DR. BARBER'S INHALER IN OPERATION.

The above picture partly shows how Dr. Barber's Inhaler acts. It is the first and only perfect Inhaler ever invented. Other vapor-making Inhalers carry the vapor in a crude and objectionable state to the breathing apparatus. Dr. Barber's Inhaler washes it free from all unwholesome particles through pure water, making it a faultless Inhaler.

CATARRH.

Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, and other diseases of the air passages of Nose, Throat and Lungs, can be reached only by Inhalation. Dr. Barber's Inhaler carries healing vapor direct to the sore and inflamed surfaces, and searches out the very seat of disease. It is a complete treatment in itself, not a quick device for luring the sufferer to buy a batch of high-priced "secret" nostrums. All intelligent physicians use and recommend Dr. Barber's Inhaler. It cures Catarrh in all stages. It cures Bronchitis, it relieves and cures Asthma and Hay Fever. It cures Pneumonia, Diphtheria, and even Consumption if taken in time. It furnishes

THE ONLY TRUE WAY TO CURE all diseases of the breathing apparatus. It is the cheapest radical and complete treatment ever known.

Druggists sell Dr. Barber's Inhaler. We have local agents in nearly every town; but sufferers who have been deceived by delusive advertisements will please send us a POSTAL CARD for FULL DESCRIPTION OF THIS REMEDY. It is a great discovery; to know all about it costs you only a postal card. Give address plainly, and name of paper containing this notice. Address the sole manufacturer.

Three Bricks Worth $3,500.

(Cincinnati Gazette.)

Three of the most valuable bricks ever seen were on exhibition at the Hammond Street Station House yesterday afternoon. They were the poorest kind of rough building brick, but each of them was worth, or at least had cost one man, $1,166.66. Their story is as follows:

William Sly, of Nicholasville, Clermont County, where he keeps a store, had been accumulating his savings for forty years, until he could count the snug sum of $3,500. This amount he had invested in 4 per cent government bonds, and they would have been in his possession, yet drawing their quarterly interest, but in an evil hour he determined to exchange them for gold. With this end in view he came to this city yesterday, accompanied by a son-in-law, whose name was not ascertained. With the bonds in a new black valise, Sly and his son-in-law went to the banking house of W. H. Hughes & Co., 90 West Third street, where the change was made from paper into eagles and double eagles. Sly and his son-in-law, who seemed to have been true descendants of Christopher Sly himself, put the money into an empty cigar box which they placed in the valise, and started toward the river to take the train home. They noticed several persons in the banking house, but paid no more than casual attention. On the way to the river they were followed by several men who had walked close to them and jostled them at times. It is supposed these were the thieves who afterward relieved them of their gold, and that they were then seeking an opportunity to snatch the valise and run. However, Sly seems to have suspected nothing, and the men left them before Sly and his companion reached Front street. They took the 4:10 train on the Little Miami road, and occupied a seat together. A few minutes afterward Sly left the car to get a newspaper, the son-in-law remaining in charge of the precious valise. The guard's attention was diverted for a moment from the valise which stood in the aisle, by some incident. There was a hurried movement through the car of a party of men. A few minutes after Mr. Sly's companion noticed that the valise was displaced. He pulled it back into its place when a heavy body rolled in it. This alarmed him, and, looking at the valise, he found that it was not his. A new but common looking affair had been substituted for his grip-sack. He tore it open and found that it contained nothing but three bricks. To give the alarm was the work of but a moment, but the thieves were already safe with their booty. All the description Sly's son-in-law could give of the robber was that he was probably a dark, heavy set man who had followed them part of the way to the river. The valise was taken to the Hammond Street Station House. It was made of paper painted to imitate leather, and the bricks had been thrown in so hastily as to break out the ends in several places. Evidently it had been sought for the purpose after the transfer of the money across the counter, and the thieves put in the bricks to give it the necessary weight, picking them off some pile on their way to the river. The Sly party returned to Clermont County by the next train, and seemed to be in a hurry to get away from Cincinnati while they still had their clothes on their backs.

The Trial of Mr. and Mrs. Worton for Stealing Mr. Jessop's Money while Pretending to be Telling his Fortune—A Very Queer Story.

(New York Sun.)

Mary Worton, gypsy and fortune teller, was arrested, with Timothy Worton, her husband, in Brooklyn on March 31, for inducing William Jessop, a mill owner of Princeton, Ind., to part with $2,125, and then running away with the money. Husband and wife have just been tried in the Circuit Court at Princeton. The gypsies had been living in a tent near Princeton. Mr. Jessop wanted to get married. He consulted the gypsies concerning two young ladies living in Princeton or near it, one of whom is rich and the other poor. Mr. Jessop, according to the story of the gypsies, did not allow the question of money to bias him in his predilections, and, he said, would be glad to marry either of them. Mrs. Worton undertook to tell his fortune, and to bring about a match with one of the ladies. Mr. Jessop's confidence in Mrs. Worton was greatly increased by her prediction, when she visited him last spring, that he would soon run a very narrow chance of losing his property, but that the property would be saved as if by a miracle. Not long afterward his house caught on fire in a mysterious manner, and if the wind had been in a different quarter the house and his mill would have been destroyed. The fire was believed to have been of incendiary origin.

At the trial the Sheriff, and Deputy Sheriff Pingle, who came to Brooklyn to make the arrest, testified to certain admissions made by Mrs. Worton. They were the only witnesses except M. Jessop. Neither the husband nor the wife testified in their defense. Mr. Jessop is a widower. He is a good-natured man and possesses sufficient money to make him eligible as a victim to such a scheme as was laid for him. He told his story to the Court:

"When I first met Mrs. Worton last fall, she wanted to tell my fortune, and said that she would tell me many things that would benefit me. First she said she would charge me twenty dollars, but if the fortune did not suit she would not charge me anything. She explained, however, that it would be necessary to hold in her hand a certain sum of money in order to portray and develop my whole fortune. She named the sum of $6,000. I told her I did not have so much money on hand. She then went away and staid a month or two. When she came back she met me in my woollen factory and said she might get along with $3,000. I told her I could not raise so much money and she went away again. She returned on a third visit and said she could probably get through the fortune if I could let her hold $2,000, but that it was very desirable that I should add something to that sum. This last conversation was in December. In January she called again, and then I agreed that she might tell my fortune. I went to the bank and drew $2,000 in four packages of $500 each. I afterward added $125 to it on her assurance that more money would make the charm work better. I handed this money to Mrs. Worton at my mill. She then asked me if I had a handkerchief. I handed her one and she wrapped the money up in it and tied it with a peculiar kind of knot, and then went through some strange kind of maneuvers; peculiar signs and strange gestures, and talked to herself in a language I could not understand. She did not tell my fortune. She said it would require time. It was a hard case, and the perils hanging over me were great. She gave me the handkerchief containing the money, and told me to keep it and not look into it myself nor suffer any one else to do so. I took it, kept it in a trunk till she came back about a week afterward, and then I gave it to her again. She opened the handkerchief; I saw the money. She went through the same maneuvers as before, tied up the money again and told me to keep it as before. This was repeated three four times. The last time she acted more strangely than at any previous time. She opened the package, went through some sort of talk, then arose from her seat, went toward the door north then south, all the while holding the package in her hand. As yet she had not told my fortune, but promised to do so at each meeting. After our last meeting I kept the handkerchief as usual until after the time she had promised to call. I began to suspect about this time that all was not right, and I opened the handkerchief and found strips of brown paper cut the same size as bank bills. Our last meeting was on the 9th of February last."

BEEF CATTLE.—The receipts for to-day were 5,000 head; the shipments were 900 head. The market opened strong, but closed weaker, and prices were 15c. per 100 lbs. lower, and closed still weaker. Sales were made of common to good mixed packing hogs at $4.65 to $5.00 per 100 lbs.; light bacon hogs, $5.00 to $5.20; choice heavy hogs, $5.25 to $5.50. Some of the offerings were unsold. The quality was good.

SHEEP AND LAMBS.—The receipts for to-day were 1,400 head; no shipments reported. The market was strong. Sales were made of common to medium sheep at $3.50 to $3.75 per 100 lbs.; and good to choice sheep at $4.00 to $4.50. The Drovers' Journal London special reports the American cattle trade dull and heavy.

ded: "I might have said that I would pay her well if she would bring about a marriage, but I did not agree to pay her $2,125. I had great confidence that she would use the money for my benefit. It was understood that she was to get me a woman."

The next time Mr. Jessop saw her was in Brooklyn after her arrest. She there told him, he said, that she had not stolen the money, but that she intended to return it. He recovered $1,190.

Deputy Sheriff R. T. Pingle testified that after he had made the arrests in Brooklyn Mrs. Worton admitted to him that she had got the money, but that it was on a contract that for that sum she was to procure a wife for him, and that she was to have until May 1 to do this; that she would have returned to Indiana before that time, and would have carried out the bargain had she not been arrested.

Mr. Jessop said in court that she wholly failed to tell his fortune, and that he yet did not know what it was.

The jury retired at 9 o'clock at night, and did not render a verdict until next morning. They declared Timothy Worton not guilty. The verdict in regard to Mrs. Worton was as follows:

We, the jury, find the defendant guilty, as charged in the indictment, and assess her punishment at a fine of $1,200, and that she be sent to the penal department of the reformatory for five years.

