THE GOLDEN RULE

... and Safety

PERHAPS no maxim ever laid down for mankind has had broader opportunities for application in every day life than the Golden Rule. In traffic, particularly, there are innumerable occasions when this precept should be a guiding principle.

But, as is pointed out, one situation frequently arises when persons are loathe to "do unto others what they would have them do unto you" . . . when they witness an automobile accident. Many, many times other motorists and pedestrians deliberately refuse to be of assistance in one important particular to the parties involved.

Strangely enough, this tendency doesn't apply to physical assistance. Everyone is willingly cooperative in seeing that the injured are cared for, and that damaged cars are removed from the street. But when it comes to helping the drivers with the aftermath of a collision, it's another story.

Typically, the average person is instinctively afraid to give his name and address as a witness to an accident. If he doesn't go so far as to pretend he didn't see it, he often evades the desperate driver or injured pedestrian who asks his help by melting into the crowd.

Your testimony may help an injured person to recover just damages or a widow and dependent children to be compensated in the small measure that money can provide for the loss of a husband and father. Or by stating the facts as you saw them occur you may

OUR SECOND ANNIVERSARY

Two years ago, Dec. 10, 1937, Ira T. Howard and Edwin Smith launched the Syracuse-Wawasee Journal upon the turbulent sea of journalism.

The partnership was exceedingly short of financial wherewithal, therefore, the first 18 issues of the paper were printed on contract in the office of the Cromwell Advance. Then the present plant was purchased and the Journal became an integral part of the business interests of Syracuse, and the town's mouthpiece as it is now and always has been ever since the first issue.

Seven or eight months after the paper's establishment, other capital was interested and the Journal Publishing Corporation was formed. Messers. Howard and Smith retaining the business and editorial management.

On May 18, 1939, the Journal Publishing Corporation was sold to Hubert Stump and associates, who have conducted the business and destinies of the Journal ever since, and today is giving to Syracuse a real home newspaper, printing all the local news "that's fit to print."

Thanking our advertisers, subscribers and the general public for the interest taken in and the unstinted support extended it, we again say "Thank You."

save a blameless driver from being saddled with an unjust obligation which may mortgage his income for years to come and deprive his family of the necessities and ordinary advantages to which most of us are accustomed.

Be a good neighbor by doing what you can to see that a just hearing is afforded to every unfortunate participant in an accident. You'd help his child if he were injured in the crash . . . why not assist the child just as materially, even though he wasn't there, by seeing that his father benefits by facts you alone may be able to prove?

The time and effort you may spend in discharging this social responsibility will be well spent if you can contribute to the rendition of justice in these unfortunate occurrences, which might happen to anyone, and which are often so vitally important in the lives of those affected.

LESS DISEASE FOUND IN HOOISER APIARIES

A one per cent reduction in diseased bee colonies is shown by the 1939 inspection of Hoosier apiaries, as was reported recently.

Inspections made this year under the supervision of the Division of Entomology, included 74,582 colonies located in all parts of the state and represented a greater number than was checked the preceding year. Less than three percent of the colonies inspected were found to be diseased.

The reduction in the percentage of diseased colonies and the general improvement in apiary equipment reported by the inspectors is an indication of the progress being made by Hoosier beekeepers. Inspection of apiaries is a step in the control of foul brood and other diseases is one of the services available through the Department of Conservation.

SYRACUSE WINS TWO—

6 or 7 minutes, and then comes Felts, who has seen action in about 182 of the 192 minutes played this year.

Kern and Beck are the high foulers on the squad with 15 apiece.

Stoelting has 12, Felts 11, LeCount 8. As a whole, Syracuse has committed 61 fouls to their opponents 66.

LeCount, who became high scorer in the first game this year has never relinquished his lead and now has marked up 61 points. 52 scores are recorded on Kern's record sheet, Beck is next with 50, then comes Felts with 22, and last with 7 is Stoelting.

The Blues have sunk 79 field goals and 41 free throws against 60 field goals and 25 free throws by the teams they have played. Therefore, 199 points to the Yellow Jackets total to 145 tallies for their enemies.

On the second team, O'Haver is high point man with 32 scores. Bell is next with 12 and Slabaugh and Miller are tied for third, each having 8 points. Altogether, the ponies have 88 points to their credit against 118. They have made 31 field goals and 26 free throws while their opposition has netted 49 field goals and 20 free throws.—Richard Pracht.

LIBRARY NOTES

New and outstanding books new in your library:

"The Nazarene," by Sholen Asch. Never in all fiction, has there been so spectacular a historical novel of the time of Christ. The Nazarene presents a sweeping, glowing panorama of Jerusalem and the provinces of nearly two thousand years ago, during the most dramatic period of human history.

"Kitty Foyle," by Christopher Marley. Kitty Foyle's story happens to be laid in Philadelphia the Mid-West and in New York, but it might be true anywhere in this country of ours. From her lips we hear what it was like to be a child in the 1920's, a girl in the 1930's in school, in business, in love; in her struggle against a frozen social tradition.

"Sam," by John Selby. The fascinating story of a man who built a personal empire out of a newsprint—a story of strength, lusty humor, and a strange poignancy.

"Queen Anne Boleyn," by Francis Hackett. This historical novel is based upon the dramatic life of Anne Boleyn, one of Henry the Eighth's wives, who was crowned Queen of England, and died on the block.

"The Sea Tower," by Hugh Walpole. The tenant of Sea Tower is Christina, a young girl from London. After a brief romance, she had married her Cornwall husband and was taken back to meet the mother who had exercised absolute domination over her sons and proposed to brook no interference in her conduct of their lines.

"Maud," by Richard Lee Stout. A real diary of a real girl, who lived in Cairo, Illinois, in the 80's and 90's. Altho Maud was an outrageous little flirt, she was also a girl of rare personality and determination. Her story is well worth reading, not only for its grand picture of American life, but also as a portrait of its author.

"Doctor Hudson's Secret Journal," by Lloyd C. Douglas. The plan of life that Dr. Hudson, of "Magnificent Obsession," found and set down in the cipher code of his Journal is repeated completely in the new novel of some of the experiences of this great man.

"Moment in Peking," by Lin Yutang. Lin Yutang reaches great stature here as a novelist. The living quality of this book goes beyond the reality of individual lives and changing society and the tragedy of war, as the novel sweeps on to its breathless and magnificent climax.
