WINTER USE RADIATORS

ALTHOUGH welcomed during a part of the year for its comforting warmth, the unsightly radiator constitutes, during the winter season when it is not in use, a note which vexes the eye and who takes pride in the harmony and atmosphere of the home.

One solution to which many are turning is the use of radiators which materially in adding to the appearance of a room and at the same time provides a practical radiator in summer.

These of polished plate glass radiators into wooden brackets to fit the glass will make a radiator which can be fastened to a wall a few inches above the floor. A decorative crotone mounted from a rod fitted into wooden brackets, and attached directly to the radiator completely disguise the radiator until it is needed again in winter.

A host of flowers, or growing plants and a pair of candlesticks complete the transformation. The effect will be given by the warm sheen of the plate glass. Furthermore, the glass will prove strong enough to bear any reasonable weight and it will not be injured by spilled water. The glass can easily be kept clean with a damp cloth.

CLIFTY PARK IS INDIANA'S RIVAL FOR THE YELLOWSTONE.

Beauties of Downstate Mecca Nationally Known to Travelers.

By Charles G. Sauers
State Department of Conservation

"Thousands of tourists cross the entire United States to witness the sunsets of the Golden Gate. Most of them have gone too far," declares the Hoosier State Automobile Association. "To really appreciate the romance of a sunset with its grandeur of display, go to the veranda of Clifty Inn. Before you is the beautiful Ohio winding its lazy course between Kentucky and Indiana hills, clad in deepest green during the summer and the blending of the rarest tints in autumn. To see this once is to forget the Golden Gate."

Clifty Falls State Park—with its marvelous gorges, rocky canyons, steep hillsides and luxuriant growth of magnificent timber, all in the famous valley of the Ohio—offers attractions that few places in the nation can match.

Clifty Park, one mile from Madison, consists of 600 acres of wild rugged and majestic landscape. This public estate portrays better than any other state-owned land, pioneer Indiana with its wealth of hardwood forest, gorge country, rich river bottom lands and towering hillsides, accessible by well marked foot trails.

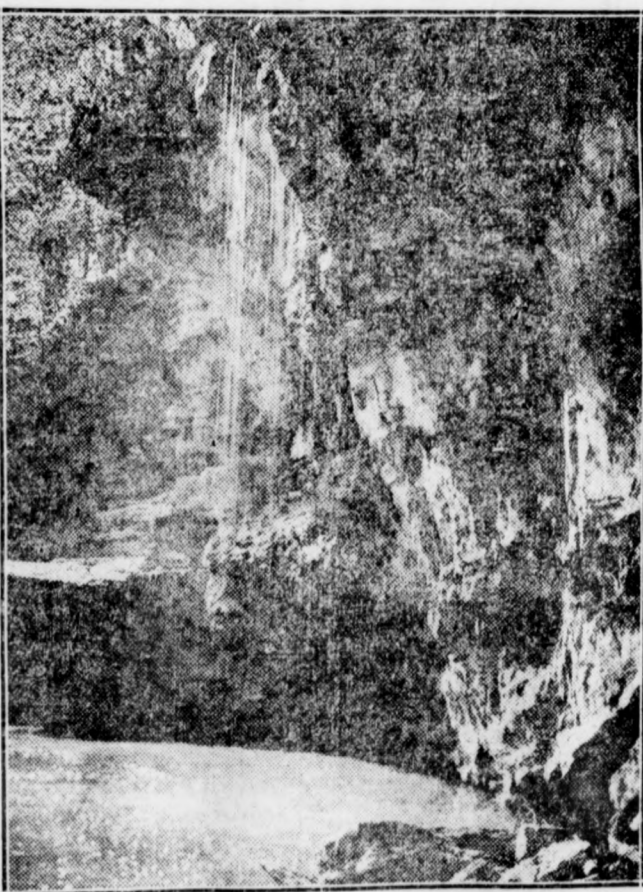

The park is a trough cut back into a plateau for some two miles, along which are some thirty waterfalls of wondrous beauty, ending with Clifty Falls, a majestic drop of 90 feet. Before the crystal-pure stream leaps into space over Clifty, it gathers dizzy speed, rushing down a series of cascades, while vari-colored mists float gently out over the valley to come to rest on the huge rocks in the ravine depths far below.

This park is situated in a section of the state rich in historic atmosphere. At Madison one finds in perfect preservation the famous home of James F. Lanier, pioneer Indiana banker whose generous financing of the state government during the dark rebellion days of the Civil War stamped him a national patriot unselfishly devoted to state and nation. This wonderful home, typical of the domicile of the rich man of that period, is under the careful supervision of the conservation department, which agency restored it to its former original beauty. The home was built in 1842-44, commands a princely view across a terraced garden lawn to the placid Ohio river and, rich in habitments of a generation past, is one of the historic monuments of Indiana.