A motion for a new trial is to be argued. The names of the two widows were carefully kept out of the proceedings at the trial.

Mr. Jessop's account to his friends of the manner in which the brown paper slips were substituted for the money is that after the gypsy had come out of the trance on her last visit, with the bundle of money in the palm of her hand, she said:

"Now, Mr. Jessop, you must turn around and kneel down and pray."

He is not a professor of religion, but he did as she requested, and he thinks that it was at this time that she probably made the exchange.

THEY BLEW OUT THE GAS.

Two Old People Found in an Unconscious Condition, One of Whom Dies Immediately.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 29.—James Forrester and wife, of La Porte County, arrived in the city yesterday to attend the State Fair, stopping as usual at the Pyle House, corner of Ohio and Meridian streets. This morning they did not come down to breakfast, and the clerk, noticing their absence, went to their room about 10 o'clock in order to discover the cause. On the way the odor of escaping gas was found to be very strong, and on reaching the room he found the old people had blown out the gas and that both of them were nearly dead. Mr. Forrester was lying on his back, his feet out of the bed and his head lying on the body of his wife. In less than twenty minutes after being discovered Mr. Forrester breathed his last. His wife, evidently less affected than he, was unconscious, but, under the most vigorous and painstaking treatment, continued to breathe, although up to this writing the issue is doubtful. Both the window and transom of their room were open during the night, but being very old people they were easily affected. Mr. Forrester, who was over eighty years of age, has four children, two sons and two daughters, and all married save the younger son. He has been a resident of La Porte County for forty-one years, and was one of the largest landowners and wealthiest men. Many years ago he was a member of the Legislature. They resided five miles from La Porte.

A Horrible Death.

DETROIT, MICH., Sept. 28.—A terrible thrashing machine accident occurred in Sharon township, Washtenaw County, on Saturday last. A young man named Willie Meyers attempted to climb over the machine onto a scaffold in the barn, when, by a misstep, he lost his balance and fell into the cylinder. The machine was stopped as soon as possible, but not before both legs had passed into the iron-jawed monster up to the waist. The men who were present were unable to remove him from the teeth of the machine until they had amputated one of his feet with a pocket knife.

Physicians were sent for, but nothing could be done for the sufferer, but as much as possible to ease the pains, which were most intense for six hours, when death relieved him from further sufferings.

ANNIE CHAPLIN.

Imprisoned for Forgery.

And Murdered in Prison by the Forger, Who Afterwards Kills Himself.

A Indiana Horror.

WABSAW, IND., Sept. 28.—About three weeks ago Annie C. Chaplin, daughter of a wealthy citizen, a director of the First National Bank of this place, presented a check for $300 to the cashier of the above bank, having as a signature that of her father. Of course he was all right, and as she was his daughter, the cashier thought everything square. The father, in the course of the day, came across this check, and pronounced it a case of forgery. The cashier told who had handed in the check, and Mr. Chaplin immediately had his daughter arrested for forgery. She was lodged in jail; her own pleadings were of no avail, and her own father would not bail her. After being in jail three days she squealed on one G. L. Smith, a Singer sewing machine agent as being the forger. Papers were sworn out for his arrest, and he was lodged in jail, but four days ago he was admitted to bail, swearing revenge. He fully carried it out to-day, and he would have done it sooner, but a chance did not show itself until 4:30 this afternoon. Annie was out in the jail yard and entered the water closet. Her watcher saw his chance; with one leap he sprang over the high board fence and concealed himself until the poor girl was returning, when he sprang upon her, like a lion would a dog, and shot her twice. The first ball entered her heart, the second entered the head just above the right ear. The first killed her and she fell dead in her tracks. To be sure of her death the second shot was fired. Knowing her dead, he put the revolver to his own damnable head, and as did Annie, he also died in his own tracks. The murdered girl and the suicide and murderer lay within two feet of each other; blood and brain oozed from both, which made the sight a horrible one. Smith is a married man.

Annie, the murdered girl, has, and has had, the sympathy of the community during her confinement in jail. The father's actions toward his daughter are, and should be condemned by the community. Had her trial arrived and sentence passed of imprisonment, she would have served it before the father would have stepped in. She was a brilliant and attractive young girl, and how she happened to be connected with the forgery is a mystery. She had stood well in the community before she became connected with the forgery. Some say Smith forced her to present the check, thinking if she did not he would kill her. The coroner will hold an inquest immediately. The people of this place are greatly excited over the sad tragedy.

A Man Who Wants to be Hanged.

SIDNEY, O., Sept. 27.—The jury in the case of the State of Ohio against Conrad Rentanbauch, in the Court of Common Pleas, charged with the murder of J. M. Lehman, at Hardin Station, on Bee Line Railway, returned a verdict of murder in the first degree. The evidence identifying the prisoner as the murderer was overwhelming and conclusive. The circumstances attending the crime were as follows: As the 2 o'clock local freight train, going west, passed through this place, a man, supposed to be a tramp, boarded the caboose. When out of Sidney the conductor, Dennis Murphy, demanded his fare. Rentanbauch refused, stating that he had no money. He was then told that he must get off at Hardin, the next station. At Hardin he left the cars, but as the train pulled out he got on again. The conductor and brakeman then put him off by force, but as the train started up again he drew a revolver, and after firing at the brakeman on the top of the car, sprang on the platform, leveled his revolver, and fired through the rear window of the car, the ball striking a passenger, J. M. Lehman, who was sitting in his seat, entering near the right eye and passing through the brain. The murderer leaped from the train and disappeared in the woods. Lehman died in a short time after being shot. He was a young man, and had been married but about a month. During the trial Rentanbauch exhibited the utmost unconcern, and when the jury was about to retire to their room, after receiving the charge of the Judge, he raised his chin, ran his finger around his neck, stuck out his tongue, and winked and motioned to the jury as if to say, "hang me." The sentiment of the people is that the verdict is just.

TERMS.....$1.00 per year.

ENTERED at the Postoffice, Greencastle Ind., as second-class mail matter.

The fact that every few days some man comes to Greencastle soliciting from our business men orders for job printing, is well known. It is also a fact that these canvassers secure orders for work that could be executed in Greencastle just as well and just as cheaply. Gentlemen interested should reflect before placing any further orders. If they patronize home industry, the money paid out by them returns to their cash drawers, for goods sold over the counter. If paid to firms doing business in other cities, they never handle a nickel of it again. If you wish Greencastle to loom up as a business centre, spend your money in Greencastle.

People should be reminded of the great truth, in these campaign times, when warm political discussions are the order of the day, that "the greatest of these is charity." Every man, woman and child has political opinions to a greater or less extent, and while this is true, it is also true that neither bickering nor abuse will convert them, though argument will, sometimes. Give heed then, that when you talk politics, that your speech be plain, plausible and convincing; but do not descend to abuse; do not get angry; do not quarrel; do not spread false or scandalous reports about your neighbor who argues with you, or happens to be opposed to you in politics—such things are wrong. Remember that people can have political convictions and also be Christians.

Under the Knife.

[New Orleans Picayune.]

Yesterday afternoon an unusual commotion might have been observed within the precincts of the Charity Hospital. At one o'clock a formidable array of medical students and physicians of note appeared on the porch of this venerable institution, and it was evident that some event of more than ordinary importance was about to take place.

Shortly after one o'clock the writer, in company with a large number of students and physicians, repaired to the scene of the surgical performance. This was the operating room in the rear of the main buildings of the hospital. It is a room with very high ceiling and semi-circles of seats running up like an amphitheater from a pit, thus affording facilities to spectators of observing the proceedings of the operator. The appearance of this pit was not calculated to comfort the unfortunate subject of the surgeon's manipulations.

In the center was a couch about five feet high, covered with black oil-cloth, seeming more like a block of execution than a place of repose. Nearly over the couch hung from a little gibbet that projected from the wall above the entrance door a human skeleton, grim symbol of death. On seats around the pit were arranged the various objects to be used in the operation—opened cases of surgical instruments, containing knives, lancets, scalpels, little saws and chisels, tweezers, forceps, needles for sutures and many other polished and gleaming pieces of steel, the sight of which was alone sufficient to make the flesh creep. Then there were towels and sponges to staunch the blood, basins, jars of carbolyzed water, and more important than all, a bottle of watery-looking fluid, without which, or some equally powerful anesthetic, the operation was impossible: chloroform. And there was, besides this motley collection, a small machine, a combination of wheels over which runs an endless band, and with a long pliable arm, at the end of which was a disk of steel with fine teeth on the perimeter, a minute circular saw to cut through the hardest bone.

In the pit were the noted surgeon, Dr. M. Schuppert and his sons, Drs. W. E. and C. S. Schuppert, his assistants on this occasion, all in white aprons, and the operator with armlets of oil-cloth.

About half-past one o'clock, the amphitheater being thronged with members of the medical fraternity, and all preparations completed, the subject was admitted. He came into the pit looking not the least alarmed. He was a young man, about eighteen years of age, tall, well-formed, with regular, propounding features, large dark hazel eyes and dark hair. But for a swelling of the right side of the face and a protrusion of the ball of the right eye, one would have said he was in perfect health. He jumped actively upon the sable couch, and bared his body to the waist.

