THE CITY PAYS TO LYNCH CYCLONES AND TORNADOES

Judge Rawley Finds for the Plaintiff in Suit Against the City and Assesses Damages of $300.

PERPETUAL INJUNCTION ISSUED

Judge Rawley last Monday filed his finding in the case of E. B. Lynch against the city of Greencastle for damages for running sewage upon his land from the Walnut Street tiling. Judge Rawley finds that the plaintiff has been damaged in the sum of $300, and assesses that amount against the city. He further issues a perpetual injunction preventing the city from emptying any sinks, cesspools or any contaminated water whatever into the tiling on Walnut Street. In giving his opinion to the court Judge Rawley stated orally that it was his opinion that by allowing sewage to run through the tiling on Walnut Street the city had forfeited its right to use this tile even for surface water. Since the plaintiff had not pressed this part of the complaint, however, the court did not include this drastic order in the injunction.

It will be remembered that on the first day of the present term of the Putnam County Court Judge Rawley filed a special finding of fact in the case. Judge Rawley found that the city had a right to run its surface water through the tile on Walnut Street, since this had been done for thirty years, either on the surface or through tile. He found further that the sewage had been turned into the tile upon this street within the last few years, with the city's knowledge but without its authority. That this sewage had damaged the plaintiff in the suit by destroying the water of a spring and by lowering the rental value of his property on West Washington Street.

Upon this finding of fact the attorneys were to construct their points of law, but by mutual agreement they decided to leave the decision to Judge Rawley without further argument. The Judge filed his decision this morning.

City Attorney Peck states that the case will be appealed. He has fault to find with the ruling of the court and believes that the city is not liable and will accept only the decision of the higher court upon the matter.

Freida Scott, Maud Taylor, Edith Harland and Claude Crawley spent Sunday in Fillmore.

Mr. Hamrick, however, has not yet decided to accept the position as he is already employed and is receiving a good salary.

All Red Men are requested to secure as many rabbits as possible before noon of next Monday. The rabbits should be left at the court house with Mr. Reising or Mr. Cherry, who will attend to the cooking of the rabbit dinner to be served at the Red Men's Hall Monday night.

Two weddings were celebrated last Wednesday at the home of the Rev. Brown just east of town. The happy couples were Arnold Meade of Indianapolis and Ona J. Proctor of Greencastle; James W. Wright of Roachdale and Bessie Blaydes of the same place. Rev. Brown officiated at both weddings.

This great tonic and alternative medicine invigorates the system, purifies the blood and is especially helpful in all forms of female weakness. 50c at the Owl drug store.

Mr. Edgewater, one of the company controlling the Lehigh Stone quarries at Kankakee, was here Monday looking for a stone quarry. His company contemplates buying another quarry soon and Mr. Edgewater is looking after a location. He has seen several quarries near Greencastle and may purchase one of them. Greencastle is sure getting to be the "stone quarry" town.

Definition of the Two Terms That Will be of Interest to All Our Readers.

The explanation given in the Star-Democrat as to what constitutes a cyclone and what a tornado would hardly be accepted by meteorologists. Quoting from Waldo's Meteorology,

"The term cyclone is applied by meteorologists to all kinds of atmospheric disturbances in which the air pressure decreases, and there is a wind movement, inward toward the center. Cyclones of the temperate and colder zones are of great extent, usually covering a region at least several hundred miles, but sometimes a couple of thousand miles in diameter. Cyclones are frequently accompanied by secondary cyclones of limited extent, but intense energy, manifested by strong winds. These are called tornadoes." Again, "A tornado is a progressive, limited, local, violent whirlwind, characterized by a funnel-like cloud which hangs suspended from an intensely black mass of storm clouds." All such local storms, as that yesterday near Fillmore, are properly tornadoes.

They are popularly called cyclones, but this term strictly applies only to the great rotary motion of the atmosphere always taking place around areas of low barometric pressure and is not necessarily destructive in character. In fact, the cyclone is the ordinary distributing agent for our many sorts of weather, fair and foul. These great circulating areas move across the country from the west, with an average rate of thirty miles an hour, and they carry with them their burden of clouds and rain, fair skies and sunny weather. It is by studying their movements that the Weather Man endeavors to tell what a day may bring forth.

The process of the formation of cyclones is not yet understood to a certainty, and much investigation will still be required before the story of the making of a tornado can be fully told. "The wild bloweth where it listeth" is as true today as ever and the wisest can only tell in part "whence it cometh and whether it goeth."

The Herald stands corrected. The definition given yesterday was that of magazine articles and pseudo scientific writers.
