came to me," I began confidently, "that as Mr. Underwood used to be so interested in theatrical collections—"

"You wonder child!" Lillian exclaimed, jumping up from her chair. "Of course! The very thing! You mean he will be sure to haunt that room in the Public Library where they are showing that wonderful collection of programs and manuscript, plays and portraits of the theatrical world?"

I nodded, for I had no words with which to answer her. Her brain works so fast sometimes that it dazes me. It had needed but one word from me to enable her to grasp the complete scheme.

In another moment she was working out the details.

"Act Naturally," "Lucky that Harry knows you're a history snark," she said, referring to the subject I had taught for years. "He will imagine you're looking up something for an obituary history of the early amusements in our western civilization." Her tone held laughing mockery, but I caught the bitter undertone, knew that this task she was facing was a heart-breaking one to her.

"You'd better get there early in the morning the day you go, and be very busy engaged with the more scholarly part of the collection—Harry thinks you're an awful high brow, you know. Have a notebook, of course, and don't send even a glance in its direction until he discovers you."

"And then what?" I asked anxiously, for this was the question tormenting me. How was I ever to greet Harry Underwood unconcernedly with my fear of the man's sinister personality and my consciousness of the revelation Lillian had made to me of his feeling for me? "Act exactly the way you feel at first," Lillian replied promptly, and I saw that her zeal for the cause she was serving had enabled her to throw off the yoke of personal feeling that had hampered her in formulating plans concerning her recalcitrant husband. She was absorbed in the problem before her and was dealing with it as if a total stranger was concerned.

"You detest Harry, and are afraid of him," Lillian went on in the same curiously impersonal tone. "Therefore, you will naturally register aversion and timidity. Then he will begin to talk to you, and after a bit, in spite of yourself, you will experience the old, uncomfortable, fascinated interest which he always aroused in you. Instead of lighting even a semblance of interest in what he is saying, as you always used to do, compel yourself to a little tolerance. Make him feel that he has been able to lessen your aversion to him by ever so little."

"Your Head Rules." I am afraid the hackneyed expression "stared at her open-mouthed" is the only one which would fully express my attitude as her words fell upon my ears. She had voiced what I hadn't admitted even to my most secret self, that Harry Underwood had the uncanny fascination for me that I imagine a snake has for a bird. I did indeed "detest and fear" him, but, on the other hand, never in my life had I met a man with the peculiar fascinating charm he has when he chooses to exercise it.

That Lillian knew of this attitude of mine was a most astounding thing to me, although I should have guessed it from my experience of her almost clairvoyant intuition. But I couldn't restrain the hot, burning blush that suffused my cheeks.

"There's no need for you to blush, Madge," Lillian said in a kindly matter-of-fact tone that helped me to regain my poise. "Harry is one of the most fascinating devils going when he wants to be. Most women simply let him manipulate them instead of being clear-headed enough to manage him. Your head always or nearly always rules your impulses, my dear."

"It's this quality on which I'm counting in the duel of wits for which I shall help to set the stage."

HOW TO STOP BEING NERVOUS

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Strengthen Weak Nerves and Increase Strength and Vigor.

According to a noted French scientist, the most effective remedy for nervousness, insomnia and ailments due to depleted nerve force, is a form of organic phosphate known among druggists in this country as Bitro-Phosphate.

It is described as a substance which is similar in composition to the phosphorus naturally found in brain and nerve cells and, being easily and quickly assimilated, the work of creating nerves force, strength and vigor begins immediately it is taken into the human system.

There are many reports of astonishing results from its use, some showing complete improvement even in stubborn cases of long standing nerve weakness. As there are many kinds of phosphates, care should be exercised to procure the genuine Bitro-Phosphate as said by Wetli's Original Cut Rate Medicine Store in South Bend and all good druggists.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

D. P. writes: I suffer a good deal from dyspepsia. Could you tell me what causes it, and what I could do to keep from having it?

Answer: Dyspepsia is often caused by over-feeding or improper mastication of the food, but there are many other causes. Eating heartily when you are very tired or when you are under a nervous strain will at times cause dyspepsia. Then
