Declaring that the constitution of the United States at the time of its original adoption was as far ahead of the political thought of the day as the proposed league of nations is in advance of the political thought of the present generation Dr. R. E. Pattison Kline Wednesday night, presented South Bend enthusiasts with impressive views of the world's greatest problem.

That many of the large audience appreciated and were in sympathy with the beliefs and statements advanced by Dr. Kline was apparent, the speaker being frequently interrupted by loud applause as he drove home his points with forceful oratory.

Refers To War.

Dr. Kline in starting referred to the tremendous loss of human life caused by the great war and declared that the world today asks for a method to avoid a similar catastrophe. It can be prevented, the speaker said, by the application of idealism to international affairs. He then mentioned the numerous objections to idealism and to offset them pointed to what the world in general and the United States in particular has accomplished through idealism.

"I do not think the world can be perfected, even through idealism, overnight," said Dr. Kline. "But it is practical even in the matter of dollars and cents."

To uphold this statement he referred his hearers to the remarkable record of the Twist Drill company of Cleveland, O., a firm which has applied the principle of idealism to the conduct of its business and has not experienced a strike in 45 years.

Discusses Opposition.

In declaring that the constitution at the time of its adoption was as bitterly opposed by one faction as by another Dr. Kline said, in effect, that the league of nations is opposed to-day the speaker pointed to historical records including the fact that because of their championship of the constitution George Washington was called a fool, Franklin a dotard and the constitution called a "triple-headed monster and a villainous conspiracy." These expressions, he said, were uttered by learned men of the time.

"The league question," said Dr. Kline "must be settled upon its merits alone. Politics or political alliances must not be allowed to influence us in this greatest of all questions facing us today."

The Monroe Doctrine.

Other proofs of America's practical idealism and its success mentioned by the speaker were the Monroe doctrine, the civil war and the fact that this was the first nation to demand the settlement of international affairs by arbitration, our entrance into the world war, our treatment of Cuba, the Philippines and China in the Boxer uprising.

"Practical-idealism," Dr. Kline declared, "is the chief characteristic of America."

Reasons For Acceptance.

Briefly his reasons, given, why we must enter the league were:

