The most elaborate affair of the social season and the scholastic year was the annual Notre Dame senior ball held Thursday evening at the Oliver hotel. The affair which was in the nature of a dinner dance was the closing event of the Notre Dame social calendar and equalled if not excelled its predecessors in all respects.

Promptly at 7:30 o'clock the grand march headed by Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Benitz, Thomas H. Beaton, president of the senior class, and Miss Elsie Kauter and Edward Moran, president of senior lawyers, and Miss Edna Hartford, entered the Rotary room where dinner was served. Covers were laid for 42 couples at nine tables lighted by individual tapers of blue and gold with colored shades. The places of the ladies were marked by favors of miniature "dove" portrait frames, enlivened with gold monograms, and those of the men by the program. During the dinner, Harry Denny entertained with several violin solos and Walter O'Keefe created much laughter with several original monologues and musical numbers. One worthy of mention being an exceptionally clever sketch named "Semper Fidelis to the Ladies of South Bend." Thomas Beaton, president of the senior class, acted as toastmaster.

The program of fourteen dances was played by "Cope" Harvey's orchestra of Chicago. Streamers of blue and gold were suspended from the chandeliers and a large monogram blazer hung over the fireplace which was banked with ferns and palms and flanked on both sides with large illuminated letters of the class year.

The committees in charge of the arrangements are as follows: Clifford O'Sullivan, D. D. Smith and Paul Schofield, entertainment; Al C. Ryan, John Buckley and V. P. Fagan, program; and James Conner, Norman Barry, Walter J. Douglas and Clem Mulholland, decorations.

A home wedding of exceptional beauty and elegance was that of Miss Grace Estelle Sauer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Sauer, of Woodland, to Stanley P. Kelley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Kelley, of Woodland, which took place Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents. The ceremony was performed beneath a lower of roses and green and spring flowers by Rev. O. A. Sauer, of Michigan City and Rev. R. J. Sauer, of Tracy, Ind., brothers of the bride. As the bride party entered the room, headed by two flower boys, Louis and Enno Sauer, nephews of the bride, and the ring bearer, Dale Kelley, nephew of the groom, Mrs. Harry Laver of Wakarusa, Ind., sister of the groom, softly played the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin, and during the service Miss Helen Lusk, of Laporte, rendered two vocal solos, "O Promise Me," and "I Love You Truly." Miss Olga Sauer played the accompaniment.

The bride wore a gown of white indestructible voile over hand embroidered satin, a full length veil and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and sweet peas. Miss Clara Schumm, of Laporte, Ind., who acted as bridesmaid, wore a frock of blue ruffled organdie and carried an arm bouquet of pink sweet peas. The groom was attended by Walter Sauer, a brother of the bride. A six o'clock dinner was served to 40 guests at a table attractively decorated with spring flowers. Mr. and Mrs. Kelley will be at home at Woodland after May 15. Among the out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Kelley and Mrs. C. J. Kelley of Mishawaka; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Laver of Wakarusa, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. F. Kelley of Napoleon, O.; Rev. and Mrs. O. A. Sauer and son Enno of Michigan City; Rev. and Mrs. R. J. Morris. An attractive coziness was carried out by the means of rugs, floor lamps and groups of large chairs. This was the last meeting of the year.

Tea was served in the drawing room from a service table centered with a silver basket of spring flowers and lighted with white tapers in tall silver holders. Mrs. George Studebaker poured.

Revelations of a Wife

My Heart and My Husband

BY ADELE GARRISON

"Rita Brown!" I repeated the name in amazement, all the laughter at little Mrs. Durkee's absurdities stricken from me.

My friend nodded her head emphatically. "I thought that would make you sit up and take notice!" she said sleepily. "But," she added with the touch of malice which for all her good nature sometimes creeps into her conversation, "you ought to be glad she's got her claws sharpened for Alfred."

I ignored the allusion to the unbusiness which Dicky's acceptance of Rita Brown's studio had caused me, an uneasiness I knew my little friend suspected, although she didn't know of Lillian's arrangement of the girl to me, or of her anxiety that Dicky should not work in Miss Brown's studio.

A Great Reformer.
Lillian had made good her promise to offer Dicky her own studio, an offer which Dicky had promptly and gratefully accepted, though with wide-eyed amazement, for Lillian had always held her studio as inviolate as an English college man does his study. But, indeed, she had not used it at all in the last weeks, having put aside all work but the most pressing in order to watch beside Robert Eustace's sick bed. The work she was compelled to do she wrought at in her own library.

I knew Lillian would share the distinct feeling of relief I experienced at hearing Mrs. Durkee's announcement that her son, Alfred, and Rita Brown were interested in each other. My little neighbor was right. I was glad to know that the girl, who I had seen but once, and whom I instinctively disliked, "had her claws sharpened" for anybody but Dicky.

I did not care, however, to have Mrs. Durkee suspect my relief at the "Let me see," I said, counting on my fingers with no hint that I understood her allusion to my uneasiness concerning Rita Brown. "This is the first, second, third, fourth, fifth—it's no use, I can't count or remember the girls whose names you have brought to me with the firm conviction that they were to be daughters-in-law of yours. What a harem poor Alf would have had if all your doleful predictions had come true. He would either be in Turkey or in state's prison for bigamy."

She flushed consciously.

Alfred Durkee's Request.
"I know," she admitted, though her tone was obstinate, "but it will come some day. And when I think of this Rita Brown getting her clutches on my boy I wish her married any one of the others I used to dread."

"No you don't," I said comfortingly, although in reality I admitted the truth of her words. I could imagine few women more unsuited to Alfred Durkee than Rita Brown. I may misjudge the girl, but I believe the words wifehood, motherhood, mean nothing real or sacred to her, and Alfred Durkee, though apparently as fit as volatile a temperament as Dicky's, yet is a schoolmaster, whose ideal of a wife would be the idealized mother of his children.

I tried to visualize Rita Brown as Alfred's wife, but gave it up with a little shiver at the probable unhappiness of any child who should ever call her by that sacred name, and turn to the flower and fruit stores ever since, and now he wants me to invite that girl and the two Fairfaxes, her chums, down here for a week or two, and see how the country air will be so good for Rita."

"If you can beat that I'd like to have you try!"
