

JONES PLAYS HYPOCRISY OF CHURCH PEOPLE

Denounces Professional Men Who Attend Services for Business Gains.

The man with ill-gotten gains who doesn't make restitution is poorer in happiness than the beggar in this world and is eternally damned in the next, he declared. "No man can look into the face of Jesus and keep a dollar that belongs to somebody else. I haven't got much but I have God, the richest partner in this universe. When you are clean and on the square with God you are always happy."

Afternoon Services. The second sermon of a series on "The Holy Spirit" was delivered before a good-sized audience Thursday afternoon. Continuous rain for the past few days had not decreased the size of the afternoon audience. He portrayed the Holy Spirit as God's seal, His mark of ownership on every Christian, declaring that the Holy Spirit entered into the heart of every Christian. Quoting principally from Corinthians, he substantiated his declarations with "Know ye that you are the temple of God and that the spirit of God dwelleth in you." "Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost?" "Know ye not that you are the temple of God?" "Know ye not that you are the temple of God?"

He also emphasized the equality with which which rich and poor, the cultured and the illiterate, appear in the eyes of God. "Consecrated scholarship is a wonderful thing, but you don't need scholarship to understand the word of God; it is for all."

"When a man tells me that an infidel knows more of the Bible than anyone in the town, I am talking absurdity. It is impossible to know the word of God and hold aloof from it. It is in the spirit as much as in the written word and a man unless he knows God, unless the spirit of God is in him, can know nothing of God's word."

JONES' EPIGRAMS.

It is better to be moral than immoral but morality alone is not enough to gain the grace of God, you must have Christianity. Jesus doesn't keep you from the baseness of life alone but he imparts a divine goodness which is the soul of salvation.

God especially likes to get hold of a ring leader. There are one dozen men in South Bend today that if they would come to God today would put this city on its knees before his altar.

It isn't money but the love of money that is the root of all evil.

The trouble with men this day is that we've been measuring too many men by their money. He can't trust God and have character that better than all the gold on God's earth.

I've seen lots of folks who are cheaters, but I can't see the color of their surroundings. I like a man who is just as clean in Chicago as he is when he is sitting by the fire at home with his wife and babies.

The best cure for stinginess is to stamp on it and choke it to death. If you don't mind giving the thing isn't hurting you.

I haven't got much money but I've got God, the richest partner in universe.

No man can look into the face of Jesus Christ and keep a dollar that belongs to someone else.

ELEVATOR MEN OF NEW YORK STRIKE

Demand an Eight Hour Day and Increase in Wages.

NEW YORK, April 16.—There's a-puff! puff!—elevator strike in—when—New York today.

Tens of thousands of workers who daily commute between—puff!—the earth and top floors of the skyscrapers on Lower Broadway were thrown back several eons in civilization by the walkout of scores of elevator operators and scaled the heights to their eyles in the mountains of steel and granite to an attitude that no self-respecting cliff-dweller ever attempted.

Operators' Demand. Operators' demand an eight hour day and wage increase of from $5 to $10 a week. Union leaders said 17,000 would quit work.

Delivery of mail was delayed in some buildings. Postmen sat on their packs in building lobbies waiting for a chance to squeeze into the few crowded elevators that were running.

A reporter thought it would be funny to swipe a ride on one of the few elevators operating in the City Investing company building and—puff! puff!—from a vantage point on the 17th floor the newly created mountaineers labor by me rode up all right, but—bosh!—he walked down.

All Operators Out. The City Investing building is 34 stories high and has 23 elevators. All of the operators walked out, leaving 10,000 persons standing in the lower corridor—and an overflow meeting on Broadway.

Now, New York is used to walking horizontally with a street car, elevated, subway and taxi strikes, but walking straight up was a new experience.

Hundreds stormed the narrow, winding stairway. In the City Investing building, high in spirits and light of foot, their spirits sank in inverse ratio to the floors they passed and their feet began to drag—and at last they reached the top.

The peculiar phase of the whole thing, though, was that nobody got so far as could be observed, everybody took it as a dizzy experience. In the City Investing building office employees who had had some experience as elevator chauffeurs before they were graduated to the typewriter, started to run the cages—at least until all the employees on their floor had reached their offices.

The service was inadequate, however, and many workers refused to wait their turn and walked away. Dizzy Experience.

The reporter rode up with a volunteer waiter. It was a dizzy experience. A trick aviator could learn a few stunts from that young man.

At the 17th floor a parade was passing along upward. The majority of the climbers were girls. All were as tired as though they had walked 17 miles rather than 17 floors. It was Friday, and many of the hardy ones went to the 33rd and 34th floors.

The few elevators running would take no passengers upward. What take no passengers upward. What take no passengers upward. What take no passengers upward.

Similar conditions existed in the Equitable building, the Metropolitan Life, the Flatiron, Trinity and United States Realty buildings.

The longest vertical railroad in the world, in the Woolworth building, 23 stories or more high, was not affected by the strike.

Women Stick. Today's walkout apparently demonstrated that men are better strikers than women, as in every building where women elevator operators were employed they stuck to their posts. There was no interruption of service in the Singer building, 48 stories high, where 22 girls are employed in the Telephone and Telegraph building, where there are 20 girls elevator operators, or in the Hudson terminal building where there are 18 girls.

It was reported that several employees, including girls in the Equitable Life building walked as high as the 40th floor. The reporter was too tired to confirm this.

NATION WIDE RAIL STRIKE BREAKS (CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE.)

Local No. 124, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen numbering 300 employees of the Pennsylvania and Ohio railroads, met in a hall and voted to return to work.

A few hours earlier, 500 members of local 224, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, decided on Pennsylvania men, decided on similar action at a meeting in another hall.

Western Maryland strikers also met and voted unanimously to return to work.
