

"What is now to be regarded as the judgment of the American people on this subject, I have no accurate means of determining, but by appealing to their more immediate representatives. The late contest, which terminated in the election of General Harrison to the Presidency, was decided in principles well known and openly declared; and, while the Sub-Treasury received in the result the most decided condemnation, yet no other scheme of finance seemed to have been concurred in. To you, then, who have come more directly from the bosom of our common constituents, I submit the entire question, as best qualified to give a full exposition of their wishes and opinions. I shall be ready to concur with you in the adoption of such system as you may propose, reserving to myself the ultimate power of rejecting any measure which may in my view of it conflict with the Constitution or otherwise jeopard the prosperity of the country; a power which I could not part with even if I would, but which I will not believe any act of yours will call into requisition."

At the moment of going to press this morning, by the politeness of a traveller we were favored with a slip from the office of the Cleveland Advertiser, containing the following horrid catastrophe.

Awful Calamity.

THE STEAM BOAT ERIE BURNT.

150 LIVES LOST.

By the Steamboat Com. Perry, just arrived from Buffalo, we are startled with the appalling intelligence that the Steamboat Erie was entirely destroyed by fire on the afternoon of Monday last.

So far as we can learn from the floating rumors brought by the Ferry, the Erie started from Buffalo with over two HUNDRED passengers only TWENTYNINE of whom escaped.

The conflagration took place off Silver Creek, about twenty-five miles this side of Buffalo. It is somewhat co-incident that the Steamboat Washington was burned two years ago, near the same spot.

The fire was discovered by the De Witt Clinton, then about 18 miles west of the Erie.

She was immediately put for the spot and arrived in time to rescue twenty-seven of the survivors.—Two others were picked up by a small boat from Dunkirk, and these comprise the whole list of saved. The Clinton towed the wreck to within three miles of the shore, when the line parted, and it sunk.

When the Clinton reached the spot, the Erie was burned to the water's edge, the few survivors clinging to the flaming fragments of the wreck, or floating on such stony article, as accident furnished.

The fire appeared to originate from the bursting of a demijohn of spirits of turpentine, of which, 2 or 3 were placed by some painters who had been at work on board, near the fire.

A more disastrous spectacle could not have been presented. Perishing hundreds awaited a fearful death—for what fate is more dreadful than such as is met in the midst of burning timbers and stifling smoke!—alone in their misery on the waters; with the land, which they would have bartered worlds to gain, but five or six miles away; with none to hear the wild cry for succor or to speak consolation to the despairing spirit. Fearful—most fearful—was their perilous condition, and it will be long before either the event or its consequences are forgotten.

SUB-TREASURY REPEALED.

The amendments adopted by the House to the bill repealing the Sub-Treasury were yesterday concurred in by the Senate, and the bill therefore only wants the signature of the President to become a law. The bill repeals the Sub-Treasury act, excepting that part of it which provides for the punishment of defaulters; it repeals also the Deposit act of 1836 (the State Bank Deposit system) excepting the 13th and 14th sections, and also repeals a law of 1836 limiting the receivability of bank notes to those of a denomination above $20. The Senate employed the residue of the day in discussing and amending the Land Bill.

The Bankrupt Law occupied the deliberations of the House.

If the Repeal Bill becomes a law, and the Bank Bill does not, the Treasury will be thrown upon the law of 1789.

NOTICE.

THE undersigned having been appointed by the President of the United States Commissioners, in pursuance of the treaty made with the Miami tribe of Indians on the 29th day of November, A. D. 1840, to investigate claims against the Miami Indians as provided in said treaty, we hereby give notice to the claimants, and parties interested, that we will attend at or near the Forks of the Wabash on the first of September next, for the purpose of receiving and examining such claims as are properly voiced and presented.

The investigation will commence on the first day of September. The Commissioners, however, will attend four or five days previous thereto for the purpose of receiving accounts and claims.

All claims must be handed in to the Commissioners within one week after the session commences. They will not be received afterwards without a sufficient excuse for the delay.

In cases of judgments rendered against any of the Indians, or of notes or obligations purporting to be given or signed by them, proof must be made of the original consideration of each claim, and of the circumstances under which the judgments were rendered or the obligations signed.

No such judgments, notes or obligations will be regarded as evidences of debts unless the indebtedness be clearly shown.

If the original book or entries cannot be produced, their loss or destruction must be proved.

Each claimant in his account must specify the place of his residence or of trade.

All accounts, whether against the nation, a band, or an individual Indian, must be stated separately.

The claimant, in all instances, will be required to swear to the truth of his claim; and his affidavit must testify that the articles charged have been sold in good faith to the Indian or band of Indians, and have not been repurchased by the original vendor, or his clerk, or agent, or any one else entrusted by or acting for him, and then resold to the original Indian purchaser or purchasers—that the debt has been contracted at the date or dates it bears—that the goods or other articles have been sold to the Indians to supply their wants, real or supposed; and that not the same might be received in payment for a horse or other article at an enormous price. And if the claim be in the form of judgments, notes, or obligations, the oath must testify that they were rendered or given for the sums actually owing, and not extorted from the Indians for more than was really due under duress, by arrest or civil process, or any other species of duress, circumvention or deception.

In case the claimant does not attend himself, an affidavit to the effect described in the foregoing paragraphs, sworn to before some proper officer and sufficiently authenticated, must accompany the statement of his claim.

Accounts or claims bearing date between the 6th of November, A. D. 1838, and the 28th of November, A. D. 1840, and those bearing date between the last mentioned date and the 25th of February, A. D. 1841, must be stated separately. Aug 18 3w
