WASHINGTON UPI — The policy-making officials at the Agriculture Department currently regard the pending farm bill as a package. It will go through the legislative mill as a whole, or it will fail as a whole.

Undersecretary of Agriculture John A. Schnittker told reporters at a news briefing Monday there was no thought of breaking the pending omnibus bill into segments for individual passage. He was asked if the administration would agree to a peeling off of the wheat or cotton segments in case the going got tough for either.

"It will all go either, or all go down," Schnittker said.

Schnittker substituted for Secretary Orville L. Freeman at the briefing. Freeman was busy mounting an intensive and far-ranging drive for congressional approval of the pending bill. He was so burdened with three speeches—two in Washington and one in Columbia, Mo.—that he had to call on Schnittker for help.

Schnittker said the credit picture for agriculture looks fine, and he expects it to look better in the next 12 months.

He said department officials continue to be amazed and pleased at the way farm exports are running. He noted that from the 1960 level of $4.5 billion they have gone to a value of more than $6 billion two that consumers need a continued abundance of food and fiber "at continued fair prices." He told them to "reminde farmers to have maximum opportunity to produce, to sell at prices that give national income, and to export without the handicaps of subsidies."

He advised them to stress the point that the great society farm bill is a "producer-consumers in a row. He said the farm export situation will be event better "when we get cotton exports back on the track."

In the Freeman speeches Monday—to a Nebraska group, to representatives of the National Farmers Organization, and to the Missouri Farmers Association — he reminded farmers they don't have much political muscle any more. He advised them to contact the city congressmen and tell them about the sale of American wheat to the Soviet Union as long as the requirement remains in effect that half of such sales be shipped in American bottoms.

Non-Expert Player Must Bid Modestly

By Alfred Sheinwold

A simple but very practical philosophy of bidding was expressed some years ago by a group of English experts: Bid what you think you can make. When a non-expert adopts this principle he must bid more modestly because he cannot as many tricks as an expert.

Four spades is the expert bid with the South hand. South is sure to make contract if east has the ace of diamonds; and has a fine chance if East has the king of spades. A non-expert's chance is not quite so fine.

The actual declarer took the first trick in dummy with the ace of hearts and tried a finesse with the queen of spades. When this worked he led a club to dummy and tried another finesse. The jack of spades held, but east showed out.

South next led a diamond to dummy's king, but East won with the ace. "Down one," South announced, as he conceded a trump, a heart, and two diamonds. "No score; I had honors."

And South smiled smugly. A weaker player might have forgotten to claim the honors, but South was much too good for that.

TOO SOON

South gave up too soon. There was no need to lose a trump trick even though dummy had no more trumps to lead through East.

After winning the second spade finesse, South should lead a club to dummy and ruff a club. Only then should he lead a diamond.

East takes the ace of diamonds and returns the jack of diamonds to dummy's queen. South ruffs dummy's last club and gets out of his hand with a heart or a diamond.

By this time South has taken eight tricks and still has the ace-ten of trumps left. Sooner or later South will make both of his trumps, scoring the game and rubber.

An expert can afford to jump to game with hands of this kind. A weaker player should issue an invitation to game without actually bidding it.

DAILY QUESTION

Dealer, at your right, bids one heart. You are next, holding: S-7 5 H-A 6 3 D-K Q 3 2 C-A K 9 4. hat do you say?

Answer: Bid one notrump. Thus shows about the same strength as an opening bid of one notrump, including at least one sure stopper in the opponent's suit.

Rocket To Get Moonshot Test

CAMP KENNEDY UPI — Atlas-Centaur, the hard-luck rocket needed to get America's second lunar exploration program underway, is scheduled to make a crucial moonshot rehearsal Tuesday.

The high-powered space launcher is supposed to shoot a 2,100-pound dummy Surveyor spacecraft toward a "paper moon," an imaginary point 240,000 miles away in space representing the moon for test purposes.

A success is needed to clear the way for the first launch of a full-scale surveyor later this year. Project Surveyor is designed to land scientific payloads gently on the lunar surface to pave the way for Apollo manned landings in 1969.

The first Survey set for launch this fall will be an engineering test craft, but will still attempt a soft landing on the moon and will carry a television camera to scan the lunar landscape after landing. Its findings could be as important as the initial closeup pictures of the moon taken by earlier Ranger probes.

Tuesday's test had been set for Aug. 4, but was delayed six days when engineers found some "marginal" electrical parts in a vital guidance device on the Atlas booster stage.

The parts have been replaced with better units.

Engineers have given themselves two 58-minute periods Tuesday to launch the 112-foot rocket. The specific blastoff times, starting at 10:31 a.m. EDT, were selected to simulate the times when the earth and moon would be in proper position for an actual moonshot.

Why all the red tape?

You can understand why we don't sell narcotics without a physician's prescription. But maybe you've wondered why we're so fussy about other things... like penicillin, sleeping pills, the new tranquizers. These potent medications are called "legend drugs" and you have to have a prescription to get them. Reason: Uncontrolled use may do more harm than good. Only your physician knows whether you should use them or not—and, if so, just how much. So we require a prescription. It's a matter of professional ethics and the law. Always it's common sense.
