URGES HOME LIFE FOR HUN WOMEN

Female Nationalist Would Take Them From the Labor Market.

BERLIN, Aug. 20. — "Women ought to be taken out of the labor market just as much as possible." This is the opinion of Frau von Gierke, of the German national party, one of the women members of the national assembly, chosen after the last winter's revolution. In an interview she declared she believed women ought to take more and more part in international politics, but decried any attempt to have them in high government places. She said that they ought to be in the home rather than the factory or the office; and that where circumstances positively will not permit them to have home life, then they ought to be trained for the professions.

"I don't believe women should be in cabinet positions," she said. "That would only make the cabinet feminine and weaker and what is needed is strong manly forcefulness in positions such as the cabinet posts."

Woman is Balancing Spirit. "However, in internal politics, it is different. There, woman acts a balancing spirit, and takes a fine, wholesome interest in welfare work. Women's inclinations in politics are likely to be more positive than men's, for women are generally either entirely conservative or entirely radical."

"As for woman's part in labor, I will say that I believe womanhood should be brought back to its natural destiny of motherhood and education of children. It is extremely unfortunate that women have become more and more the competitors of men in the labor market, for labor amongst women is the enemy of family life. It is impossible to be a workingwoman and a mother at the same time."

More Men Should Marry. "In my view, industrial conditions ought to be so readjusted that men will have better opportunities for marrying and for supporting families. Then it will be possible for more women to enter their natural sphere of family life. As for women unable to marry, more opportunities should be opened for their education for professional lines."

Frau von Gierke, as a conservative, does not believe in "equalizing everything," as she put it. She believes that the German educational system is adequate, but holds that the "Kultur" that comes of family life and training ought to be developed.
