

BARNHART FORCES HEPLER INTO OPEN ON LIQUOR ISSUE

Letters Are Made Public by Candidate as Seeming Bid for Wet Support.

You voted in the legislature against the abolition of the saloons, against national prohibition, and were one of the very few who voted against the ratification of the women's suffrage amendment. I cannot tell them for I do not know and hope you will write and tell how you voted and why. I am also informed that Tom Hoban and Fred Henoch, the saloon element leaders in this district are your leading sponsors in your race and if you cannot effectually stop this sort of talk you will have serious opposition in our own party if you are nominated. I am quite convinced that the day of the lawless saloon is behind us forever and the man who runs on a saloon platform or who has saloon principles in his political makeup will be a discredited candidate for himself and his party.

"Please write me and if these charges against your record are untrue I will gladly try to help put you right."

HENRY A. BARNHART.
Hepler Boasts Wetness.

"Hon. Henry A. Barnhart,
"Rochester, Indiana."

My Dear Mr. Barnhart:
Your letter of March 26th, received, and I appreciate the interest that you are taking in my campaign.

"In regard to the rumor which you mention, concerning those who are supposed to be furthering my interests, you have known me well enough and long enough to know that I have never hesitated to tell the truth, and to follow the line of action that I believe to be right, and to give the reasons for my action."

"The record will show that I voted for the ratification of the women's suffrage amendment, as I believe and I have always believed that a woman should have privilege of helping determine the nature of the prohibition law, and of voting for the men or women to be selected to enforce and carry out those laws."

"I did vote against the ratification of the prohibition amendment and I am frank to say that if I had to vote on this proposition again in the legislature of Indiana, I would again vote against the ratification of the prohibition amendment."

"I have felt and I still feel that a matter so vitally affecting the privileges and liberties of an individual should be decided by the people, and decided by the people, I did not feel that the legislature of the state of Indiana should take any action which would affect the life of so many thousands of citizens of the state of Indiana, without giving those citizens the right to say for themselves whether they wanted prohibition or not. Particularly did I feel that the large number of citizens who were fighting for the liberty of all nations in Europe should not be deprived of their right to express their opinion at the ballot box on this great question, and I believe, furthermore, that there was no reason why this matter could not have been properly decided by the people, either in favor of prohibition or against it, the agitation which is now going across this country from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the Gulf of Mexico to the Gulf of California, concerning the merits or demerits of national prohibition would be forever set at rest, and one subject of agitation which is a turmoil of uncertainty and dissatisfaction would have been forever and finally set at rest."

"I have been a resident of the state of Indiana for 42 years; have always been a democrat. Began active life as a carpenter; was a carpenter and contractor for 20 years; in the last 10 years, I have been for the past 12 years a practical farmer. I was the first secretary of the St. Joseph County Scientific Agricultural Society, the farmers' organization that secured the first county agent for the county; secretary and twice president of the Interstate Fair association; a member of the committee on mapping the roads of St. Joseph county; now active head of the lower house of the Indiana general assembly; and, at present, state senator for St. Joseph county, and also member of the state board of agriculture."

"I can not help but feel that it would be a mistake for a man, who has been a resident of this district to nominate Mr. Smith of Laporte, for I believe Mr. Smith, coming as he does from the same county that Mr. Hepler is a resident of, will not add to his strength. He is a member of the same profession as Mr. Hepler and I believe that the people of this congressional district prefer to see a business man, a man who is in touch with, and knows intimately the condition and feeling of the laboring people, and in particular the farming community, as a candidate for congress, rather than a professional man."

"I say this without any intention of disparaging any profession, but that the people of this district would prefer this time to vote for a common farmer and business man."

"Thanking you again for your interest as expressed by your letter, I beg to remain,

GEORGE Y. HEPLER.

SUMMONED TO APPEAR.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—John Lind, former governor of Minnesota, whom President Wilson sent to Mexico as his special emissary in 1912, has been summoned to appear Tuesday before the senate committee investigating Mexican affairs.

DEMOCRATIC ASPIRANT FOR GOVERNOR STATES OUTLOOK IS SPLENDID

John Isenbarger, of North Manchester, democratic candidate for the nomination for governor of Indiana, is in South Bend calling on members of his party in the interests of his candidacy. J. E. Neff, secretary-treasurer of the Union Trust company, is an old Wabash county man and is helping to further Isenbarger's candidacy locally. Isenbarger is one of the hardest working candidates on the democratic list. He has been in practically every county in the state and is receiving spontaneous support on every hand. With Tom Taggart's place on the Indiana ticket assured,

With the coming of two presidential candidates during the present week, some republican leaders are devoting their attention to national and state politics, while there are others who appear to be more interested in the nomination and election of their personal choice of candidates for county offices, with the hope of controlling the affairs of the county after the November elections.

