

MANY CHANGES IN POSEN NOTED AS POLISH COME IN

Names of Streets are Changed and Principal Buildings Are Altered.

POZNAN, Poland, April 27.—Poznan, which for more than a hundred years under rule was known as Posen, is undergoing many alterations as a result of the outcome of the war and the peace conference, which gave Poznan back to Poland. Just recently, the task of changing the name of every street in town from German to Polish was completed, the task having been worked out by a commission which began its duties soon after Poznan became a city of the new republic.

One of the principal thoroughfares which had been known as Berliner strasse has been renamed the street of "December twenty-seventh," this being what is considered the very last day of the Germans in Poznan. A great square in the center of the city, which since 1793 excepting an eight-year interval after Prussia's defeat by Napoleon (that being the year the Germans came to Poznan) had been called Wilhelm platz, is now known as Liberty Place. And a great statue of Frederick III, which stood for years in Wilhelm platz, long ago disappeared, having been torn down by Polish residents of Poznan during the night of Dec. 27, 1918 when there were riots and much street fighting between German and Polish subjects, the upshot of the demonstrations convincing German officials that it would be useless to endeavor further to continue Poznan in so-called German territory. The German soldiers began withdrawing that night. Gradually since then German residents have been leaving. Many of them were born in Poznan or vicinity.

Within the past 14 months it is estimated that approximately 27,000 Germans have departed from Poznan, most of them being officials who held government positions under the German regime, and their families, and officers of the German army. Poznan city officials estimate that about 37,000 persons have moved to Poznan in that time, the majority of these having come from Congress Poland.

Poznan today is a city of about 170,000 inhabitants and considered by Germany prior to the outbreak of the war as the strongest fortified city on its western frontier. All the old forts, redoubts and batteries built by the Germans still stand.

When the Germans were in control Polish classes in the schools were forbidden. German is spoken so generally in Poznan, however, that even under the white and scarlet flag of the new republic it is taught in a certain number of schools.

HOG CHOLERA NOW UNDER FULL CONTROL

INDIANAPOLIS, April 27.—There was less hog cholera in Indiana during the first three months of this year, than in any other in similar period for several years, according to a report made public by Dr. L. E. Northrup, state veterinarian. Dr. Northrup said the control of the disease was the result of the intensive campaign of eradication carried on during the war period which is being continued by the state livestock sanitary board.

The Factor of Safety

TO the careful investor the appeal of an attractive interest rate is a determining factor only after the unquestioned safety of his principal has been established. A conservative investment must conform to this inflexible standard.

We own every security we offer, and the factor of safety has been established by our own investigation before acquiring it.

We shall welcome an opportunity to explain to you the relation between income and safety, and our policies and methods in determining what we shall buy and offer.

Regarding the Price of Furniture

11 pieces, including Tea Wagon, American Walnut, Queen Anne Style, $375.

Better furniture has been sold during the last year in greater volume than ever before. Good furniture is in demand, and it will always hold the high place that it has gained.

Women pay high prices for wearing apparel that wears but a season. Men pay dollars for cigars that go up in smoke. Furniture lasts for years.

A Dining Room suite such as shown above, that will serve its purpose for years, costs money. Consider that the cost is not the price asked only—it's the price divided by the number of years of service given.

This 11-piece walnut suite is an example of attractive and enduring furniture that is economy to purchase. The buffet is mirrored, 48-inch extension table, serving table, 6 chairs with imperial Spanish leather slip-seats, one an arm chair, china cabinet and serving table at $375, is remarkably low priced considering the quality.
