ECZEMA FROM CHILDHOOD

When an infant my body broke out all over with an eruption of rash, which became more aggravated as I grew older. Every noted physician in our section was tried or consulted. When I came of age I visited Hot Springs, Ark., and was treated by the best medical men, but was not benefited. When all things had failed I determined to try S. S. S., and in four months was entirely cured. The terrible Eczema was all gone, not a sign left; my general health built up, and I have never had any return of the disease.

AFFAIRS OF THE RAILWAYS

THE INDIANA MIDLAND OPERATING SAND CREEK COAL MINES.

Their Trains Run over the Vandavia and More Big Four Trains Needed.

President Harry Crawford, of the Indiana Midland, has reopened the coal mines belonging to his road at Sand Creek and now has a large force of miners at work. Mr. Crawford owns 514 acres of good coal lands near Sand Creek and has increased the output of the mines to over twenty cars per day. On the first of the present month President Crawford entered into an agreement by which the trains of the Indiana Midland could run over the Vandavia tracks from Brown's Valley to Sand Creek in order to move the coals from these mines. The agreement calls for the movement of one or more trains each way over the strip of Vandavia track between the two stations, the Indiana Midland to furnish a complete train with a full crew of men with the exception of the conductor who will be furnished by the Vandavia in the shape of a pilot. Col. Crawford is now running one train to and from the mines every day. About twenty loaded cars are placed in these trains and the coal is taken out over the Indiana Midland road. A portion of it is turned over to the L. N. & C. The coal traffic from these mines over the Indiana Midland, although it has only been moving for about two weeks has already shown a great increase, and the increase bids fair to continue. The earnings of the road will be greatly enhanced by business, and President Crawford hopes to make some much needed repairs on the road bed and also to his line.

Railway Rumblings.
Judge Cooley has returned to Washington to assume the duties of chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The Illinois Central has put in effect the Illinois rate prescribed by the Iowa railroad commission, and the Chicago, St. Paul and Kansas City railway has issued an order to the same effect.

James M. Barr, Superintendent of the Nebraska Division of the Union Pacific, has resigned, and was succeeded to-day by Robert B. Bickel, who occupied the same position under General Manager Dickinson, two years ago.

W. C. Tomlinson, who recently severed his connection with the Vandavia as train dispatcher, is in the city. He is now located at Bloomington, where he is dispatching trains for the Monon. He will remove his family to his new home on November 1.

The last key of the last section of the metal lining of the St. Clair tunnel, constructed by the Grand Trunk at Sarnia, Ont., has been put in place, and the putting down of the railway track is now going on. The tunnel will be ready for traffic in February next.

General Manager E. St. John, of the Rock Island, has returned from a trip to Puget Sound, the Yosemite Valley and southern California. While on the Pacific slope the officials of the Southern Pacific Company refused to haul his car in their trains, but instead sent him everywhere on their lines that he desired to go with a special engine.

George A. Clark, who has been successfully chief clerk in the train department of the Mackay, is at Evansville, where Captain Grammer and E. O. Hopkins will assume the duties of general freight and passenger agent of the Ohio Valley, vice A. E. Shrader, resigned. Mr. Smith is a brother of T. E. Smith, the Vandavia train dispatcher, and formerly worked in the E. T. H. freight house in this city as night operator. Mr. Shrader will take a much needed rest before re-entering railroad life, but refuses to say what position he will take.

There is a growing demand for a local passenger train on the Big Four, and from points west of this city at hours that will be more convenient to residents of towns wishing to trade with local merchants. As the trains now run there is an early train from the west which reaches here too early to be of material advantage to either the residents of the towns along the line or to the local merchants. The train for the West leaves too late in the evening. There should be a train from the West to arrive here at about 10 o'clock, and one leaving here for the West not later than 4 or 4:15 in the afternoon. This would allow people coming to the city about six hours here which would be ample time to do their trading and still afford them an opportunity to reach home before dark. The company's official should consider the matter. There are a number of thriving towns along the Big Four west of here, and such a move would undoubtedly prove beneficial to the company.

Martinsville.
H. C. Howell and wife returned from an extended trip to the Northern part of the state Tuesday. This week will end Miss Hattie Berkley's career as editor of the Planet, which she has so ably edited. The cause is said to be marriage. The successor will be Miss Maggie Maring, of Casey. Several from this place attended the Palmer rally at Marshall Tuesday. Mr. Lucius and Miss Nellie Fasig, returned Monday from a week's visit in St. Louis. Prof. Burr of Centralia, Ill., has organized a class in vocal music. Ed McGowan has moved back to Terre Haute. Misses Jennie Daugherty and Minda Bair were in Marshall Tuesday.