Dr. M. Schuppert placed one hand upon the boy's head, the other meanwhile toying with a glittering keen-edged scalpel, and addressed himself to his auditors. His remarks, divested as far as possible of technical terms not familiar to the general reader, were in substance as follows: The boy, Joseph Altenberg, was born in Alabama, but came recently from Natchez, Miss. He was seventeen years of age, of a powerful frame, and had never been sick, except from chills and fever.

About May he observed the commencement of a swelling on the right cheek. An aching pain having set in, which he mistook for toothache, induced him to apply to a dentist, who extracted the second molar tooth, which was found apparently healthy. The pain continued for three weeks afterward. About one month after the commencement of the tumor the eyeball began to protrude, and his eyesight was so affected that he could not perceive objects, but could distinguish night from day. He also suffered from attacks of bleeding from the nose. The tumor seemed also to vary in size from time to time, and whenever he was excited, or exerted himself, the patient felt a throbbing sensation in the tumor. When Dr. Schuppert first met the patient he observed near the entrance of the right nostril a polypus-like tumor, which afterward disappeared, but the nostril was finally so obstructed that the patient could breathe only through his mouth. He never complained of headache. He was examined by several physicians in Natchez, who advised him to go to New Orleans.

The comparatively slow growth of the tumor, the total absence of swelling in the sub-maxillary glands, the healthy appearance of the cutis, the age, hereditary register and absence of any cause for suspicion, indicated that the tumor was not of a malignant character. Dr. S. then went on to state the necessity for the removal of this growth, which would ultimately destroy life. He explained how tumors ramify and climb about the cavities of the head, adhering to the bones, filling up vacant spaces with their lobes, crawling through smallest apertures in the bones, and sometimes penetrating to the brain itself. The dangers of the operation and the difficulties to be encountered were set forth.

While these remarks were made the patient lay calm and attentive upon the couch, now and then regarding with his one sound eye the knife which the surgeon held. Dr. Schuppert later on observed that Altenberg had been fully advised of the dangers attending the operation. On Sunday he had asked that the attempt be made. "What if we find that the tumor has entered the skull?" said the Doctor. "Well, it can't be helped," replied the boy; "I will die anyhow, and I would feel so much relieved if you could take it out."

And so the operation was resolved upon. It was a question of life or death. Truly the sword of Damocles hung over Joseph Altenberg, but he was more composed than the circle around him. At length the proceedings open. A napkin saturated with chloroform is applied to the patient's mouth, and presently he became unconscious. Dr. Schuppert glanced at his instruments to see that they are in proper position. His experienced assistants take their places. With his scalpel the operator makes an incision extending from the lobe of the ear to the nose, cutting down to the bone. The blood gushes forth freely, but is speedily wiped away. Another incision is made just beneath the eye, and running from ear to nose. Here are many small arteries and important nerves. These two deep gashes meeting at the temple embrace the superior maxillary or cheek bone, behind which, in the cavity below the eye, is the tumor. The cheek bone must be removed. The surgeon continues to ply his knife with the assurance and delicacy of manipulation that comes of accurate knowledge and experience. He has performed similar operations before and realizes the danger and the difficulty of the deed upon which he is engaged. Frequently the boy groans, struggles on the couch, while blood wells out over his face from the terrible gashes. The white aprons, sleeves and shirt-bosoms of the surgeons are dyed red. A half hour has passed, but the climax has not arrived. The excision of the bone is the next step, and now the dental saw, the little machine with the serrated disk, comes into play. The circle of steel revolves with amazing rapidity, and cuts through the thin plate of the upper maxillary. The thick orbital bone requires the use of the chisel. It is severed. The operator grasps his pinchers and pries and the physicians around press toward the couch. Among them one observes Dr. Roaldes, the house surgeon of the hospital; Dr. Le Monier, Dr. Souchon, the latter soon to perform a similar operation. More chloroform is administered, and the bone is raised with the covering of flesh and laid back so as to lie upon the nose. The resting place of the tumor is revealed. It fills the entire cavity with its tough, lobulated mass, from which the blood spurts as it is detached from its fastenings and drawn forth with the pinchers. For the first time Dr. Schuppert seems anxious.

Another handful of bloody tumid flesh is removed, torn from its sinus behind the eye. The bloody cavity is carefully inspected: the surgeon searches with finger and instrument, and looks very grave. "Poor boy!" he says, as if speaking to himself, "the tumor has spread to the brain." Some of the physicians standing around shook their heads, as if to signify that it was all over. They understood Dr. Schuppert's words.

It was now an hour since the operation had commenced. The patient remained entirely unconscious, but struggled sometimes to free his throat of the blood that poured into it. He had become much weaker. The ruddy glow had left his cheeks, and a pallor as of death spread over his face and bare chest, seeming whiter and paler by contrast with the spots and streams of blood. Chloroform was no longer employed, but brandy was administered.

The doctor sought no more for the branches of the dreadful tumor; he saw that a branch had thrust itself up through an orifice into the brain. To dislodge it would be fatal; to leave it there meant death. The surgeon had approached the entrance to the region of the brain; he could go no further; skill, science, experience availed nothing. The sword of Damocles had fallen.

Carefully the blood was wiped from the yawning wound in the face, the bone was replaced and the sutures made, joining the crimson lips of the gash together.

"Poor boy," again murmured the surgeon, looking through his spectacles at the gasping form before him, "he little thought this would prove his last day."

The physicians near at hand looked for their hats; one examined his watch to see if it was his dinner hour; another pulled out a letter which he commenced to read. A voice said in French: "C'est fini. Il est mort."

It was finished. The tranquil, cold, pallid form of the dead boy on the sable couch, while through the sky-light above fell a flood of radiance, shivered down from the glorious blue sky which he was to behold never more.

This was the first death under the operator's knife which Dr. Schuppert records in his career, and he was greatly disappointed at the result.

A FRIGHTFUL COLLISION

Two men instantly killed and Others Injured.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., September 24.—A frightful collision occurred on the Vandalia Line at ten minutes past four o'clock this morning at Clear Creek Trustee, about nine miles west of this city, between extra passenger train No. 2, westward bound, and freight No. 11, east bound, in which eleven freight, two postal cars and both engines were thrown from the track, piling in an ugly heap twenty-five feet below.

The engineer and fireman of the freight train jumped off in time to save themselves from total destruction, but the engineer, James Watson, in so doing had his left arm broken, shoulder dislocated besides receiving internal injuries.

Engineer Austin Rankin and Fireman W. T. Saunders were both killed outright and buried beneath the debris of the wreck.

Lyman Booth, a brakeman of the freight train, had his leg broken below the knee and his head cut and bruised in several places.

Benjamin Dillihunt, Ernest Umbersoll and Wm. Hunt, all postal clerks, were more or less injured, the former having his leg broken near the trunk.

There were six persons in the postal cars at the time of the accident, and strange as it may appear, but three of them were injured, although both cars were literally mashed into pieces. A wreck-train left the city for the scene of disaster at six o'clock this morning, and arrived in the city with the dead and wounded about nine o'clock, afterward returning, bearing an increased number of men and several officers of the road, among them President W. R. McKeen, and at three o'clock the track was cleared so as to let trains pass.

Both of the killed lived in this city where they each leave small families to mourn their loss. The cause of the accident was a mistake in the reading of the order by the engineer and conductor of the freight train. The damage is estimated at $30,000. None of the passengers were injured—in fact, those in the sleeper knew nothing of the accident until afterward informed of it. The track is cleared and trains are now running on regular time.

VICTIMS OF THE ACCIDENT.

Benjamin W. Dillehant, head clerk, and Ellis Miller, Wm. Lewis and Ernest Umbersoll, of the postal car, wrecked on the Vandalia collision this morning beyond Terre Haute, were returned to this city this evening. Dillehant suffered a compound fracture of the leg, necessitating removal of bone. One arm was paralyzed by the shock, and it is feared he suffered internal injuries. Notwithstanding his pain and exhaustion he keeps up courage, and was quite cheerful to-night when the reporter called. Two clerks belonging to the Western lines, Elliott and Fairchild, were standing at the case with him, and went down with the wreck, but both escaped unhurt. Umversoll was severely injured about the hips and head, and he has been removed to his home in the country. Lewis had one ear torn off, and both he and Miller were badly bruised. This same crew was in the Vandalia collision near Belleville not long ago, and at that time were badly shaken up. In the collision this morning there was no intimation of danger until the shock came followed with the sensation of falling. All were fastened in the wreck, and were not relieved for several hours.

Mrs. Smith's Revenge.

[Carson Appeal.]

A couple of weeks ago a little woman and two children made their appearance at the Grand Central, Tahoe City, Lake Bigler. The woman was plainly dressed and so were both her children. They were not taken much notice of, and no one called to make the acquaintance of the modest little woman in plain clothes. Then the woman, who saw herself snubbed every day, got her dander up and sent down to San Francisco for the balance of her clothing and likewise her children's. They came. Next morning she appeared at the breakfast table with a toilet from Worth, and her diamonds dazzled everybody.

"Oh, good morning Mrs. Smith," came from all sides.

But this was only the beginning of the toilet boom. At lunch she was simply magnificent, and at dinner overpowering. She had nine Saratoga trunks to draw from, and her little daughter's evening dress created a regular furore. Now came her turn to put on airs. She simply treated every body with the coolest kind of politeness. Of course she was civil but didn't overdo cordiality to any extent. After overwhelming the place a few days with an avalanche of style, she sent her trunks back to San Francisco, and resumed her plain $25 suit.