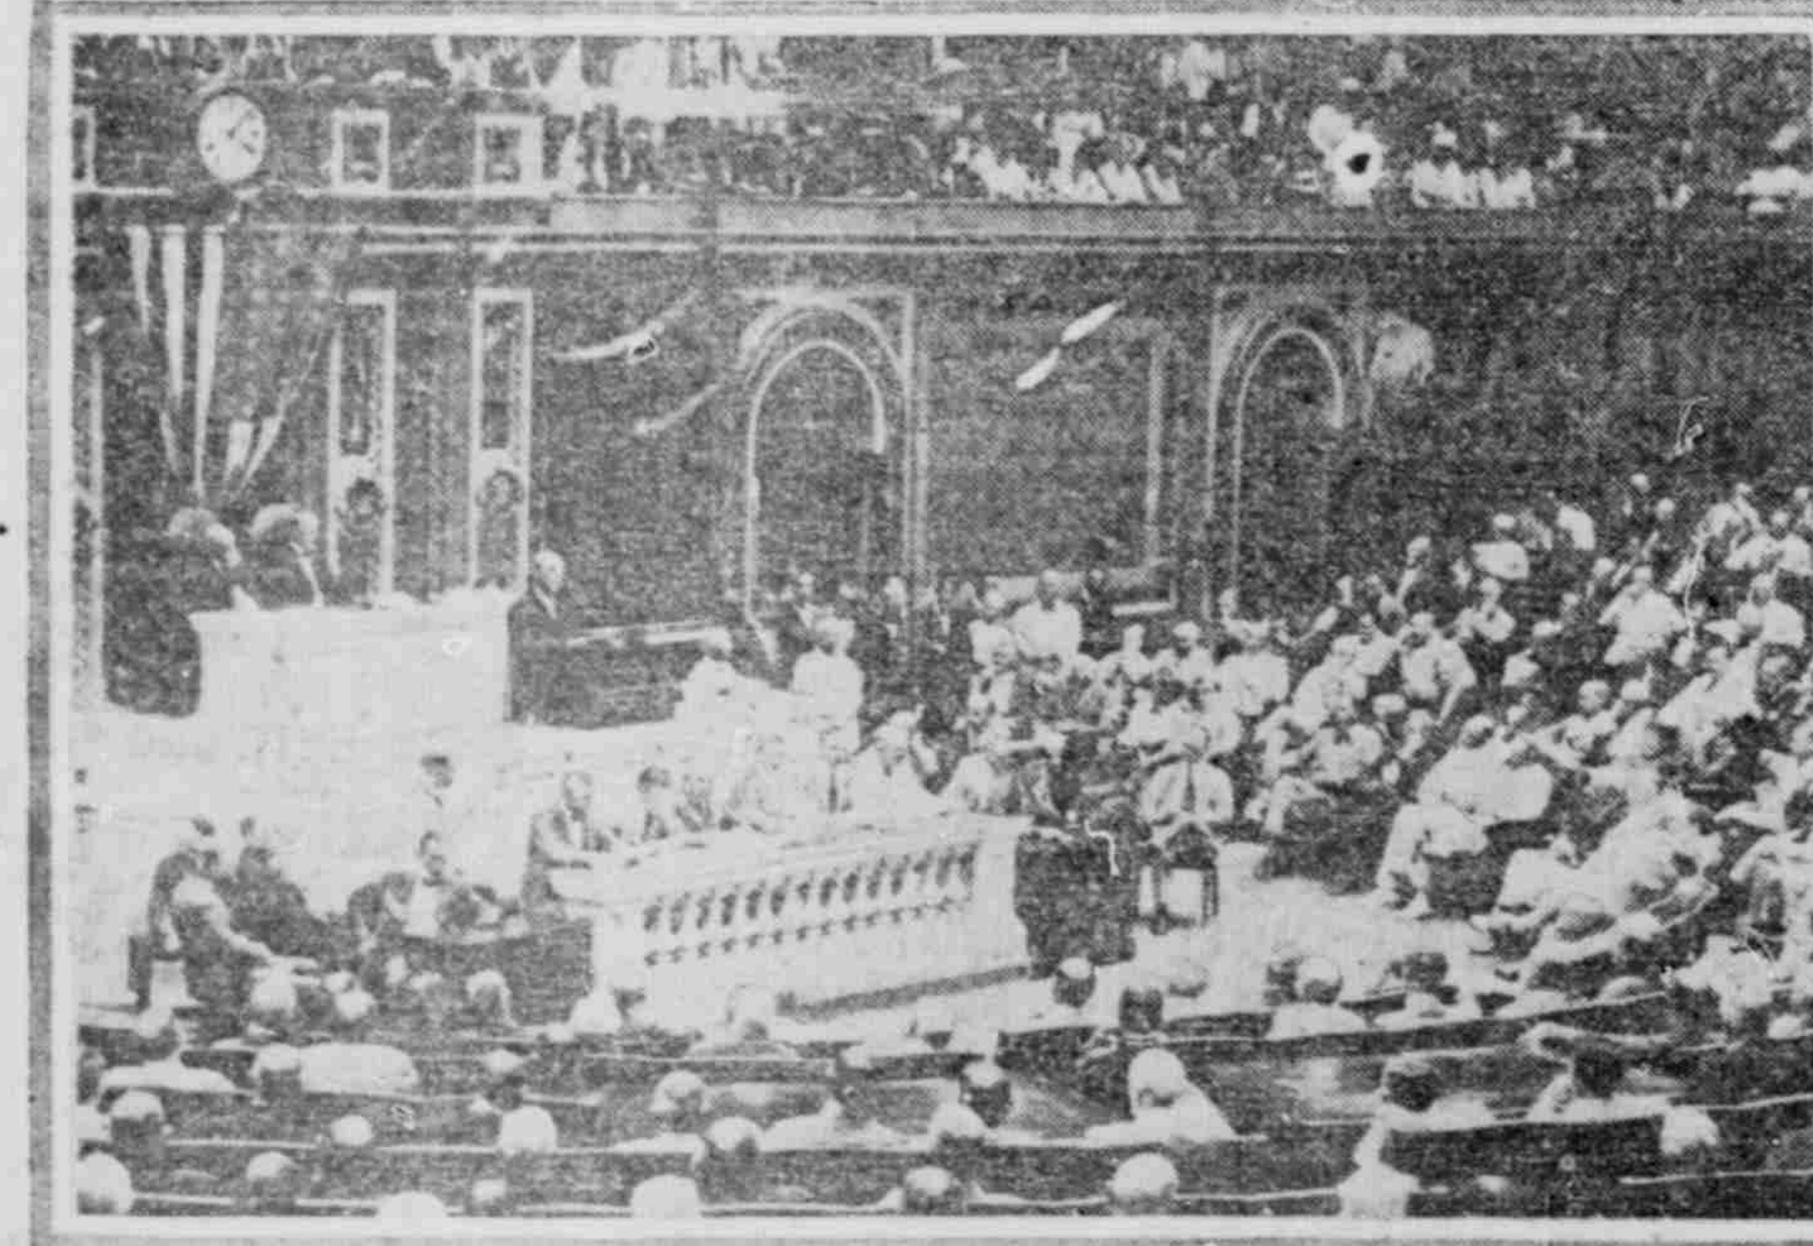

To maintain moral leadership of the world.

It is the next step in practical idealism.

The nations of the world want America to help them avoid war.

The world is one big family and

GEORGES CLEMENCEAU IN A NEW ROLE FROM THE LONDON SPHERES

Among all the great figures whom France loves and whom she welcomed to her peace celebration on July 14 one stands out alone—that of Clemenceau. "Père Victoire," the army calls the man who fought so tirelessly and so magnificently. On what was, perhaps, the greatest day in the history of France her people's deepest cheers were for the octogenarian statesman, who never faltered or hesitated even when the day was darkest but who, fighting at home as gallantly as the poilus were fighting at the front, led his country to victory.

co-operation of all nations is necessary.

Without the league the world will go back to alliances and secret treaties.

The league means that for the first time the world has a chance to organize the collective world moral judgment.

Answers Objections.

In answering the main objections advanced by opponents of the league Dr. Kline said, in effect, that the pact is not English, that we do not lose our sovereignty and that it is not true that England will have six votes in the league to America's one.