The Normal Lecture Course.
A course of lectures to be known as the Normal course will be given this Winter and partial arrangements have been made. The lecturers have all been secured but in several instances the dates have not been fixed. Following are the lecturers engaged:

George W. Cable, November 12.
Leland Powers, December.
George Kennan, February 16.
Lola Glee Club, April.
Dr. Gannanua or Senator Voorhees.
Major Russell Corwell.
Dr. T. C. McDaniel.
Miss Frances Willard.

One Man in For It.
Patrolmen Hinton's badge was taken from him last night, by Superintendent Davis. He was charged with having been asleep on duty on Monday night, in No. One's engine house, at Third street and Lafayette avenue.

The Policemen's Ball.
The tickets for the patrolmen's ball to be held at Germania hall on the night of November 20th, are selling with unprecedented rapidity. The attendance at that swell affair promises to be phenomenal.

STATE NEWS.

The railway depot at Covington burned. The Sixty-third Indiana Regimental Association will hold a reunion at Covington on the 16th.

James Mealey, of Laketon, was robbed last night of eighteen $20 bills which he had concealed under his pillow. Scarlet fever has broken out in such malignant form at Oakton, that the village schools have been discontinued.

Evansville wants to be represented in the list of signal service stations, claiming that it is a "weather breeding" point.

While coming down a grade on a heavy freight on the Monon line, yesterday, Frank Cassidy, brakeman, was thrown from the top of a car and cut to pieces. He lived at Washington.

The trial of W. F. Pettit for the murder of his wife finally began. The report that the defense would swear Judge Snyder off the bench proved to be nothing more than a rumor.

William Bell, of Yorktown, abandoned his home in 1876, and he returned last Friday, after fourteen years' silence, to find Mrs. Bell pleasantly situated as the wife of John S. Griffith and all his children dead but one.

It is claimed that the locomotive on the Chicago & Erie which blew up near Huntington, and dangerously injured the engineer and fireman, was condemned two years ago, and that employees had been discharged for refusing to man the engine.

Maggie Twomey, of Logansport, who disappeared from home when 16 years of age, and who returned last week after ten years' absence, coming back a ravishing maiden, has so far recovered her reason that she can give some slight account of her wanderings.

Political Pickups.
Hon. E. V. Brookshire, Carson Hamill and Peter Miller went to New Goshen yesterday, where Mr. Brookshire addressed a meeting in the afternoon.

"Have you been attending the temperance meetings of late?" was asked of Wesley Glover, Independent candidate for auditor. "No, sir; my canvass is an active one and I have little time to attend to outside affairs."

Said a leading colored man this morning: "This story that an opposition to Harry Russell has grown up among the colored citizens is untrue. Billy Stout's friends have been going around among the colored people saying that Harry Russell went before the grand jury and secured the indictment of assault with intent to kill against the colored man who knocked a white carpenter down through the joists and open floors of the Herz building when it was being repaired. Now I have heard that before the grand jury and under the indictment was returned, pushed the case in court before a jury and the colored man was sent to the pen for four years, and all this after the man had been discharged by Judge Mack."

A HAVEN OF GOLD

By FRANCES SELOUS.

This lovely pleasure dome and all its appendages Mr. Washington Potts had bought for himself, but before he could enjoy himself in it he required to see it filled with an elegant and well dressed mob. To obtain this end Josiah conducted Lady Charlotte Craddock. He went to call upon her one morning towards the end of June, and found her pale and exhausted. She had not yet recovered from an attack which had been with her half a year, and which, and who now threatened summonses and county courts, and—most terrible of all—threatened to send a man to take away the boys and then there unless Lady Charlotte paid him the trifling sum of $400, due by her to him for horse hire. Lady Charlotte promised to send a check on account by the end of the week, and rehearsed the gamut of equivocations used by people who live on credit, but Mr. Buck, of Buck & Jibb, jobmasters and horse dealers, Oxford street, W., was not so easily pacified.

"You let me have a check for two hundred pounds at five o'clock this afternoon, and I'll leave my horses in your stable; you don't, and I'll send my man for them, and even if they are in the Row I'll have the harness took off and leave the carriage there. When I say a thing I mean it, and I mean that," and Mr. Buck had departed, leaving Lady Charlotte to face the full awfulness of the demand. A balance of £70 at her banker's and £200 to be paid before nightfall. It was horrid. For a few moments Lady Charlotte gave herself up to despair, but at the end of half an hour she had formed a desperate resolution.