In fact, the contest between the backers of candidates for the republican nomination for places on county ticket is becoming so bitter that some of the men in the opposing camps are not even on speaking terms.

Control Affairs.

For instance, the city hall crowd succeeded in bringing out a sufficient number of candidates for county offices to completely control the affairs of the county if they are successful at the primaries a week from Tuesday, and at the polls next November.

City Atty. Thomas W. Slick, Mayor Carson's present political advisor, has succeeded in bringing out a sufficient number of his henchmen to place the county in the grasp of the city hall if enough votes can be secured at the primaries and election.

Mr. Slick picked his brother, Albert Slick, for the nomination for county treasurer after Franklin M. Boone had been thrown into the discard by the administration, although Mr. Boone was induced to become a candidate by the urging of members of the administration. Mr. Boone was a member of the Carson board of public safety as long as the Carson administration was conducted by that board.

Brotherly Love.

Friends of Mr. Boone are not looking with the most friendly interest upon the action of the city attorney in bringing out his brother against the former safety board member.

There is Floyd O. Jellison, candidate for the republican nomination for prosecuting attorney. Mr. Jellison is city Atty. Slick's henchman, even having an office with Mr. Slick.

George A. Harrop, candidate for the republican nomination for state representative, is another Slick henchman, as is also John W. Harrop, candidate for the republican nomination for county commissioner.

The city hall, republican leaders claim, wants to reach out into county affairs. The administration wants to keep the city hall out of county affairs.

The fact that the administration is taken up wholly with county politics may explain why city hall leaders do not seem to be interested in any of the presidential and gubernatorial candidates who happen to visit the city. City officials failed to attend the meeting here some time ago, and none of the city hall crowd was at the Toner meeting. Mayor Carson failed to show any particular interest in Sen. Harding of Ohio when he was here, and the contender for county political power is not very much interested in the coming of Sen. Johnson and even of Gov. Lowden here this week, although the mayor swore his allegiance to Gov. Lowden at Indianapolis several weeks ago.

"Mr. McCray and his money."

Mr. Isenbarger expects to be nominated from his observations anticipated that Warren T. McCray will be his republican opponent in the election. "That is," he says, "Mr. McCray and his money."

JONES EPIGRAMS.

The test of what you are is what you are when nobody but God sees you.

A Christian has a claim on God that no sinner can have. A sinner can only ask for salvation. A Christian asks for nothing so long as that thing is right in God's sight—God he will usually get it.

The lives of most of our society women is just one long, wretched pursuit of happiness which they will never have until they put God in first place in their lives.

If you are not happy tonight it is because God has not got first place in your heart.

One of these fellows proud of his worldly things traced his family tree for me the other day. I noticed that the further back he went the better the stock got to be.

The world doesn't need a new religion. What it needs is to accept the old time religion of God which it has never done. It needs to accept it in spirit as well as in fact by mouth. The kind of a man I like is the man who keeps the Lord before him in Chicago just as he does when he is attending Sunday school in South Bend.

All Roads End.

"Don't forget that the roads which you follow in this world all come to an end in the world and that the road which the christian follows the road of God, goes on and on forever. That man who travels the road of money will some day write his last check and die, he will reach the end of the road to which the false god money has led him. That girl who has put the love of the world above the love of God may keep on for a time but some day the roses will fade from her cheeks, they will wither and her hair grow gray and another day at road will end. To those who follow the road of God, who walk hand in hand with Jesus through life their path leads on and on through eternity."

If anybody says a way leads on his road through this world let it be the sinner, he has only punishment to look forward to at the end of his journey and not going to drag because I am going to meet someone I have been living to see. There is everlasting pleasure awaiting me at the right hand of God, my father."

100 Respond.

When he invited those who would profess their faith in God to come to the platform at the conclusion of the service more than 100 responded.

Many were young people who had attended the services with Sunday school friends but there were several older persons in the crowd.

It is planned to have those who have been converted at the services thus far to attend the church of their choice next Sunday and take out membership. It is estimated that more than 1,500 have been converted.

The revival campaign entered its third week with $3,000 yet to be raised to meet expenses incurred in erecting the building and advertising the campaign. It was announced that more than $100,000 had been collected at the Sunday services, nearly $1,000 of this amount coming from the men's meeting.

Notre Dame students Monday formed an "I'm for Hiram" club, the purpose of which is to aid the presidential candidacy of Sen. Hiram Ward of California.

Leo Ward of California was elected president, and Albert Scott secretary. The secretary is a son of the "Notre Dame" director in the west and is perhaps the most popular lecturer who talks at Notre Dame. It is his custom to give at lecture yearly at Washington hall.

John Johnson is scheduled to speak here Thursday, and the students have wired asking that he visit Notre Dame while here and make an address.
