Conservation Officer Earl Money and Ned Gerard are shown here as they are about to search a private pool at W. W. Kercher's Sunrise Orchards for a huge spoon billed catfish stolen from the state fish hatchery at Wawasee early in July. The pool will be kept under 24 hour a day guard until the catfish is captured by nets used by skin divers. It is rumored that two skin divers, both reportedly safely out of the state now, took the fish from the Hatchery pool, raced to the Goshen pool and dumped it there. Why? ... to reduce the number of smaller fish that cluttered the pool. Goshen News photo

Parker Calls On Business People To Take Active Part In Politics

Crawford F. Parker

Business and white collar workers were urged by Lieutenant-Governor Crawford F. Parker at the Republican rally in Syracuse last night to take a more aggressive role in the coming election.

Speaking in the high school auditorium following an ox roast attended by a record crowd of well over a thousand people, Parker said:

"Business, professional people and white collar workers are becoming more interested in politics than ever before, a fact which will have a profound and constructive effect on our future."

"For the first time in American history, this year, the number of white collar workers has passed that of all other workers in industry," the Republican nominee for governor said.

Parker continued. "Undoubtedly you have seen many newspaper and magazine articles this year telling about the phenomenon of business in politics. Actually, this isn't new. Before I was in politics, I was a businessman; so was Harold Handley, Senator Copehart and many others of our state and national officials.

"The difference now is that business and corporate management are actively encouraging executives and white collar workers to get out and work in the party of their choice.

"Top management used to look askance at such activities, it wasn't considered 'good business' to take part in politics.

"Corporation personnel have realized now, however, that they have been missing an opportunity to sell free enterprise direct to the public through political participation.

"Labor organizations, as everyone knows, haven't made this mistake.

"However, present day view is that in all this effort, corporations and business generally should not dictate to employees how to vote.

"Corporations cannot make political contributions. Labor unions are not supposed to do so either, but COPE (Committee On Political Education) gets around this by providing workers and cars during registration and on election day. This is a contribution far more valuable than money would be.

"To work in politics on whatever side he wishes should be encouraged. But businessmen and women, professional people and white collar people have not been encouraged to do so heretofore. We haven't seen enough of these people on election day."

Parker concluded his appeal with "If you are a doctor or lawyer, a member of management, a merchant, or white collar worker, the Republican party needs you and America needs you."

Congressman Halleck Urges Strong GOP Vote in November

Charles A. Halleck, Congressman from Indiana's second district, said at Syracuse Monday night:

"In Nixon and Lodge we have the two ablest men on the American scene to deal with Khrushchev and the Russian program. Likewise, these two men are familiar with the domestic situation and can give the country the best leadership there is."

"State and county candidates in Indiana are well chosen to follow through with local leadership."

"We need Republicans in Congress. The Democrats can't agree on what should be done. In the six years that they have outnumbered the Republicans two to one, it is the minority Republicans who have taken the lead in the big questions and in the farm issue."

"A strong vote in November will put the Nixon-Lodge ticket in office and a Republican majority in Congress."

Halleck spoke at the Republican rally last night which completed the county-wide tour by the GOP caravan of state and county candidates.

The program was brief with Congressman Halleck and Lt. Governor Parker the only speakers. Halleck is seeking reelection as congressman from the second district and Parker is the candidate for governor of Indiana.

All candidates that were on tour Monday were introduced during the program which followed the ox roast at the school grounds. The program was held to minimum time and adjourned by 8 p.m. so that all who wanted to listen to the Nixon-Kennedy televised debate could do so.

Woman Badly Injured In Car Crash Friday

Mrs. Henrietta Van Camp, 71, is reported in fair condition at Goshen Hospital where she was treated for broken ribs and a broken knee suffered in a car crash Friday.

Officers said that Mrs. Van Camp was traveling north along County Road 625 East near Kale Island bridge and attempted to pass a tractor operated by Thelton (Bud) Kline of Syracuse. Her car struck the front of the tractor throwing her car into the bridge abutment and causing the tractor to go off the road where it became wedged between a tree and the bridge with the front end in the water.

Kline escaped injury. Damage to the Van Camp car was estimated at $700 and to the tractor at $100.

State Troopers Herschel Harper and Don Sand with county officers investigated the accident.
