A six-day open season on cock pheasants in Indiana this fall, Nov. 10 to 15 inclusive, adding a day to the open season this year, was announced today by a spokesman for the Department of Conservation, following a state-wide investigation into the number of pheasants and results of the 1938 hunting season.

Under the terms of the order issued by the Division of Fish and Game under provisions of a 1937 act of the General Assembly, a daily bag limit of two cock birds and a possession limit of four cock birds has been established. There is no open season on hen pheasants.

During the last fiscal year, the Division of Fish and Game with the cooperation of the local conservation clubs, propagated and liberated more than 42,000 pheasants in Indiana.

Emergencies do not happen every day, for which we are thankful, but when they do strike, we least expect them — at such times a telephone is priceless. This alone is enough to make every home a Telephone Home. But when you have experienced the satisfaction that accompanies the telephone and you have seen your money returned a hundredfold in greater enjoyment of life, in convenience, and often in the saving of actual dollars and cents you'll wonder why you delayed so long in making yours a Telephone Home.
