GOLF IS POPULAR IN FRANCE.

Many Prominent Frenchmen Have Become Devoted to the Game.

The golf season has just ended with the games of the Dinard Club. The golf week at Dinard has nothing equivalent to it in the sporting world, except the races at Trouville. From Dinard, from St. Malo, from St. Servan, from Parame, from St. Lunaire, from Paris, and even from England, the Englishmen arrive to play or to be present at this brilliant autumn meeting. Not only do the English and American colonies of the Cote d'Emeraude furnish their contingent of fervent golf players, but also a number of families from across the water remain on the Malouin shore to be present at this new game. French sportsmen belonging to the region or ruralizing there make it a duty to follow the phases of the game, and even to take part in it.

For instance, last year Count Joseph Rochald won the Dinard challenge cup. Golf (pronounced "gulf" or "geulf") is a very old English game, which is somewhat like our ancient "soule." It made its first appearance in France at Dinard in 1890. Since then it has become the great fashionable game, and it is even expected that it will completely dethrone tennis, cricket, polo and other games in vogue. There are already four golf links established in France: At Pau, at Biarritz, at Cannes, where the Grand Duke Michael introduced it, and finally at Dinard. The golf links at Dinard are incontestably the best in France, according to the English professionals. Moreover, the thing which renders them unique in their kind, from the point of view of nature, is the great number of incomparable views which surround them and their position on the sea coast, in the midst of unequalled scenery.

A Strange Language.

Professor Richard Garner's son, who resides in Baltimore, relates an amusing mistake made by Professor Mason, of the Smithsonian institution, in connection with Professor Garner's earlier studies of the language of animals. Data concerning his researches had been promised by Professor Garner to Professor Mason and were sent on a phonograph cylinder. When Professor Mason put the cylinder in his own machine he heard distinct vowel and consonant sounds, but no intelligible words. Thinking the sounds were the much-taught-of monkey language, Professor Mason was much surprised at the result, and called a number of other professors to hear and be mystified. The next day there was a crowd around the phonograph to hear the queer sounds, but when the machine was started there issued from the ear pieces the words of a letter dictated at Roanoke, Va., by Professor Garner. The explanation of the mysterious sounds was found in the fact that when first used the cylinder was placed in the machine in such a way that the words were heard backward.

St. Nicholas' White Horse.

In Holland St. Nicholas is a reality, but he comes driving a white horse and not reindeer. The children are taught to be thoughtful for the welfare of the white steed, and on Christmas eve each pair of little shoes is carefully cleaned and being filled with oats and hay are placed on the hearth. The hay and oats are for the good saint's white horse. In the morning the hay and oats are gone and in their place are found toys and sweetmeats for the good children and rods for the bad ones.—Exchange.