A Bank Robber's Effects.

[Philadelphia Times.]

The sparkling gems which the bank robber Rollins had smuggled into the Eastern Penitentiary in a shaving brush handle, and which Rollins promised to give to the keeper, Hustis, if he would assist Rollins to escape, have been examined by a lapidary, on behalf of the administrator, J. McDowell Sharp, of Chambersburg, and prove to be paste instead of Brazilian diamonds. They were undoubtedly prepared with the sole purpose of hoodwinking Hustis. One of Rollins' wives, who has been awaiting the report of the expert in the hope that she might realize something to reimburse her for the $10,000 worth of real diamonds of which Rollins despoiled her, and is said to be on her way to California to be remarried. His other wife is in Chicago. The only effects Rollins leaves, besides the paste diamonds, are a pair of French gaiters with false heels, in which were hidden some fine saws when Rollins reached the penitentiary, a reversible silk cloak, capable of being folded up and carried in the vest pocket, and a marvelous hat, purchased in Paris, which could be changed into six different shapes and two colors. Pull a string and it becomes a high, black hat; pull again, and this chameleon head covering turns into a light cassimere; pull once more and the crown sinks, and it is metamorphosed into a low crowned Derby; another pull and the brim rolled up and a cap takes the place of all the above mentioned tiles. It is said Rollins had this hat made for the express purpose of baffling identification while conducting his heavy forgery operations in New York. He took it with him to Chambersburg, along with a pair of beautifully mounted revolvers, a heavy bowie knife and a sword cane, when he and Wicks attempted to gag Cashier Messersmith and rob the bank at Chambersburg. The articles mentioned are still in the possession of the Chambersburg authorities. Rollins' father may yet claim them.

HARD LUCK.
A word unspoken, a hand unpressed,
A look unseemly or a thought unguessed,
And souls that were kindred may live apart,
Never to meet or know the truth,
Never to know how heart beat heart
In the dim past days of a wasted youth.
She shall not know how his pulses leap
When over his temples her tresses sweep;
As she leans to kiss him the passion wreath
She felt his breath, and her face flushed red
With the passionate love that choked her breath,
Saddens her life now her youth is dead.
A faded woman who waits for death,
And murmurs a name beneath her breath;
A cynical man who scoffs and jeers
At women and love in the open day,
And at night-time kisses, with bitter tears,
A faded fragment of jasmine spray.

NELLIE'S SINGULAR PROPO-SAL.
"Really, Catharine, I don't wonder at Mary's surprise at your behavior. You forget that you are Frank's widow. You are too forward."
I hesitated a moment, really anxious to keep my temper; for I was Frank's widow, and the speaker was his mother.
"Forward," cried Mary. "Indeed,
you would have been shocked last night,
mother. There was Mr. Vance urging her to sing, and acting as if Herbert Halstead was her only friend, when it was only as a married woman."
"Yes," interrupted Julia. "I think,
mother, if you can't make Kate realize that she is married, with a daughter
nearly six years of age, you had better
—"
"Send me away," I broke in, unable longer to control myself, "it's not the first time that hint has been thrown out,
and if it were not for little Nellie, poor
child, I would go away and earn my living at once. You drive me desperate, and I declare I will marry again, and get rid of all this—"
"Marry again?" How would you do it?
Oh, yes! a good joke!" cried Julia, with a shrug at my tears. "Don't you see,
Mary, it's leap year!" and she laughed
derisively.
"Who'll you ask?" sneered Mary.
"Herbert Halstead? Julia, you'd better look out!"
"You may sneer," I cried, checking
my tears. I was now thoroughly angry.
"But I tell you, if no one would ask me
to marry him I believe I should ask Mr.
Halstead, and—he'd have me!"
I had fairly taken up their own weapons of personalities, which I scorned.
The moment after, ashamed of myself, I ran to my room to put on my bonnet and get out of the house. I looked in the glass as I put the crape bonnet with its widow's cap and heavy veil on my head.
I saw a face to which black was very becoming, though it was not a remarkably pretty face. It looked not more than twenty-five, some say not more than twenty; but I was really over twenty-four. Married at eighteen to Frank Stevens, I had been a petted wife for four years, and now a widow for two.
The thought of happiness of the four and the loneliness of the two, as I looked at the face surrounded by crape, made the tears come again; but I brushed them away resolutely and went out, knowing that a brisk walk would do me more good than anything else. I went out without my darling—my inseparable
companion—my little baby girl, Nellie.
This alone showed how troubled I was.
Truth to tell, I was too angry to trust myself with the little one, who might have asked to have our conversation explained, for she had been in the room at the time. I could only hope that at five years old a child did not understand me.
Soon after I left, my mother-in-law and
her daughters went out for a drive.
They invited Nellie to go, but she, feeling, perhaps, that they had not treated her well, refused. Soon the front door bell rang, and like all children, Nellie must run to see who was there. She managed to open the door herself, and there stood her prime favorite among the gentlemen that visited the house, Mr.
Halstead, or as she had called him since her babyhood, Uncle Herbert. He had been her father's chum and dearest
friend and loved the child for Frank's sake.
"Ladies home, Nell?"
"I'm home," she said, "and I des
mamma'll be in soon."
"Very well. Let's go in the parlor
and have a chat."
Nellie sat in his lap, discussing the merits of coconut cakes and sugar
almonds a little while; but suddenly
dropping her candies in her lap, she asked:
"What's leap—leap—leap—I forget. Do you know what's it?"
"Leap? leap for? leap year? is that it?" "Yes. What's it?"
"Why, it's a year when ladies can ask the gentlemen to marry. But you see Nellie, you're too young—or wouldn't you ask me?"
"Oh, no! I wouldn't ask you.
Mamma's going to ask you."
The young man nearly dropped the child, and then folded her close to him,
least he should forget her again.
"What do you mean, darling?" he asked.
"Now think, Nellie, but don't tell Uncle Herbert anything of your own
make up."
"Oh, no! really, truly, bless me, she's alive—isn't that what you say when you are true? Well!"—the little tot gave a long sigh and paused. Herbert not daring to interrupt her, lest she should see his anxiety, and miniature woman that she was, should refuse to satisfy him.
"Well!" she repeated, "you see they does scold mamma, so they does. Today morning they make mamma cry, tomorrow (she would call yesterday tomorrow) they scolded her again because she wouldn't sing, and then they said she was forward. What's forward?"
"Forward indeed!" ejaculated Herbert under his breath. "If it had been some others now. But Nellie, how about leap year?"
"Oh, yes! I most fordid, didn't I?
Well, you see, mamma said—but, oh,
Uncle Herbert, I never showed you my two wee little kittens! They're two little sings, wivout eyes. Come out to the piazza and I'll show you."
It was no use to be impatient. The young man knew the child too well for
that, and so they went out and inspected
the kittens. Then he tried to coax Nellie back to the subject.
"Oh, I fordid!" she said. "Only
they made mamma say—"
"What did they say darling? I'll give you a big doll—"
"With real hair?"
"Yes, yes! Real hair and eyes, and —oh, nothing. But did they say I wanted to marry—"
"They say mamma wasn't a girl, and she was old; and mamma said—oh,
there's mamma. Mamma, didn't you ask Uncle Herbert to marry you? He wanted to know."
I had come in, looking for the child,
and that was the speech I heard. I felt ready to sink with mortification.
"Kate, darling, can't I hope you'll let me ask? You must know that I hoped,
when these (touching my veil and black dress) were put aside, that I could ask you to let me care for you and at once.
Come, darling," as I hid my face in my hands. "You've asked me to marry you;
and I must name the day; and I say now, at once. Let's give them a good thorough surprise. I can guess how they've treated you. Come, now, get ready this fairy, this blessed little darling, that has brought me my happiness, and we'll go to your own minister."
I tried to refuse, but I was so weary of living with my mother-in-law that at last we three slipped out of the house,
and dear Dr. S.—(who had baptized me, married me, to Frank and knew Herbert well,) married us.
We drove back and reached the front door as the family were returning.
Julia, who would appropriate Herbert,
stepped forward.
"Good evening, Mr. Halstead. So you met Kate on the steps? Strange!"
—with a glance at me as if I had planned to meet him.
"Not at all, Miss Julia," said Herbert.
"My wife and I just called in to rec-ongratulations and to leave little Midget here for a few days."
No tableau I have ever seen was half
so comical as the one those three made.
I really felt for Julia, for I knew she cared for Herbert. She gained self-possession quickly, and congratulated me,
whispering, as she kissed me: "So you
asked him?"
My husband heard and answered:
"No Miss Julia, she did not ask me.
Through other means, thank God, I learned the one I loved was unhappy;
and as I hoped, for more than a year
past, to soon ask her to be wife, I persuaded her to marry me at once. Leap year privileges are still open for those who choose to use them."
We are quite an old married couple
now; for three years have passed, but Herbert and I still often laugh over Nel-lie's leap year proposal.
A Bottomless Well.
There is a remarkable well in the town of Thurman, N. Y., situated along what is known as the "River road." The well
is about 3½ feet in diameter at the top,
and its depth has never been ascertained. It has been sounded 565 feet without reaching the bottom. The water is clear and cold, and the well is always full. It was first discovered about ninety years ago, and its sides were then walled
up with stones, as they appear at the present time.
The Foundation of a Tribe.
William Smoak, a patriarchal German
of ninety-seven, living in Orangeburg
county, South Carolina, had 13 children, 139 grandchildren, and 79 of the next generation. Total number of descendants 691, of whom 575 are living. Mr.
Smoak's wife died a few years ago, but lived to see her youngest and thirteenth
child a grandmother.
One Hundred Years Ago.
One hundred years ago wedding tours
were not fashionable.
One hundred years ago farmers did
not cut their legs off with mowing machines.
One hundred years ago our mothers
did not worry over disordered sewing machines.
One hundred years ago every young man was not an applicant for a position as clerk or bookkeeper.
One hundred years ago men did not commit suicide by going up in balloons
and coming down without them.
One hundred years ago a young woman did not lose caste by wetting her hands in dish-water or rubbing the skin
off her knuckles on a washboard.
One hundred years ago a physician
who could not draw every form of disease from the system by tapping a large
vein in the arm was not much of a doctor.
One hundred years ago people did not worry about rapid transit and cheap
transportation, but threw their grain
across the backs of their horses and uncomplainingly "went to mill."
One hundred years ago every man cut his coat according to his cloth; every man was estimated at his real value;
shoddy was not known; nobody had struck "flie," and true merit and honest
worth were the standards for promotion.

