Bert's host of friends as one are hoping for his recovery.

Marriage and Divorce.

One of the greatest dangers which menace the home to-day are the woefully lax views of the solemnity and importance of marriage vows, and the circumstances leading up to the consummation of marriage ceremonies. These lax views, at the outset, endanger the happiness of all the future. The easy means of obtaining divorces at the present time is responsible in a measure for the light manner in which matrimony is looked upon. The increase of divorces to the number of marriages is assuming alarming proportions. In this matter the Roman church takes a stated ground which is worthy of emulation.—Rev. R. F. Holway, Worcester, Mass.

Sales of Cooked Food.

Sales of cooked food have this winter been found profitable for providing money for charitable purposes. There seems to be a notion that food costs nothing, at least many persons who would be unwilling to contribute a dollar, or even 50 cents, will often cheerfully send a cake, a baked chicken or a salad to such a sale. It has been found that Friday and Saturday afternoons are best days for these sales. Cakes are sold in halves, or even quarters. Dainties for Sunday night tea find a ready sale. In some places the recipe for some novel and delicious dish is sold with the food.