To prove the latter contention, the league's champion pointed out that it is stipulated in Article V of the pact that no action in any matter can be taken by the league unless by the unanimous agreement of all members. That one dissenting vote would cause to fail any proposed action of the league and therefore it would be settled upon its merits alone. Politics or political alliances must not be allowed to influence us in this greatest of all questions facing us today."

BOOKLET SHOWS EXTENSION PLAN

Brochure Tells of Dinner at Which Studebaker Enlargement Was Announced.

A booklet recording the events in connection with the recent announcement of the expansion of the Studebaker corporation, and written to express the esteem of the citizens of South Bend towards A. R. Erskine, president of the corporation, was issued Wednesday.

The brochure contains the speeches given at the complimentary dinner given at the Oliver hotel to Mr. Erskine on January 20, 1918, a copy of the resolutions presented by Abe Frank and unanimously adopted, and a list of those who attended.

Pictures are Feature.

Other features are a group picture of the Studebaker plants, an airplane view of the new South Bend plant, a picture of the directors and officers, and a page showing the names of South Bend's four newspapers containing the announcement of the enlargement of the plant.

Dr. C. A. Lippincott, head of the social service department of the corporation, wrote the foreword. Mr. Erskine's announcement of the Studebaker plans, and a more detailed explanation of the construction by M. F. Waller, vice-president, are other features of the booklet.