Henry Krause and George Augustus Depenton, neither of whom was quite 16
years old, fought a duel with pistols, in Chicago, and both were wounded. Their quarrel was about nationality, Krause
being a German, and Depenton a Mexican. The meeting took place in a yard back of a saloon, and was attended with all the usual formalities of dueling.
Ayer's Hair Vigor restores the color
and stimulates the growth of the hair,
prevents it from falling off, and greatly increases its beauty. It has a delicate and lasting perfume, its ingredients are harmless, and for the toilet it is unequalled.
A handsome young man sat day after day at a desk by the window of a store at Hillsboro, Ky. A handsome young woman sewed almost as constantly at the window of her residence, just across the street. They began a flirtation with handkerchiefs, developed it into courtship
with notes, and finally eloped—all without exchanging a spoken word until the night of the flight. Another remarkable feature of the case was the fact that the woman was the wife of the Rev. James
A. Caywood, a highly respected Methodist pastor.
REMARKABLE SUCCESS.
The sciences of medicine and chemistry
have never produced so valuable a remedy for the treatment of Kidney disease
as the accidental discovery of the vegetable contained in Day's Kidney Pad. Its reliable character, desirable qualities and masterly curative power have deeply won upon the confidence of the medical profession and countless sufferers who have used it.
Tuck Jackson, of McDonough, Ga., believed that he had committed a sin
which, if he ever ate again, would surely send him to hell for all eternity. So he shut his mouth against all food and starved himself to death in seventeen
days.
As caloric, electricity and phosphorus
are induced and supplied by Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites, it only requires the administration of this successful invention to fortify the feeble,
give sprightliness and motion to the torpid, and bring about a condition which not only secures tenaciousness of life, but makes life really enjoyable.
A bunko swindler was eating a hearty
and expensive dinner in a restaurant at Lexington, Ark. A farmer, whose last cent he had just won, entered and said:
"You've robbed me of all my money, and I'm hungry. Buy me a meal." The gambler refused. "Then you shan't eat
either," cried the farmer, and shot him.
Bill's Buchu is acknowledged by all druggists as the best Kidney medicine
ever offered to the public.
A woman was found dead at Kewaunee, Wisconsin, with her skull fractured, and it was thought that she had been murdered. It turns out, however, that a ram butted her to death.
NOW IS THE TIME.
Don't wait until you are nearly dead and bed-ridden. Don't wait until you find, to your sorrow, that mineral poisons and alcoholic stimulants, bitters, etc., will only aggravate diseases of the blood, kidneys and liver. But now, before another day passes, make haste to procure and use Dr. Guy's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla. It never fails to cure all blood and skin diseases, all liver complaints
and urinary troubles.
It seems that Gen. Grant really did accept the Presidency of the San Pedro Mining Company, but afterward withdrew. George William Ballou, the promoter of the enterprise, shows Grant's
letter of acceptance to the Boston Herald.
A QUEER NOTION.
Many people think it cheaper to buy 25 cent sized of a proprietary medicine. But they make a mistake. For instance, Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry contains eight times the quantity of ordinary 25 cent cough balsams. Besides it takes a less quantity of Wistar's Balsam to cure a cold. A single dose is often sufficient.
For deep-seated Colds and Consumption it has proven itself to be the best and quickest cure
ever discovered.

A Thrilling Adventure.
[Buffalo News.]
The winter of 1846 was an extremely severe one in the country west of the Mississippi, especially in Iowa and Missouri. The thousands of prairie wolves which abounded in these two States
were driven to an extreme state of sav-
ageness, and often attacked in a body
any wanderer who happened to unfortunately fall in their vicinity after night-
fall; and woe to him whose misfortunes
were such, for the chances were in all cases ten to one in favor of the voracious animals. This especial winter they seem to have left the prairies of Southern Iowa
and migrated to the heavy walnut timber along the Charitan River in Macon
and Adair Counties, Missouri, where the haunts of the wild hog had never been molested, and consequently the wolves
would find it no difficulty to appease
their
CRAVING APPETITE.
About the first of February of this year, a young minister by the name of Stephenson, of Guernsey County, Ohio,
bought a large tract of land in Adair
County, and went to visit his speculation.
Contrary to the advice of his friends, he took no guide or companion with him
from Macon City, a little town, the county seat of Macon County, but set out alone to explore his purchase, which was distant about thirty miles.
Everything drifted along smoothly,
and the weather was not too severe for camping out until the evening of the third day, when he started to return home, a blinding snow storm set in and lasted until late at night. Then the clouds dispersed, and the moon shone
out over a vast wilderness of snow about two feet deep. The young man urged forward his steed, hoping to find a farmhouse, which nothing but the hand of Providence would guide him to in this strange country, as houses were few and far between. Presently a long, black line of timber loomed up in front of him,
and for the first time he realized that he was lost. He entered the woods which he found quite easy to penetrate, and which shielded him from the biting
blasts which moaned and whistled thro'
the tall weeds across the prairies in a way that would chill the strongest heart.
After he had advanced some distance
into the forest he got off to walk and ease the task of his faithful horse. He had walked but a few yards when he felt
a stinging sensation in the calf of his leg,
and then—a howl that fairly froze the blood in his veins and caused his horse
to rear and plunge.
WOLVES!
He glanced around him. There were millions of the bloodthirsty imps rushing in all directions. The whole ground
seemed to be a moving mass of devils,
howling in mockery of their prey.
The horse became unmanageable, and
after two unsuccessful efforts, its rider gained the saddle. The spur was useless
as the terror of the horse was sufficient to make him strain every nerve. But this was in vain. The enemy were legion and by far the fleetest of foot. Ere the fugitives had gone far the young man
found that some other method of escape
would have to be resorted to, even at the sacrifice of his horse. He then rode under the branches of a large walnut,
which hung within a few feet of the ground, and, clapping the first he came to sprang from the saddle. The wolves seeing one of
THEIR VICTIMS
Spring from their reach, rushed upon the horse and bore him down. The horse made only a moment's feast for the famished devils, and then they turned their attention to their victim in the tree.
They did not leave him even after daybreak. As luck would have it his provision bag was well stocked, and he had nothing to fear but the cold for at least three or four days. He was carefully watched by his enemies (who had made several attempts to gnaw down his perch) until the third day, when the welcome report of a gun in the distance
came to the prisoner's ears. He answered by a shot from his revolver. A second and third shot announced that he had been discovered.
The party was made up of thirty or forty persons who had become alarmed for his safety, and were well armed. But they had no small task in dispersing the tenacious animals, who seemed bent on devouring the little army.
In relating the adventure Mr. Stevenson said that the shrieks of terror from his DYING HORSE
Made him fairly heartsick, and they haunt him to this day. The gentleman is now a resident of this same tract of land which so nearly cost him his life,
and is surrounded with wealth and prosperity on every hand.
A traveller passing his stately mansion
on a summer's eve may observe the old man sitting on his porch, and with a content look on his beaming countenance,
relating to his grandchildren the thrilling
experiences of his first visit to Adair County.

FOR THE CURE OF
FEVER AND AGUE OR
Chills and Fever.
The proprietor of this celebrated medicine
justly claims for it a great superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the safe,
certain and permanent cure of Ague and Fever
or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is however prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic,
a single dose of BULL'S VEGETABLE PILLS will be sufficient.
The genuine Smith's Tonic Syrup must have
Dr. John Bull's private stamp on each bottle.
Dr. John Bull only has the right to manufacture and sell the original John J. Smith's Ton-

The Democratic rally in this city, next Saturday, is to be addressed by Hon. Dan. Dougherty, Gen. Farmsworth and Senator Voorhees.

The sick sharper still makes himself felt. At Danville, Ind., last Monday, Mr. Asa White, a well-known farmer of Lincoln township, was fleeced out of $200 by confidence men. They lured their victim into the trap by representing that they desired an agent for a patent-right which they owned, and when he went with them to a quiet room to arrange matters, they induced him to engage in the deceiving game of three-card monte. Mr. White cheerfully paid $100, but when the second $100 was called for he hesitated, and while one man was explaining the game to him another grabbed the money and left, and as Mr. White looked around after him the first man also skipped, leaving our honest farmer to make the best of his loss. No arrest has been made at the present writing.

