Adele Garrison's New Revelations of a Wife "Their Second Honeymoon"

HOW MADGE TRANSMITTED THE MESSAGE AND WHAT SHE SENSED.

The names in the local telephone register blurred before me, for relieved, happy tears were filling my eyes as I realized that the message from Pemberton hospital was not from my husband, but from Mr. Frederick Graham, sent to me by mistake.

"What did you say that number was?" The voice of the hospital interne at the other end of the wire had a worried inflection. "Marvin, 719-J," I repeated.

"I suppose there's nothing else for me to do but to get them," the interne said, and the voice had lost its impersonal note altogether. There was a distinct appeal in it, which I hastened to answer, not to save him inconvenience but for the sake of the troubled woman of the same name as mine, who must be waiting in an agony of suspense for this message.

"Would it facilitate matters for me to deliver that message by telephone?" I asked. "I should be very glad to do so."

"Oh, if you would be so kind!" The interne's voice was just one relieved note. "It takes so long to get these suburban connections."

"Please correct me if I'm wrong in repeating it." Then I recited smoothly—for, indeed, every word of the original message was graven on my brain cells:

"You May Tell Her—"

"Mr. Frederick Graham wishes me to tell you he has had a very good supper, has gotten hold of some books he wanted, is feeling fine, sends his love to you both, and says you're not to come to see him under any condition before Monday."

"Absolutely correct," approved the interne.

"But there's no authoritative word here as to his condition," I argued, "only his own opinion. What shall I tell Mrs. Graham about him from you?"

There was a distinct pause. Then the voice said smoothly:

"You may tell her he is in as good condition as we can possibly expect."

My heart sank. I had had enough experience with physicians and their verdicts to know that this unknown Frederick Graham must be in grave straits indeed. But there was all the more reason for hastening the message to his wife.

"Thank you," I said. "I will see that the message is delivered immediately."

"Thank you," the interne replied. "Good-by."

I stood in puzzled thought for a moment or two after I had hung up the telephone. How to deliver the message with the least possible confusion to this other woman, to whom although I had never heard of her before, I felt sympathetically drawn.

At times medicines are applied to the throat by gargling, and to the nose and throat by spraying. Children should be taught how to gargle the throat while they are well, as a child with a high temperature and an aching throat is in no condition to learn anything. A good cleansing gargle is a teaspoonful of baking soda, or common table salt in a glass of warm water. As a rule it is better to gargle the throat than to spray it, as a larger amount of the solution can be applied directly to the affected part.

Nose sprays should not be used except when ordered by a doctor. After using a nose or throat spray the nozzle should be boiled immediately, dried and the entire apparatus kept in a clean cloth or box.

A surprising number of families, who have progressed beyond the community towel stage, still use a common nose spray without even taking the trouble to wash the nozzle. A good way to cleanse the nose in a case of cold is to make a cup of the hand and snuffle salt solution up the nose. However, do not have the solution too strong. Remember a teaspoonful to a glass of water is sufficient, a strong solution is irritating to the mucous membrane instead of soothing.

Affections of the nose and throat often extend up the tube leading from the throat to the ear and cause earache. In such cases a hot water bottle will give much relief. It is seldom necessary to put things into the ear to stop the pain. When it is necessary use one drop of glycerine and then one drop of laudanum into the affected ear; cover with a hot water bottle. Never attempt to put into the ear the hundred and one articles recommended by friends. It is always wise in case of earache to call in a doctor. At times after the ear begins to discharge the doctor will order it cleansed by a gentle stream of water from a syringe. Use water as warm as the patient can comfortably stand, be sure that all the air has been expelled from the syringe, and have the flow gentle and even. After the ear is perfectly clean dry it out with a piece of cotton twisted on the end

SHAW DECLARES LEAGUE MUST BE MUCH MODIFIED

Says U. S. Must be Allowed to Withdraw on Own Initiative.

That the peace treaty and the League of Nations will never be ratified unless express reservations are made that the United States can withdraw without the consent of any other nation, is the opinion of Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, ex-governor of the state of Iowa.

In an interview with a News-Times reporter, Mr. Shaw, who debated the government ownership of railroads with Dr. Charles Zuehlke at the chautauqua Friday night, made the following statement relative to ratification of the League of Nations:

"Ambiguities are the prime causes of war as well as of litigation. If the constitution of the United States had expressly provided that the several states might withdraw or had made it clear that they could not withdraw the Civil war would have been avoided. It seems to me the man is worse than an idiot who insists that the admitted uncertainty in withdrawal from the League of Nations shall be perpetuated."

"This much is certain, the treaty will never be ratified unless express reservations are made that we can withdraw without asking the consent or approval of any other nation; second, that we can exclude from citizenship or domicile any race as well as any individual; third, that we can impose for revenue or for protection any tariff we please; and fourth, that the Monroe doctrine with all that it is understood to imply is expressly reserved from the jurisdiction of the League of Nations."

"If these, as some insist, are already safeguarded, the nations will acquiesce and it will not be necessary to recommit the treaty. If objections are to be raised to these reservations by any nation the time to have them raised is before the treaty is ratified."

"That each of these questions is now shrouded in ambiguity and uncertainty is conceded by everyone. Why insist that they shall be left fruitful causes of war if it be the purpose to prevent war why not prevent the causes of war?"

"I have always rather prided myself upon reading people through their voices. It's a hobby of mine. I visualized this woman upon the instant. A stately, gray-haired woman, cultured, well bred, whose ingenuous and trained courtesy no emergency could ever make her forget—a sudden impulse of liking, longing to serve her seemed me."

"I will see to it that if any other message comes by mistake to me you will get it at once," I promised. "And—I wish I could be of service to you. You're a stranger here, are you not?"

"We have only lived here three months," the tremulous voice answered. "I know no one in the village. Mr. Graham has been ill ever since we have been here."

"Please don't consider it an intrusion if I ask to come to see you," I returned. "I have known what it means to be alone among strangers."

"Intrusion!" The voice was eloquent. "I should be so glad to see you."

"I am coming soon," I replied earnestly.

SPRAYS, GARGLES, AND EAR TREATMENTS.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. M. N. writes: Is diphtheria a germ disease, and does it affect the heart? Is there a breaking out with it? When should you use anti-toxin, and how often should it be used, and how much for a child five and a half years old?

Answer: Diphtheria is a germ disease. Very often it affects the heart. Patients have been known to die suddenly of heart failure when they were apparently well. A rash is not a symptom of diphtheria. As to the use of anti-toxin, when and how often must be left to the doctor entirely. Anti-toxin is something that the general public cannot fool with.

S. M. E. writes: Please tell me what to do for eggs laid from parasites in the head? I have gotten out the bugs, but I cannot get rid of the eggs.

Answer: Wash the head with equal parts of kerosene and vinegar, being careful not to let it run down over the face or neck. The kerosene will kill any lice that may be left and the vinegar will dissolve the sticky substance that binds the nits to the hair. This should be done several times with intervals of two or three days between the treatments.