Clifty Park best illustrates the beautiful Ohio valley found along this great river with the Hoosier boundary. The inn, a substantial and artistic brick structure resting on a prominence 415 feet above the river, provides a commanding panoramic view of the valley for many miles, distant Kentucky hills and rich blue-grass agricultural land, Madison City, a mile away, seemingly nestles at the brink of the great gorge. The hotel is modern in every respect and its comfortable service, wholesome meals and restful atmosphere has added decidedly to the popularity of this great public reservation.

McCORMICK'S CREEK CANYON STATE PARK APPEALS TO MOTHERS.

Appliances and Protection for Children.

By H. C. Reid
Hoosier State Automobile Association

Down in the hills of Owen County, three miles east of Spencer on State Road No. 46, is a tract of 385 acres which comprises McCormick's Creek Canyon State Park. McCormick's Creek runs for a mile and a half through the area, cutting into the limestone a great canyon as much as 100 feet in depth. A foot trail winds through the bottom of the Canyon, a very spectacular walk in this public estate.

One border of the park is bounded by White River with an excellent sand bar and good fishing holes. The woodland in this tract is noted for its excellence and for the great profusion of wild flowers. Here the ground is carpeted with color in great variety in early spring. Although not virgin forest, the woods are a perfect example of fine second growth timber.

Joy for Mothers
Mothers with families of children of any age find the service available at McCormick's Creek Canyon ideal for their vacation purposes. The Canyon Inn has been particularly adapted to the purpose with extreme care taken in preparation of food, with ample milk and vegetables which children require. Mrs. Luna Richards, who made such an enviable reputation for herself at Muscatatuck State Park, has recently taken charge.

Directly adjoining the hotel porches is a play yard for small children with play-ground devices. This is fenced in and the children are safe. During the season an attendant is kept to watch the children and to take larger children on hikes through the reservation and teach them nature lore. This permits the mother real rest without the anxiety of the whereabouts of the children.

About three hundred feet in front of the hotel this season will see a new swimming pool, 45x150 ft., with a depth ranging from four to ten feet. A filtration plant is being installed so that sanitation will be guarded at all times. A wading pool and sand box will be added also for the kiddies.

OBITUARY

Heaven is not reached at a single bound,
But we build the ladder by which we rise;
From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies.

And we mount to its summit round by round.
Lucinda Bell, thirteenth child of James and Susan Hodshire was born November 9, 1868 at Flatwoods, Putnam county, Indiana, where she spent her early girlhood and received her education. She united with the Methodist church, which was known as "Old Bethel" when a young girl and continued a faithful servant of God. There was no night too dark, no cold, that she wasn't willing to go to the suffering and needy. She was united in marriage to John F. Hodshire, September 20th., 1887 at Fairbury, Illinois; and to this union was born six children: two sons, Kenneth and Dwight having died in infancy.

She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband, John F., and four children, Ross of Bellville, Glenn of Greencastle, Alma L. Martin of Columbus, O., and Odessa Madge at home. One sister, Mrs. Clara Crawley of Greencastle, and two brothers, William of Brazil and Lewis of Greencastle; four grandchildren, Leona L., Evelyn E., John William and Wayne Hodshire. One son-in-law A. E. Martin, two daughters-in-law, Viva and Ethel, besides a host of relatives and friends.

She and her husband moved to this community and home in 1897 from Goodland, Ind., and continued to live until God called her home. When her first born united with the Manhattan Christian church, she and her husband moved their membership from the Goodland Methodist Church to that place and has remained a faithful worker for that Church until she was called to her Maker. She expressed her thanks to God, in her last few hours, that with her companion and God's help, she reared and lived to see all of her children Christians. She was always true, faithful and a sympathetic wife. Nothing was ever too difficult but she gladly bore it for her husband and children, but whenever the cross seemed hard to bear she always went to her God in prayer and received comfort. There was never a mother more loving and true and kind to her children. She was always a companion to her family and always gave them her undivided attention and sympathy. Not only was she fond of her children; also her grandchildren, and was often heard to express that they were very dear to her. She was devoted to her home and loved many beautiful flowers. She loved to have her children often visit her, which they too gladly loved to come, and often did. We feel that if there ever was an "Angel" on earth it was our "Darling Mother," not only did her children feel this but neighbors and friends were often heard to express the same opinion. She was an invalid for the past two years, but during this time, although in deep pain, she was always jolly and made life sweeter and brighter for those around her. On Monday she said, "Tomorrow I'm going home," and often before this was heard to say she was going home to Jesus. On Tuesday, August 28, 1928 at 4:15 her soul departed from her tired body for her mansion in the sky.

—(By Her Children.)

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our friends, neighbors and relatives for their many acts of kindness and their loving sympathy shown us during the illness and death of our beloved mother, and wife, Lucinda Bell Hodshire.