TUESDAY last the corner stone of the new Indiana State House was laid, with due ceremony and under favorable circumstances, the weather being fine and an attendance of over 10,000 people. The ceremonies were opened with prayer by Rev. T. H. Lynch. Gen. Morris read a paper in which he gave a history of the enterprise from its conception to the present time, and concluded with a warm welcome to those present to witness the ceremonies of the day. At the close of the address by Mr. Morris Ex-Governor Hendricks delivered the oration, and Mrs. Sarah T. Bolton read an original poem appropriate to the occasion. Secretary Godown read a description of the building prefaced with a short biographical sketch of the late Edwin May, architect and designer of the immense structure. The closing ceremonies, reported in full, were as follows:

After music by the band, Governor Williams, Master of Ceremonies, stepped to the front of the platform and said:

Fellow-Citizens—We will now proceed to place the corner stone of the new Capitol upon the foundation prepared for its resting place. In this box, made of copper, we have placed various articles and memorials, indicative of our progress in art, literature and agriculture, a list of which will be read to you by Commissioner I. D. G. Nelson.

Commissioner Nelson then read a list of thirty-five articles that had been prepared to be deposited in the corner stone, consisting of State and county documents, pieces of coinage of 1880, received from the United States mint at Philadelphia, to-wit: Gold, $20, $10, $5, $2.50 and $1; silver, $1, 50c, 25c and 10c; nickel, 5c, 3c and 1c; memorial tablets, pamphlets, historical sketches, etc.

Governor Williams then continued as follows:

I will request the commissioners to place this box in the cavity in the corner stone prepared for its reception.

After the box was put in place the Governor said:

This massive corner stone is a production of our own State. In its quality it represents the entire superstructure of our new State House, and in its character it is as enduring as granite.

It has been designed by our superintending architect, and shaped by the skill of our workmen. It has been accepted by the commissioners and pronounced by the superintendent to be fit for the duty required, and I now call upon the contractors to prepare a suitable mortar-bed, and place this stone in its permanent position.

During the setting of the corner stone

OFFICIAL DECLARATION.

After the stone was set, the Governor, standing upon it, continued:

I proclaim that the corner stone of the new Capitol of the State of Indiana has this day been well set and properly placed in its permanent resting place. May its fidelity to the trust imposed upon it ever be a silent monitor to the rulers of the people for whom this house will be erected.

Bishop Talbott then closed the exercises with the

BENEDICTION:

O God, who art the ruler of Nations as of men, let thy heavenly blessing rest upon this Nation, and upon this State and people. Grant that all our institutions and laws may be constituted and established in righteousness, and may ever accord with Thy Holy commandments, so that, serving Thee in righteousness and true holiness, we may secure Thy blessed protection; and, as a Nation and people, honoring Thy name and Word, and day may not perish, but endure to all generations, to Thy honor and glory, through Him whom we acknowledge as "King of Kings and Lord of Lords," Thy Son Jesus Christ, our blessed Savior and Redeemer. Amen.

O Lord, who never fails to help and govern those whom Thou dost bring up in Thy steadfast fear and love, keep us we beseech Thee, under the protection of Thy good providence, and make us to have a perpetual fear and love of Thy Holy name, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

Direct us, O Lord, in all our doings, with thy most gracious favor, and favor us with Thy continual help; that in all our works begun, continued and ended in Thee, we may glorify Thy Holy name; and finally, by Thy mercy, obtain everlasting life, through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

The peace of God, which passeth all understanding, keep your hearts and minds in the knowledge and love of God and of his Son Jesus Christ, our Lord; and the blessing of God Almighty, the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost, be amongst you, and remain with you always. Amen.

Louis Weik and Edward Allen vs. Mary A. Sherfy.—On note. Dismissed by pliffs at their costs, and judgment for costs.

Pinafore.

The Greencastle Juvenile Pinafore Company appeared as per announcement, at Opera House, this city, on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week. The cast of characters was as follows:

The Right Hon. Sir Joseph Porter, K. C. B., First Lord of the Admiralty, Mr. Chas. Weik; Captain Corcoran, Commanding H. M. S. Pinafore, Mr. Jacob Keifer; Ralph Rackstraw, able seaman, Mr. Walter Neff; Dick Deadeye, seaman, Mr. Lin Hopkins; Bill Bobstay, Boatswain, Mr. Edward Kleinbub; Bob Becket, Midshipman, Mr. Homer Ragan; Josephine, the Captain's Daughter, Miss Emma Keifer; Little Buttercup, a Portsmouth

Bumboat Woman, Miss Katie Elliott; Hebe, Sir Joseph's First Cousin, Miss Rebecca Daniels. Chorus of thirty voices—Sir Joseph's Sisters, Cousins, Aunts, Seamen, Marines, etc.

Every person, it would seem, who attended the entertainment, was agreeably surprised and well entertained. The modest, unassuming manner, and sweet, well-trained voice of "Josephine" was all that could be desired in the part. "Little Buttercup," in voice, act and make-up, was nearer professional than amateur. "Hebe" ably seconded "Sir Joseph Porter," putting both grace and vivacity in the part. "Sir Joseph Porter, K. C. B.," was pompous, padded and perfect in his part—his recitations were well-rendered both in voice and manner, and his singing was good. "Captain Corcoran" in command H. M. S. Pinafore, commanded the undivided attention of both house and crew, by his fine rendition of the part; while "Ralph Rackstraw," who really has the most difficult character in the opera to render artistically, acted his part nicely. The parts of "Dick Deadeye," "Bill Bobstay" and "Bob Becket" were well brought forward, Hopkins doing the "Deadeye" business exceedingly well for an amateur performer. The chorus was carefully trained and merited the many compliments uttered. The fact is, great credit should be given Miss Carrie Weik, Miss Helen Hathaway and Mr. George Hathaway for the high degree of discipline and perfection shown by the entire crew of "Pinafore," which is solely due to their unceasing labor, patience and perseverance.

Died.

In Clinton township, on Sept. 21, 1880, Mildred K., infant son of Samuel C. Payne:

He was the music of our home—
A day that knew no night;
The fragrance of our garden,
A thing all smiles and light.

Above the couch we bent and prayed,
In the hall-lighted room,
As the bright hues of infant life
Sank slowly in the gloom.

The form remained, but there was now
No soul our love to share;
Farewell! with weeping hearts we said,
Child of our love and care.

Go to thy rest, fair child;
Go to thy dreamless bed,
While yet so gentle, undefiled,
With blessings on thy head.

Fresh roses in thy hand,
Buds on thy pillow laid—
Haste from this dark and fearful land
Where flowers so quickly fade.

Because thy smile was fair—
Thy lip and eye so bright,
Because thy loving cradle care
Was such a dear delight,

Shall love, with weak embrace,
Thy upreared wing detain?
No, gentle angel, seek thy place
Amid the cherub train.

EDITOR STATE:

I see, through the papers, that there are persons in Indiana begging for the suffering people of "bleeding Kansas." Now, my advice to the people of Indiana is to keep their money at home until they know where it goes to. There is plenty to eat and wear in Kansas, and lots to spare. Now, Mr. Editor, the truth is, there are a good many people in Kansas who came here from the east expecting to make a living without work, and that class of people are in need of aid. But all who have made an effort have plenty and to spare. In the extreme western part of Kansas it has been very dry, and they have raised nothing. But let them pick up their little beds and walk back into civilization. The Western part of Kansas is set apart for grasshoppers, Indians, etc.

THE STAR.

CITY AND COUNTY

The Indianapolis Sentinel of Tuesday says: Miss E. C. Rowland, of Greencastle, is visiting friends at No. 81 Massachusetts Avenue.

There was a "row and a ruction" between Jas. Spurgin and a colored individual, name unknown, near the northwest corner of the public square, Wednesday night—result, Spurgin dampened the African's ardor and the African fired his little pistol, but failed to wing his man.

A special dispatch to the Cincinnati Enquirer, dated Danville, Ind., Sept. 27, says that, while attending the rally there, George Owens, of Greencastle, had his pockets rifled of their contents, losing, among other valuables, a silver watch worth $70. Several other losses of pocket-books, containing small amounts of money, are reported.

Marriage licenses have been issued to John C. Browning and Mary O. Hays, Charles E. Hill and Martha A. Wilson, James K. Coverdill and Mary Young, Richard Sammond and Sarah Z. Floyd, John F. Piffley and Emma Wilson, John B. Oliver and Susan Lear, Stephen A. D. Gorham and Louisa W. Christy.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The readers of THE STAR will please bear in mind that we do not hold ourselves accountable for or endorse the opinions of correspondents published in these columns. We simply give space to our correspondents that the people may learn what the thoughts of their neighbors are.

South Endings.

Geo. Hippell, a blacksmith from New Albany, delivered a Democratic speech to a large number of hearers, Tuesday evening, at the stand near the rolling-mill. The weather was too inclement for the glee club to come out, but, notwithstanding, the meeting was an interesting one. The recent rains were blessings, for nearly all the cisterns in this neighborhood were dry, and the rolling-mill pond was nearly so. Lawrence Allen has started his cigar factory. Tramps are getting quite numerous. They will not be allowed to sleep in the ash-bins at the mill this winter, as they did last year. It was too cold for the boys to go down to the "springs" to play "casino" last Sunday. The "little casino" cigar, at Browning & Butlers, is good, although it only counts one. We like to "pull" a good cigar. [Caution: This is no hint for anybody to "set 'em up."] Oc.

