

BRAVE STORM TO PAY GIPP HONOR

Business Suspends as Funeral
Cortege Passes Through City.

Braving the rigors of a blinding snow, 1,500 Notre Dame students marched in silent tribute Wednesday before the body of George Gipp, football sensation of the year, who died Tuesday. The line extended for blocks as the procession moved four abreast through the business district on its way to the New York Central station.

Business stopped as the long escort filed through the streets with all the cheers of previous Notre Dame processions absent. A platoon of police led the procession which was immediately followed by the football team, lined up in signal formation with the position of left half significantly vacant. The Monogram club led the student body and faculty, moving reverently before the hearse carrying the body of the man who had been most intimately linked with the name of Notre Dame in the glorious victories of the fall.

Pals Accompany Body.
Hartley Anderson, Fred Larson and Perry Wilson who have followed Gipp through other journeys in high school and in college, marched on one side of the hearse. On the other, Frank Coughlin, Joseph Brandy and Norman Barry made the first step of their last trip with the boy who had shared with them the trials and glory of three sensational campaigns. These six will accompany the party to Calumet as pall-bearers and will represent Notre Dame in the last act of the life of George Gipp.

Following the hearse came three automobiles carrying the parents and relatives of the dead man. The feelings of priests, students and all of South Bend who witnessed the procession were in spirit with those in the first of these machines, where the mother rode with bowed head.

Bare Heads at Station.
When the first of the escort reached the station, the lines separated and the students bared their heads to the snow as the body of their "Gipper" went on to its appointed end. Here where Notre Dame could do no more for its wonder man the procession waited. As the Chicago train arrived the crowd moved forward toward the east which was being prepared to enter the baggage car. A blanket of flowers on which the "N. D." monogram was mounted the last symbol of the love of the Notre Dame student body, will accompany the body to its final resting place.

Telephone poles, baggage trucks and every point of vantage at the station was utilized as the casket was elevated to the door of the car. As though by an unspoken command a hat came off here and there and in a flash the crowd was hunched. Silently, with almost defiant faces, the students gazed at the departing form of their idol.

Many Attend Mass.
At the mass in Sacred Heart church at Notre Dame which preceded the funeral procession, every seat was taken and crowds lined the doorways. The services were simple, for at no time since the death of Gipp has the school attempted to express the real feelings which attend the strange series of events which shot George Gipp to the pinnacle of football fame and pulled him down in the very moment of his triumph. At the service Father O'Hara, who administered the last sacraments to Gipp at his bedside, described the peculiar value of the dead star in his relations to the school and bade his fellows take comfort from the fact that their schoolmate had enjoyed all the blessings of a happy death, and that the last hours of George Gipp had been deeply religious hours in which he had met death fearlessly with a great faith in a future life.