FATE TAKES A HAND

KOKOMO, Ind., Aug. 31. (UP)—Fate has dealt Emory Powell, 55, an ironical blow. After thirty years as a soldier without coming to harm, he lies in a hospital suffering from a bullet wound inflicted by the accidental discharge of a rifle at the hands of his cousin, Ned, age 9.

The accident occurred while Powell, Ned and the latter's brother Jack, were hunting turtles along the Tippecanoe river.

Security Pacts And Arms Cuts Before League

DELEGATES TO NINTH ASSEMBLY BELIEVE KELLOGG TREATY AUSPICIOUS.

GENEVA, Sept. 3. (UP)—World-wide limitation of armaments, largely as a result of the security offered by the Kellogg war-abolition treaty, was scheduled to be the dominating note in the discussions of the ninth assembly of the League of Nations which convened here today.

Although the Kellogg pact was negotiated outside the League, delegates arriving today, admitted it has done more to solve the problem of security for the League, than the League itself has been able to do to date.

In the event, however, that various nations still insist their lack of security is such as to render a reduction of armaments impossible, the assembly expects to be in a position to overcome this last obstacle toward disarmament.

Besides the security already afforded by the Kellogg project the assembly will take final action on the whole program of security elaborated during the past year by its security commission under the presidency of Foreign Minister Benes of Czechoslovakia.

This program consists of a series of model bilateral and multilateral treaties, for the pacific settlement of all disputes, for arbitration and conciliation, non-aggression and mutual assistance. They are all based to a large extent upon the Locarno system.

The assembly will adopt the final form of these treaties and will recommend them to all nations who still feel that additional guarantees must be given for their security before they can consent to a reduction of armaments.

On the basis of the common security thus afforded by the Kellogg treaty and the League's own projects, the assembly expects to be able to launch a disarmament program for 1929 that will at last attain actual results.

Besides a project for the actual limitation of armaments, the program will include conventions for the control of the private manufacture of war material and for the fullest publicity of all statistics on the production of war material, the international traffic in arms, and the status of chemical and bacteriological industries that might be utilized for war purposes.

Aside from the problems of security and disarmament, interest in the assembly will center largely in the election of a successor to John Bassett Moore, the American judge on the League's Permanent Court of International Justice at the Hague, and in the election of three non-permanent members of the League council.

As regards the former it is almost certain that Charles Evans Hughes, who has already been nominated by nearly a score of different countries, will be elected to succeed Moore, who resigned two years before his term expired. The election of Hughes is intended as an international tribute to the role he played at the Washington and Havana conferences and to his own open support of the Hague court.

The three non-permanent members of the League council that are to be replaced this year are China, Columbia and Holland.

The seat held by China is one that has been tacitly allotted to Asia and the principal candidate is Persia.

The Latin American seat now held by Colombia will probably go to Venezuela.

Spain, in recognition of her return to the League, is expected to be elected to the seat left vacant by Holland.

EYELESS CHIC THRIVES

KINGSTON, N. C., Sept. 3. (UP)—An eyeless chick is thriving at the home of Joseph P. Horton here. The little fowl's face is entirely blank at the place where the organs of sight should be.

The chick manages to find its way around with the rest of the brood without difficulty, and it gets its share of the feed placed for the flock.

Bringing The Pullets Into Winter Quarters

PROVIDE CLEAN HOUSES, HANDLE BIRDS GENTLY—FEED A GOOD MASH.

Pullets are rapidly coming to maturity. Have you taken any steps to make room for them in the laying house?

Buildings which were used before should be thoroughly cleaned, repaired and disinfected before putting the new stock into them. In addition to removing the litter, all the poultry fixtures as, for example, mash hoppers, drinking fountains and nests, should be taken out, the walls and ceilings brushed and the interior given a good coat of whitewash. This will improve the appearance of your houses, and at the same time, help to disinfect them.

As you bring the pullets in off the range, handle each bird as it will save you much time and money later. Pullets with shallow bodies, small pelvic regions, crooked breast bones, and slow in maturing, are more profitably sold to the local market than put into laying houses. The only kind to keep is pullets that are of a thrifty appearance, in good health, active, alert, well matured and in good flesh.

In handling young pullets remember that they are easily frightened; handle them as gently as you can and for the first few weeks, while they are in the new quarters, move slowly about the house. Talk to the birds as you move through their pens. It is well to have the equipment as, for example, the mash hopper and drinking fountains, should be as nearly alike as possible to that used on the range. Care must be taken not to close the pullets in too suddenly. If you do, you may set them back two or three weeks.

It is advisable to move the pullets to their permanent quarters a week or two previous to their coming into egg production. Moving them after they have started laying is almost certain to mean an upset and likely a partial or complete molt. All pullets should be off the range into the winter quarters sometime before the 1st of October.