North Greencastle.

The Public Spring has been cleaned out, and good water can now be had. The "sailor boys" who went to Danville, last Monday, got wet, but, although their clothes were dampened, their ardor was not. It is reported that the North End will soon have another wedding. The prospective bridegroom walked into his girl's affections by taking her and the whole family to Barnum's circus. McK. Milligan and mother have removed to their new property on North College Avenue, recently purchased from Mrs. J. Trautman. Geo. Briscoe has purchased from Goulding & Ireland a portion of the lot on which the planing-mill stands. Wm. Berrigan is yard-master on the L. N. A. & C., in place of Will Murphy. A party of temperance folks went to Portland Mills, last Sunday morning, in the interest of the cause. Wm. White, formerly of this city, has been married at Mattoon, Ill. Charley Pfeifferberger is building an addition to his blacksmith shop. Railroad business is brisk. Charley Martin, ("Tuck," of the firm of Nip and Tuck,) went to Indianapolis, this week, to work up a "case;" he also attended the Exposition. Bill Murphy has about recovered. It is getting too cool for Sunday enjoyment at the "park," north of town. Why don't the politicians hold meetings on the depot platform, like they did in days of yore? A

The following officers have been elected by the Juniors:

Pres., Miss Maggie Noble; Vice Pres., Jessie Birch; Cor. Sec., Rosa Redding; Rec. Sec., Tina Farrow; Treas., Lizzie Brattin; Sergeant-at-arms, Miss Carrie Smith; Attorney, Miss Anna Walker.

The Asbury Monthly will be out the latter part of next week. The Monthly was a failure last year, financially, and the students should do all in their power to gain more subscribers for the same, in order that a like occurrence may not happen this year.

Lieut. Hamilton is proving himself to be an earnest, enthusiastic worker, and is doing more for the interests of the battalion, in the way of fixing up the armory, etcetera, than has ever before been accomplished.

The Senior speeches this week have been delivered by Messrs. Asbury, Conrey, Cantwell and Coffin.

The lecture to-morrow will be delivered by Dr. Earp.

Miss Tina Farrow has returned to college.

Prof. McNutt was unable to hear his classes the latter part of last week, on account of sickness.

A burglar broke into the rooms occupied by Messrs. Urmston and Joyce, last Friday night, but was promptly assisted by the occupants down stairs, whom he had awakened.

There is a wonderful improvement in the singing at chapel exercises over last year. Unfortunately the same choir does not sing at lecture, and as a consequence the music is of a very inferior quality. The musical talent is in the college, and if one with ability would take charge of it, we would have good singing on all occasions.

Dr. Marine conducted chapel exercises Monday morning.

C. L. Brooke, class '79, is teaching school at Gessa, Vermilion county, this State.

The Philomathean difficulty is at length settled. Miss Grace Hoyt is now President.

Dr. Mansfield would like to have persons throughout the county send him specimens of rock, etc. He is rapidly building up the museum, and we will soon have one of the best in the State.

Mr. Ed. Newhouse, formerly a member of the class of '81, died of typhoid fever, at Montmercy, Ind., last Monday night. He was a member of the Phi Kappa Psi Fraternity.

Hamrick's Station.

Have had a very nice rain. Mr. Mercer and wife have gone to house-keeping at his old home here. May their future days be full of happiness and many joys. Mr. Bence and Mr. Houck attended the rally at Danville on Monday. Mr. John Lydiek has been wrestling with the chills. Wesley Landes is on the sick list.

Mr. Henry Bence, of Louisville has been spending a few days with his aged brother the past week. Moses Boone is happy over the appearance of another son. Phil. Lewis enjoys his leisure hours riding in his new buggy. Mrs. Gage, of New Albany, is visiting relatives here. Miss Mattie Wilson, one of our charming young ladies, was married, last Sunday, to Mr. Hill, of Belle Union. We wish them much happiness. Us Two.

Tecumseh, Nebraska.

EDITOR STAR.—I promised several readers of THE STAR that when I reached the place that I expected to make my future home that, as it would be impossible to write to all, I would tell them, through these columns, all I know about Nebraska.

I will just say to your many readers that Southeastern Nebraska cannot be beaten anywhere for corn and hogs. Wheat yields an average crop.

Johnson County, Nebraska, is a beautiful county, with the Nemaha River running from the southeast to the northwest corner. This stream has a narrow, deep channel, resembling very much the Missouri. The soil is very black and deep, and is excellent for corn and pretty good for wheat. The climate is mild and pleasant, and there is a reasonable amount of rainfall. The society is splendid. Tecumseh has six churches—one M. E., one Christian, one Baptist, one Catholic, one Universalist and one Presbyterian Church. And, by the way, Mr. Randolph, who has preached at Bainbridge so often in the past, is the Presbyterian preacher here.

There is not a licensed saloon in Tecumseh. I attended the county fair here, one week, and there was on exhibition as good cattle, hogs, sheep, grain of all kinds, potatoes, cabbage and all kinds of vegetation and fruit, as Indiana can produce, and Johnson county, Nebraska, can shame Putnam county, Ind., in horses. I never saw better horses than they have here. The hogs are the best Poland China and Berkshire swine, and I never saw better at any fair than at the fair here.

The great beauty of this country is in the fact that the country is ahead of the towns. But the same cannot be said of Kansas; there the towns are far ahead of the country. I have traveled considerably over Kansas and Nebraska this year, and I will just say to those who contemplate emigrating West, that they cannot do better than to settle in Northeastern Kansas or Southeastern Nebraska; but they don't want to go too far south or west in Kansas, nor too far north or west in Nebraska. For when you get too far south you get too much sand and alkali; and if you get too far north in Nebraska you get too much sand; and if you get too far west in either State, you get where they are troubled with the drouth. It has been my experience that when you get too far west, so near the mountains, you do not get the spring rains until the snow begins to melt in the mountains, which is from the 1st to the 20th of June, making it too late for early crops.

Kansas is not as good for corn as Nebraska, but is, perhaps, better for wheat. Grain is reasonably cheap here: Corn is 15 cts. per bushel in the field or 20 cts. delivered; wheat, 65 or 70 cts. per bushel; flour, $3 per cwt.; pork, $1.50 per cwt., and everything else in proportion.

Above we present an engraving of the new Astronomical Observatory, at Rochester, N. Y. At a time when all are noting the remarkable development of this country, it is cause for congratulation that the literary and scientific institutions of the land are keeping pace with its material growth. This truth is being confirmed every day, and the erection of the new Astronomical Observatory at Rochester, N. Y., is a most important step in this direction. Prof. Swift, who has become known throughout the world as the fortunate discoverer of so many comets, has labored under great disadvantages at his work, owing to a lack of proper facilities. The new observatory will entirely overcome these troubles, as the telescope which is to be mounted in its dome is the third largest in size in America. But however valuable all future discoveries may be, the astronomers of this country have accomplished many wonderful things in the past. Prof. Hall, of the Washington Observatory, discovered the two moons which accompany Mars, one of the grandest achievements of the present century. Prof. Bond discovered the eighth satellite of Saturn in 1848 and the transparent ring of Saturn in 1850. The separation of Biella's comet into two parts was first seen by American astronomers, and during the eclipse of 1878, Profs. Watson and Smith discovered three anti-mercurial planets. In addition to these great discoveries the United States claims the honor of finding more than a thousand double and triple stars (many of them being the largest of this class of bodies) over fifty asteroids and fifteen new comets. When it is remembered that most of this work was done with inferior instruments and in a country where storms and clouds are so prevalent, the industry and perseverance can be partially understood.

The new observatory at Rochester is to be devoted primarily to discoveries. Its arrangements and facilities are specially designed for this purpose and much may reasonably be expected from it. It is named after Mr. H. H. Warner, proprietor of the Safe Remedies, by whom it has been most liberally endowed, and its locality is one of the most commanding in Rochester. The new telescope will be twenty-two feet in length and its lens is sixteen inches in diameter, while the dome of the tower will be arranged with the latest appliances for sweeping the heavens in every direction.

While America is so greatly distinguished by inventions and remarkable enterprises, there is much to indicate that it will take an equally high rank in the realm of discoveries and it may be predicted with a reasonable degree of certainty, that astronomy will eventually find its highest advancement at the hands of American investigators, and that a goodly portion of this work may be expected from the new Warner Observatory at Rochester.

Patrick Henry on the Future Greatness of the United States.

The moment that the United States had established their independence on a firm basis, Patrick Henry, so renowned for the bold and active part he took in effecting this revolution, was the first to forget all previous animosities, and to hold out the hand of reconciliation and peace. He was a strong advocate for every measure which would induce the return of the refugees who had espoused the cause of the mother country, and made a proposition in their favor which was very severely animadverted upon by some of the most respected members of Congress. Among others, Judge Tyler, the speaker of the Assembly, vehemently opposed him, and in a committee of the House, demanded, "how he above all the other men, could think of inviting into his family an enemy from whose insults and injuries he had suffered so severely?"

