SAYS CHURCH HAS WIDE-OPEN DOORS

Dr. E. B. Parker Preaches on Patient, Ministrant Career of Luke.

Dr. E. B. Parker, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, preached a sermon from Luke 19:10 at the morning service Sunday. In the course of his remarks he said: "Patiently and with scrupulous care through the long years of ministrant life, Luke gathered the material for his story of Jesus. This book was not written in a season but was the product of a life's labors. The author was a true historian. He saw that through the force of circumstance the ministry of Jesus was largely to the Jews, but more than any other man of his time he saw the wider significance. Jesus spent His days in Palestine but His sympathies and interests were as wide as the circle of human needs. He came to reveal a father's warm welcome for every prodigal who turns his face home. The central message of Luke's gospel was that no one is excluded from the gracious invitation to citizenship in the kingdom of God. Nowhere is this set forth more beautifully than in the story of Zacchaeus. So apt an illustration is this story of the method by which Jesus may be found and of the changes wrought in the human heart by that discovery that we have overlooked its real significance in much of our preaching.

Effect of Conversion. "Primarily, Luke's purpose in selecting this incident for record was not to exhibit the effect conversion would produce in a man's life, or to show that a man dead in earnest to find Jesus will if necessary, throw conventions to the wind, but was to show how when Jesus came to the city of Jericho the man who appeared to be the least likely to profit by the visit became His penitent host and that salvation came to his house. It is meant to save us from despairing of the salvation of any man however unpromising his case may be.

"If a man like Zacchaeus could be saved, then should the light of a new hope dawn on the remotest circle of human life. The church needs a new vision of the adequacy of the ancient faith and daring. No man in Jericho would have thought in putting Zacchaeus on his prayer list, and there are similar men in Mishawaka to whom Christ would come with as radiant results if sharing the Master's purpose to seek and save the lost we quit fishing in restricted circles and pushed out on the wider sea of human life in our evangelistic efforts."

AT THE LINCOLN TODAY. In "Spotlight Sadie" playing at the Lincoln theater today, winsome Mae Marsh has the role of a daughter of Erin who becomes a chorus queen to win the man she loves. There is a villain in the play; a sly old fox who thinks chorus girls are toys for men. He bargains and trades—well, see Mae Marsh as the saintly show girl and learn the truth. It's a Golden picture.

NEW RESERVOIR PLAN DISCUSSED

Board of Works Takes Up Matter—Orders Phone Poles Off Street.

The installation of a 1,000,000 gallon reservoir and a tank and stand were discussed at the meeting of the board of public works Monday morning. The tank, if installed, would necessitate a cost of over $50,000. The purpose of the reservoir would be to take care of the surplus flow of water during the hours that very little water is used, and would help feed the mains at time of a fire or when an increased flow and high pressure would be necessary without injuring the engines and pumps with the great strain.

The Central Union Telephone Co. was ordered to remove its telephone poles from the roadway on W. Third st.

The contract for city electric lamps for 1920 was awarded to Karl Perkins.

A. R. Klein was named to receive bids on a boiler for the north side fire station and to see to the installing.

It was decided to re-advertise for bids for the placing of a side walk on E. Sixth st.