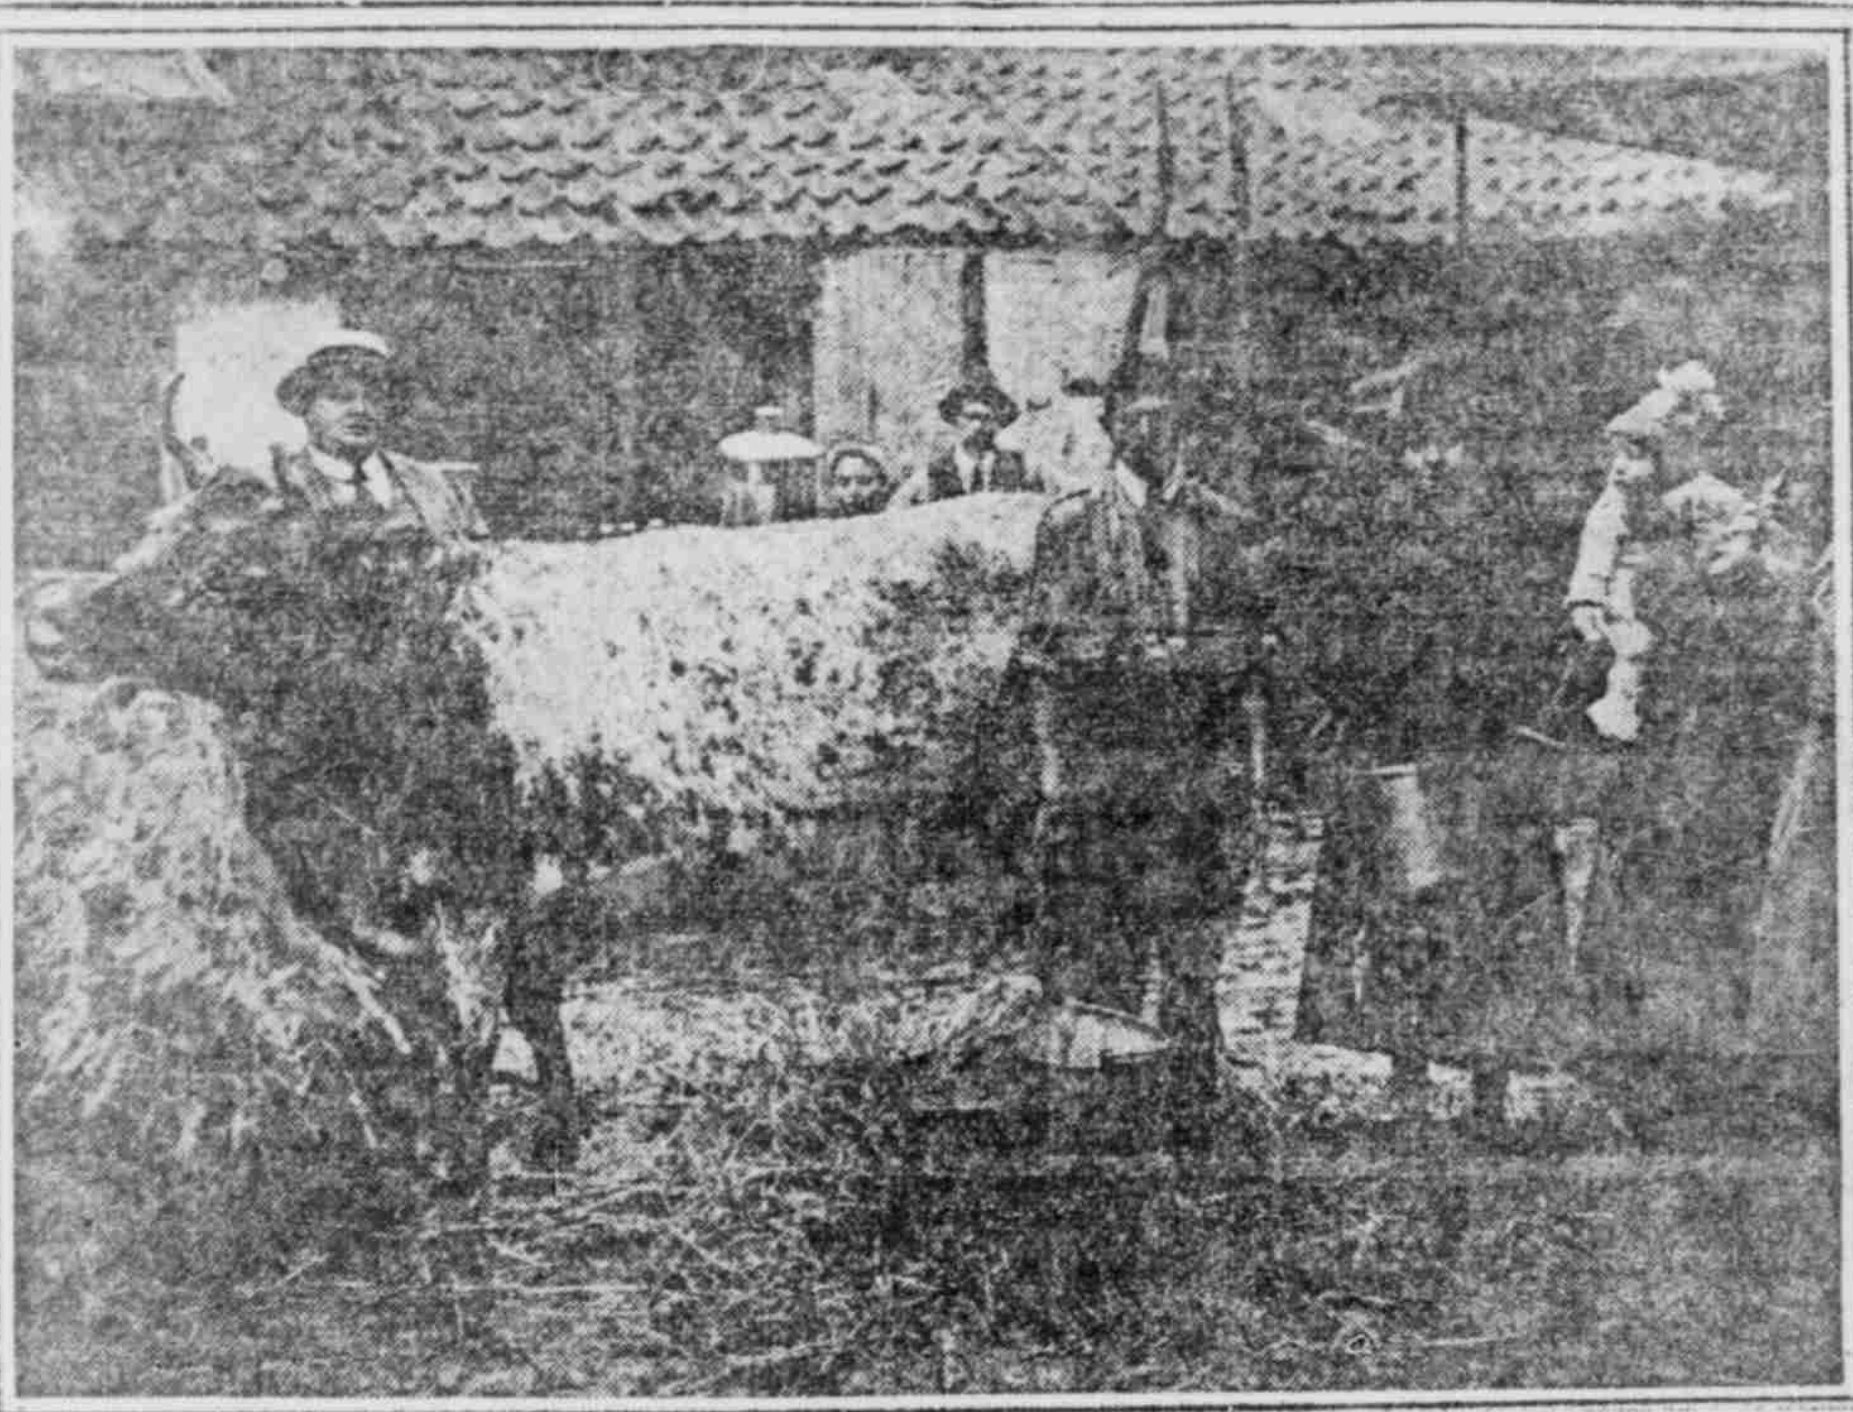

The funeral party left South Bend at 10:38 o'clock in the morning for Chicago. They left Chicago at five o'clock Wednesday evening arriving at Calumet at 8 o'clock Thursday morning where final services will be held.

HELLER MADE HEAD OF MICA CONCERN

Officers Elected at Meeting of New Board of Directors.

The election of a board of directors and officers, a report on the mining properties and an inspection of the plant occupied the time of the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Consolidated Mica Co. of this city Tuesday afternoon.

The meeting was held in the offices of the company in the Farmers' Trust bldg. and was so satisfactory stockholders signified their desire to further their investments in the company. This general satisfaction was the feature of the meeting.

More than 100 stockholders elected the following men to act as directors of the company for the coming year: A. H. Heller, H. R. Garn, Dr. D. B. Catlin, Gordon Lehr, of Bremen, Dr. William Fuller and Floyd Jacoby, both of Plymouth. The directors chose the following officers: A. H. Heller, president; H. R. Garn, treasurer; Gordon Lehr, secretary; Dr. William Fuller, vice-president.

Mica Supply Large.
A committee which has been inspecting the mining properties of the company located at Hettin, Ala., reported that the fields contained such a large amount of mica that they could not possibly be exhausted before a century of constant output. The general report was that the future of the company was exceptionally bright in-as-much as the United States has only produced about 50 percent of the mica used.

Only a small amount of stock is to be placed on sale as the profits of the product will take care of the future demands of the company, was the decision of the stockholders. Following the business session, the stockholders adjourned to the plant on Olive st. for a general inspection.