The following was his prompt and beautiful reply:

"I acknowledge indeed, sir, that I have many personal injuries of which to complain; but when I enter this hall of legislation I endeavor, as far as human infirmity will permit, to leave all personal feelings behind me. This question is a national one, and in deciding it, if you act wisely, you will regard nothing but the interest of the nation. On the altar of my country's good I am willing to sacrifice all personal resentments, all private wrongs, and I am sure I should most absurdly flatter myself if I thought that I was the only person in this House capable of making such a sacrifice."

Mr. Henry then proceeded to show in a very forcible manner the policy of using every possible means of augmenting the population of a country as yet so thinly inhabited as America, whose future greatness he thus prophetically depicted:

"Encourage emigration—encourage the husbandmen, the mechanics, the merchants of the whole world, to come and settle in the land of promise—make it the house of the skillful, industrious, and happy, as well as the asylum of the distressed—fill up the measure of your population as speedily as you can, by the means which Heaven hath placed in your power—and I venture to prophesy there are those now living who will see this favored land among the most powerful on earth. Yes, sir, they will see her great in arts, and in arms—her golden harvests waving over immeasurable extent—her commerce penetrating the most distant seas, and her cannon silence the vain boast of those who now affect to rule the waves."

Mr. Henry's proposition was carried, and every succeeding year proves that his anticipations were well founded. America soon experienced the policy of his counsels; and tide after tide, emigration has ever since continued to roll wealth and improvement over her provinces.

Explaining a Joke.

(London Advertiser.)

He came into the office modestly and shyly, as was befitting, and asked to see the man who put jokes in the Advertiser. The joker was engaged in reading some very exciting tables of trade and navigation returns, in order to inform "An Old Subscriber" how many gallons of beeswax had been exported from the Province of Prince Edward's Island in the year 1871, and was consequently in a very hilarious mood. The visitor took off his hat, mopped his manly brow with a dirty handkerchief and placed before the newspaper man a scrap of paper on which was written:

"When Sir Joseph Porter dies the company will be treated to half-and-half—Porter and beer."

The newspaper man read it, looked up and exclaimed, "What is it about?"

"It is just a little joke, you see."

"Ah, I didn't notice. I will read it again."

He reperused, and then asked, "Where is the joke?"

"Why, the play on words—a pun, you know—Porter and beer."

"Oh, ah, yes. Porter and beer. Well, did you ask Mr. Porter about this? Will he be pleased to see his name in the paper in that connection?"

"Why, there is no such person. Sir Joseph Porter is a character in 'Pinafore.'"

"Well," mused the newspaper man, "if there is no such person I don't see how he can die. A person who don't exist can't die very successfully. Any attempt to kill a man who don't live must necessarily prove a failure."

"But you don't understand," explained the amateur joker. "You see the whole point is in the play on the two words—porter and beer. Porter and beer mixed is called half-and-half. Now you catch the idea, don't you?"

"Well I understand it so far. But where's the joke?"

"Why, I explained—"

"Yes, I know that you explained. You said porter and beer mixed is called half-and-half. But that kind of porter is not a man—it is a liquor, and anyhow, you don't spell beer right."

"But that's the point. You notice there the words have different meanings and the same sound. It is to bring out a different idea than the word itself conveys that I have tried, and I flatter myself—"

"No, no," interrupted the newspaper man, "not flatter. Your grammar is at fault. The joke is flat, not flatter."

At this point one of the people sanctum interfered, and the enemy beat a graceful retreat without any casualties.

Why will you use salves and lotions and other outward appliances for the cure of skin diseases? The relief thus obtained is only temporary. Why not strike at the root of all skin diseases by getting your blood and liver in a healthy, vigorous condition? This can only be done effectively and thoroughly by the use of Dr. Guyott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla.

THE WORK OF MINING.

How It is Carried On and What It Is—How Ore Deposits are Found and Developed.

(Boston Sunday Herald.)

As the present is a time of great development in mining industry, it may not be amiss to say something about what mining is.

Briefly, then, mining is the extraction of the ores and minerals from the earth, that is, from where they have been deposited in the rocks. Mineral deposits occur in nearly all countries of the globe. The presence of such deposits is indicated by various signs. Sometimes the veins, if harder than the inclosing rocks, crop out at the surface; but more frequently the veins are indicated by decomposed rocks, or rocks that are honeycombed.

But ores do not always occur in veins. Sometimes they are in masses known as pockets, etc., filling gashes or fissures in the rocks. When indications of deposits occur they are sought after by the methods known to experience, such as by pits, cuts, drifts or borings. This work is called prospecting. When a vein is only indicated by drift material, it is sought after by cuts, which are open trenches dug in various directions. When the vein is supposed to have been struck, a pit or hole is dug to test its dimensions, dip and quality.

Boring is often employed for determining the character of rock strata, and the position of mineral deposits in them. Mineral veins of metallic ores are usually nearly vertical in position. Coal seams, on the other hand, are nearly always horizontal, or but very slightly inclined. The value of deposits is tested by shafts and drifts, usually excavated within the deposit itself.

When large operations, like those of hydraulic mining, are contemplated, the body of earthy gravel, cement, etc., if its value is not already known, is tested by shafts sunk to the bed rock, at a sufficient number of points to give an indication of its average contents. In the case of beds and veins, which dip at a uniform angle, the shaft is often carried down on the deposit itself, and is then called a slope or an incline.

For less regular deposits, a vertical shaft is driven at some distance from the outcrop in the hanging wall, so as to strike the vein at a considerable depth. A gallery runs from the surface in a horizontal line, to effect access and drainage, and is called an adit, and, in some situations, as at the base of steep hills, this may be made the principle feature of the mine, the main workings being carried on through it until the vein is exhausted above its level.

Mining shafts are generally rectangular in section, and range in size from four to six feet on the shorter sides, and from six to twenty feet or more on the longer sides. This form facilitates timbering, which is the lining of the shaft with beams and plank, so as to prevent the gravel, etc., from caving in, and also to hold the guides for the vessels in which the ore is brought up from the workings below.

When the mine is opened by a vertical shaft, the vein is sometimes cut by a crosscut level, or tunnel, run from the shaft through barren rock, at a point higher than the intersection of the shaft and the vein. From the point where the cross-cut enters the vein, levels or tunnels are run in both directions horizontally on the vein. After the main shaft has reached the vein, other levels are also run. After it has been carried through the vein, the distance between both vein and shaft grows larger with increasing depth, and the vein must be again opened by cross-cuts from the shaft at different levels. The levels opened in the vein succeed each other every 60 or 100 feet in depth.

To perform the work of extracting ores with economy and safety, many things must be considered. If the vein is solid and has to be blasted, there is not much fear of its falling down upon workers, and, if the hanging wall or upper country rock is sound, mining may be carried on for some time without timbering or the placing of wooden supports in the levels or tunnels of the mine; but, if both are of a loose and friable nature, then every foot that is driven has to be timbered and secured against caving in.

Timbers are posts placed vertically up the sides of the tunnel, with a cross-piece at top, and sometimes below, the latter being known as spreaders. Split wood or sawed boards are placed as sheathing upon and between the timbers, and sometimes at the sides, and in this way an inclosed, sheathed passageway is secured.

The vein stuff is taken out by the miners, who drill holes and blast out the rock, or take it out with picks, wedges and bars.

When it is first taken out, the larger masses are reduced in size by sledges and then taken to the shaft where it is hoisted up to the surface. There it undergoes inspection and only the ore that will pay for smelting or milling is selected for the ore heap. This selection is called cobbing. The ore after being cobbled is then forwarded to the mill or furnace. If it is a free gold ore, it is first crushed with a breaker, and then put under heavy iron stamps, which are operated by water or steam power, where it is reduced to fine powder. This powder is driven off by water, and flows with the latter over copper plates, which are coated with mercury, which are supposed to attract and intercept all the gold coming in contact with them. Silver, lead, copper and other ores are usually treated by the fire process, and their metals recovered in various ways.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effective remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and efficient treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effective cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhoea, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartics that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

Take a lemon and make a hole in it large enough to insert the finger or thumb affected, and leave it there for 24 hours.

In most cases, this will bring the pus to the surface in the shape of a yellow lump the size of a small pea. Open it and let the matter escape, and it will then heal over like an ordinary sore. If the pus is not brought to the surface in 24 hours, procure a fresh lemon and keep the part affected inserted in it for 24 hours more, when the result is sure to be as above given. This is a certain remedy and is not painful.

Greencastle at the State Fair.

The Indianapolis Journal says:

One of the most interesting exhibits at the State Fair this year is that made by Renick, Curtis & Co., of Greencastle, Ind. Their article of exhibit consists of a combination carriage and buggy, their patent being a slide and jump seat, by means of which the vehicle is transformed at will from a double-seat carriage to a single-seated buggy, and vice versa. Nothing on the ground is so universally admired, and nothing certainly is worthier.

The Indianapolis Sentinel also has something to say, as follows:

Messrs. Renick, Curtis & Co., of Greencastle, exhibit at the east end of the Exposition Building a decided novelty and a great improvement in carriage manufacture. It is what is called a slide and jump seat vehicle, by which a one-seated buggy can be instantly transformed into a comfortable two-seated carriage, and vice versa. The front seat can also be changed into a baby's crib that is both pleasant and safe. It is a great improvement, and all should see it.
