

Father's Day

By Winifred Black

Well, well, well! Father's going to have a day—just think of it! Dear old dad, with a day all to himself, a carnation in his buttonhole or maybe a little bunch of lilies of the valley—something that he likes for breakfast, a good dinner with his favorite dessert, and everybody in the family telling that, after all, he isn't so bad as he might be.

I wonder how "Dad" is going to take it.

He always pretends that he hates a fuss and doesn't like a scene, and can't bear any display of sentiment, and yet I always notice that when father steps out of the straight and narrow path and begins buying diamond, horseshoes or grand pianos and motor cars, or tickets to the movies and a pair of near-silky stockings for some preposterous charmer and the thing gets into the newspaper, it always turns out that the charmer has written letters and called up on the 'phone, and whispered and chattered and moaned—about nothing in the world but sentiment.

What's it all about anyhow, this working and scheming and sweating and slaving that father does day in and day out from year's end to year's end? Whenever you see a man working himself into nervous prostration, 10 chances to one he's doing it for some woman and usually there's a family of children somewhere at home depending on father's wits and father's courage, and father's brains and father's endurance, and father's sacrifice—and nine times out of 10 the wife and the children take everything he gives and does and struggles to do as a matter of course.

Go to any sanatorium in America and you will find that nine out of 10 the women inmates are single, and nine out of 10 of the men inmates are married.

Expecting Too Much.

Women break down because they have no one to love, and men break down because too many people demand too much of them.

I'm getting awfully tired here in America of seeing an 'indolent woman and a selfish girl and two or three conceited boys living on father, and treating him as if he were nothing in the world but a living check-book.

We American women have the best husbands and the best fathers and the best sons in the world, and we aren't the best wives nor the best mothers nor the best daughters in the world. There's no use talking, we're not.

We expect things from our men as a matter of course that the average European woman would never dream even of hoping to get.

Father's day? Let's celebrate it from coast to coast. Let's pretend for just once that we half appreciate the best father and the best husband and the best son in the world, as he gets the check off on the right mail.

Why should we worry about him, his only father. He's queer and old-fashioned, and doesn't do the latest dance steps—not with us anyhow—and he won't read the latest books and he's even bored at the theater—says he's tired—and he acts like a martyr when we make him dress up in the evening. And he always wants steak for dinner, or something plain and stupid like that when there's a whole card full of "a la carte" to choose from.

Some of His Problems.

And the way he goes on about the new dresses! Why, you'd think he wanted us all to dress in blouses and be done with it! And on the first of the month when the bill comes in!

Do you know what I'd do if I were a man and had a family like that. I'd just get an attack of this new disease that's something like shell-shock, and I'd wander away somewhere, oh, quite a long ways away, and I'd let Sister Susie pay for her own dancing frocks, and Brother Billy buy his own motorboat and Aunt Sarah invite her own friends to spend the summer and pay the butcher's bill while they're staying just for a change.

I believe I'd find a different atmosphere when I got back.

Father's day? Let's celebrate it from coast to coast. Let's pretend for just once that we half appreciate the best father and the best husband and the best son in the world, as he gets the check off on the right mail.

Hold BIRTHDAY PARTY.

At a meeting and birthday party held Friday evening by the South Bend review, No. 4, L. O. T. M., Mrs. Frances Moore drew the birthday gift. Following the meeting an auction sale, fishing pond and a peanut sale drew a neat sum. The lodge furnished luncheon for the members and guests in the dining room.

ASK "SQUARE DEAL"

An appeal to the American spirit calling for a "square deal" and requesting that no discrimination be made on account of color is embodied in a set of resolutions adopted by the Chain Lakes association at the close of Friday's session held at the Mt. Zion Baptist church.

TO CONTINUE SALE OF ARMY FOOD AS LONG AS ALLOTMENT HOLDS OUT

Sale of surplus army food through the parcel post system which began last Monday will continue until the allotment shall be disposed of. Information to this effect was received Friday evening from James L. Blakeslee, assistant postmaster general. The original plan called for the close of sales on Wednesday, but at the expiration of that time it was ascertained that most of the postmasters still have a surplus of some foods.

A variety of staple articles are still available at prices ranging far below present retail quotations at the local postoffice. Orders will be taken for the supply which has not yet been exhausted, the supply including bacon, corn beef, roast beef, corn beef hash, baked beans, corn, black pepper and green peas.

A requisition for the ordered goods has been made by the local post office authorities, but no information was received as to when the goods will reach South Bend for distribution among the purchasers.

Your Opportunity in Greater South Bend Today

Population 1919, —78,144. 1920 —100,000

RICHLAND

Will be Open For Sale to the Public, Tomorrow, August 24, 1919

The opening sale of the finest investment and home site property ever placed on the market IN South Bend. RICHLAND lies in the direct path of South Bend's industrial and residential expansion. It is the one logical spot that the working man will be able to have his home so as to be near his work. It adjoins South Bend's new manufacturing and factory district.

Facts You Should Know About South Bend and Richland

Demand for these lots in the next two years

This is the opportunity of a life time. South Bend is having an increase of 50,000 in the next few years. Over 8,000 workers of various trades and their families will be brought to this city within the next five months. If all the available property in this city were to be subdivided and built on, 32 per cent of South Bend's increase of 50,000 or 16,000 people will live outside of the present city limits. Only recently a $10,000,000 rubber corporation was formed and it is their intention to erect a large plant at once. This will attract thousands of others. Many small factories and manufacturers are contemplating moving their business here in the very near future. Taking all this into consideration, to state that there will be an increase in population of 50,000 is not an exaggeration.

Great Increase in Value

All property bought at this time and at these prices will advance in value over 100 per cent. The buyers of property in this subdivision will be able to make from 100 to 300 per cent on the money they have invested when this increase in population takes place.

A Home Community

Working men will desire to live as close to their work as is possible. The only available space that is left for these men to live where they desire, is in the southwest part of the city. This will be the section where the greatest demand for home sites will be. RICHLAND is located in that part of the city. It is an ideal home community for the working man.

The lots are all large and a man may have his choice of any size lot he desires. The lots all front on 60 foot streets with 14 foot alley in the rear.

Title to Property

The Schellinger Home Building Co. are the owners of Richland and can give clear title by warranty to purchasers of lots in Richland.

Improvements

Streets are being graded and sidewalks laid. A $5,000 sewer assessment has been paid on the property.

Building Activity

$20,000 worth of houses up and more going up. Our plans are laid to build 475 homes in Richland. We will build a home for every purchaser of a lot in RICHLAND.

Location

Richland is bounded by Indiana, Ewing, Dundee and Kaley. Calvert street runs through the center of the property.

Size of Lots

The lots are 40x128, 45x128, 63x128 and blocks of three lots, 120x128.

Prices and Terms

40 foot lots—$245 and up.

Corner lots, 48x128—$280 and up.

63x128—$375 and up..

A small payment of two to five dollars will reserve a lot. 10 per cent down when sale is closed and 2 per cent a month.

How to Reach Richland

Take the Chapin Street car to end of line where our automobiles with banners on will be stationed to convey you to the property, free of charge.

To walk, go out Sample to Olive, south on Olive to Calvert and property.
