

PURDUE SPORTS DOPE

Purdue's "Ideal" Football Player Average Figured.

Judging from the averages of the 75 gridiron aspirants who are expected to make up the Boiler-maker squad this fall, Purdue's "Ideal" football player will be a typical midwesterner, weigh slightly over 185 pounds, stand about 5 feet, 11 1-2 inches tall, and have just passed his majority.

All but 13 members of the tentative squad that Coach Mal Elward must prepare for the rigorous eight game varsity schedule, as well as a six-game reserve card hail from Indiana or one of four neighboring states. Outside of Indiana, Illinois contributes the largest gridiron delegation with 15 members.

As far as scholastic tastes are concerned, virtually every school in the university is represented, including engineering, science, agriculture, physical education, forestry, and pharmacy. The group has an average age of approximately 21 years and 3 months, with 42 seniors and juniors listed on the roster as compared with 33 sophomores.

In weight, the squad ranges from Italo Rossi, promising 225 pound sophomore tackle from Pekin, Ill., to midget Bob Vyverberg, 155 pound senior minor letterman from Lafayette. Vyverberg who is 5 foot, 8 inches and Mike Byelene, junior member of the "Three Bees," who scales the same height, are the shortest men on the squad, while Jack Krause, 6 foot, 3 inch, senior letterman from Hammond, towers slightly over the rest of the Boiler-maker aspirants.

Seventeen different Indiana counties are represented on the roster with Tippecanoe, St. Joseph Lake and Marion all contributing four or more candidates. The university's home county, Tippecanoe, tops the list with six candidates.

They Picnic in the Ford Garden

WHO says the New York World's Fair is expensive? The average food check on the Fair Grounds, computed after examining a day's business at 70 different restaurants, is 43¢. Fat, juicy frankfurters sell at the standard price of 10¢ and complete meals are served for as little as 40¢.

People who bring their own box lunches, of course, can cut their costs to almost nothing. The Ford Exposition's Garden Court is a Mecca for such as these. Here are comfortable beach tables and chairs, shaded by spreading elms and by spacious blue beach umbrellas. Ample patches of green lawn, splashing fountains, and occasional puffs of breeze help the Fairgoer keep cool.

Each afternoon and evening the visitors—the Garden Court comfortably accommodates 800 at a time—may listen to free concerts by Ferde Grofe, eminent modern composer whose "Grand Canyon Suite" is known to everyone, and his New World Ensemble. They play popular tunes, music beloved by everyone. Here's a typical family group, enjoying themselves while Grofe's orchestra plays in the background.

The Gilberti family comes from New Jersey. Their lunch basket, in case you're interested, contained salami, delicious Italian ham, hard-boiled eggs and big red peaches. Gilberti, who has been looking for work since his employer's company folded up last March, said he appreciated the many comforts, and the glorious concerts the Ford Exposition offers without any charge. And Mrs. Gariazzo echoed: "I could stay here always."

Visitors to the Fair may use rooms in private homes for as little as $1 a day. Lists of these rooms, compiled by Mayor LaGuardia, are free for the asking. And the Federation of Greater New York Churches has established five centers where children may be "checked" during daytime hours. For $1 a day they are cared for, entertained and fed.

Secret Service men in Washington are investigating a new racket whereby several visitors to the capital city have been charged $1 each for admission cards to the White House. No fee is charged visitors for this privilege.

A fireman in Danville, Pa., was convicted of sending in a false alarm, so he could stand in the street and direct traffic.

Constable P. Lapre, Montreal, Canada shamefacedly reported to his superior officers the theft of his uniform, revolver and badge from the back of his car.

Otto Ritterbush of Astoria, Ore., trying to smooth down a jagged back tooth with a file, opened his mouth so wide that he dislocated his jaw.

NEWS NOTES OF THE TELEPHONE

The first telephone exchange in Springfield, Ill., the capital of the state, was opened in 1879.

Called to repair a telephone in Providence, R. I., a repairman removed the bell box cover and found a mouse and a goodly supply of peanuts.

At a recent stamp auction in London, a New York dealer used the transatlantic telephone to bid on a rare stamp and won, with a bid of $10,000.

The sister ship of the Queen Mary, now in process of construction, will be equipped with a comprehensive and thoroughly modern telephone system for the use of both the crew and the passengers.

TRAFFIC VOLUME IS HEAVIER, REPORTS SHOW

An increase of 6.13 percent in traffic moving over the Indiana State highway system during the first six months of 1939, as compared with the same period in 1938, was reported today by T. A. Dicus, chairman of the State Highway Commission.

The increased traffic volume was determined by the six automatic counters installed by the Commission to record the number of vehicles using the state highway system in different parts of Indiana. The gain registered during the first half of 1939, is a reversal of 1938, when the traffic volume on state highways was 1.97 percent under 1937.

The most northerly OCC camp was recently established in Mount McKinley national park in Alaska, with 200 boys enrolled.