OLD MASSACHUSETTS HALL.

On December 19 there was a celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of Old Massachusetts Hall at Harvard University. To any person not of Harvard the event was just the same as any other celebration, but to a Harvard man it meant a heap of memories and an occasion for drinking a drop or two of outlawed scotch. The fact is that Old Massachusetts Hall is the oldest building in the United States. It is a quaint old building of brick with steeply sloping roof and more windows than hound has fleas. Of course it isn't very old when compared to a few structures here and there that crowd the cities of Europe and the Orient, but for Uncle Samuel it is the oldest thing he owns. The men of today know it as Professor Baker's "47 Workshop," where special courses for the dispensation of theatrical technique are given, but in the old days everything was taught and discussed there from the dope on logic to the reason why the Goths and Vandals felt it their own private business to mess up the ancient Roman Empire. Previous to 1870 it was also used for a sleeping quarters for students and within its walls were hatched dark and desperate plots that turned many a professor's hair gray before the invention of sure shot hair restorers. When the old hall flourished, Cambridge was merely a village. It even tangles in its memories the eventful days of the Revolutionary war, because it was used as a barracks and there are still left plenty of marks and damaged places to show that the soldiers didn't have much regard for structural scenery. From 1837 to 1901 the Phi Beta Kappa men held their banquets there and those memories are especially painful now that the nation is in a crisis. But Old Massachusetts Hall should hold memories for more than Harvard men. It is worthy to be celebrated by all the U. S. A.
