Coffield
Electric Washer—1920 Model

What to Look for in an Electric Washer

IF YOU make a test of a washer's ability to (1) wash cleanly—(2) wash quickly—(3) wash easily, you will not go wrong in making your selection of a machine. We suggest that this test be made in your own home with your own washing. In this way you will find if the machine in question is best adapted to your needs.

Your test should not be called complete until you try the Coffield Electric Washer—for the Coffield is the standard by which the quality of other machines is measured. You'll find the Coffield superior in the three fundamental washer requirements. For instance—

Clean Washing

Clothes put into the Coffield tub come out spotlessly clean; heavy blankets are washed as effectively as dainty things. The pyramid principle of tub construction—the best principle known—assures this. The course of the water is changed sixty times a minute—sixty times every minute thick suds are flushed through the "pores" of the fabrics. It is impossible for any dirt to remain in clothes that are washed the Coffield way.

Quick Washing

The motor of the Coffield is both powerful and dependable. It operates the tub with amazing speed and consequently it takes but five or eight minutes to thoroughly clean a tub full of clothes. The motor will operate the wringer at the same time it turns the tub—with power to spare. This speed does not vibrate the machine, nor make it creep. Nor will any parts wear loose, for the frame is cast in one piece. And the bearings—because they are oilless—never need attention.

Easy Washing

It is in this particular respect that no other machine approaches the Coffield. Long years of experience in building good washers have taught the manufacturers how to make a machine wash clothes with the greatest convenience. You must see the self cleaning tub, and the exclusive wringer features to fully appreciate the Coffield's superiority in washing easily. With the Coffield there is no lifting of 50-pound cylinders. The Coffield doesn't need cylinders to wash cleanly.

Call us up—Main 107—for a free demonstration in your home. No expense—no obligation. If you are in a hurry for your machine it might be better for you to come in and personally arrange for a demonstration, as we are having difficulty in supplying the tremendous demand for Coffields.