At first she had almost entertained the idea of failing to pay and letting the horses be taken, but the recollections of Hurlingham, where she had an engagement that very afternoon, the Row, and the thousand and one occasions when horses and a carriage are absolutely indispensable, made that impossible. No, Lady Charlotte would go to a money lender. She knew they were disreputable, and knew that they would cheat her; but she must trust to providence or her own wits to save her from possible worry in the future, and she must provide for the inexorable Now.

Lady Charlotte put on her oldest gown and drove in a hansom to the office of a member of the tribe of Levi, whose shining brass door plate announced him to be a solicitor, but whose name and appearance suggested usury. After a great amount of discussion and explanation Mr. Abraham Levi stated that he had no ready money on hand and was himself, indeed, not a money lender, but would act in that capacity on behalf of a friend who had some few hundreds to invest. When Lady Charlotte left his office Mr. Levi had undertaken to send a trustworthy clerk with notes for £300 to her house at 8 o'clock, the earliest hour by which the obliging friend could be communicated with, and his client had signed an agreement to pay monthly installments of £100, with interest added, until the debt should be paid off, the first payment to be made one month from the day of the signing of the agreement. The Hebrew solicitor, who only asked a moderate commission for his assistance, drew up an agreement, so shrouded in technicalities that Lady Charlotte read and signed it in utter unconsciousness of the fact that she was undertaking to pay 180 per cent for the accommodation.

Lady Charlotte sent notes for £200 to Messrs. Buck & Jibb and reserved £100 for her personal use, trusting that she could ward off all large payments until the end of the season at least.

Wearied with the unusual business of the morning Lady Charlotte leaned back in a low saddlebag lounge seat and gently fanned herself as she greeted Mr. Josiah Washington Potts.

"I hear you have bought the Reminshaw estate?"

"Yes, I guess I am boss of Reminshaw Abbey and park. I've fixed it up and it's all comfortable now. There's a tower at one end, supposed to date from Stephen; well, I've had an elevator fitted there; electric light, electric indicators, complete telephonic communication. In fact you wouldn't know the old hole again; and now I want your ladyship to come down and stay a few weeks, or as long as you like, and to ask a party."

"I've asked all the people that you brought to my dinner, but they won't, half fill the place; and I want to have relays of company, one batch after another, as one reads about your regular swells in the society papers. They are a sort of catfish for us self made men and show us the way we should go if we want to be fashionable."

"Just so. But surely, my dear Mr. Potts, you have friends of your own? A man of your wealth must have made lots of friends?" answered Lady Charlotte languidly, not taking the trouble to appear interested.

"Oh, of course I've made friends among speculators and that, but they aren't what I want to know. I want the A1 brand, as we used to say in the west, and I know you can bring them. I've bought a launch, and the coach that I have ordered will be down in a week; there shall be illuminations, water parties, a ball, anything you like. You just give the word of command, and I'll see that it's done."

"It is very flattering of you to ask me, of course, but you must allow me to consider the matter. I am feeling rather exhausted now, so I regret that I cannot ask you to luncheon, but call again in a few days' time and I will let you know. Good-bye, dear Mr. Potts."

Lady Charlotte did not at first intend to accede to the American's request that she should invite her friends to his house, but a certain unanimity among her tradespeople in sending in their bills with urgent reminders during the last few days of the season, together with the threatening tones of some who declined to take any further orders until they received a settlement in full, made her decide to go to Reminshaw.

"Anything would be better," she thought, "than staying here to be pestered with their letters. I can't pay them and they must know that I can't. What do they want? They can't put notify would be in prison. Directly I get my dividends I shall give these harpies something on account. I am sure they can't expect me to do more. I would go to the continent, only one can't travel on credit. I suppose I had better oblige Mr. Potts." Lady Charlotte pronounced the honorable name of Potts as she might have swallowed a tonic.

So Lady Charlotte invited a large party of friends and acquaintance to meet her at Reminshaw, first explaining the strange circumstances of a wealthy man, owner of a beautiful country seat and eager to fill his house with people, and yet not possessing friends enough to occupy half the spare bedrooms.

Lady Charlotte's set jeered at Mr. Washington Potts, spoke of the absurdity of the thing, and with few exceptions accepted his invitations. There were rumors of a pastoral play to be performed in the open air, and as respect for the salt is an eastern fact and not a European fact the guests arrived bent upon amusing themselves and on being entertained, and determined to ignore all obligation to their entertainer.

Given the disposition to make merry and the wherewithal to do so, and the results are likely to be satisfactory. There were excursions by water organized with the greatest skill and precision by Mr. Potts. He was once overheard to say in disclaiming a compliment upon the subject that a man who had personally superintended the shipping of 10,000 hogs ought to be equal to shipping a few dozen swells. There were garden parties and tennis parties, dances and charades, and all Mr. Washington Potts' guests declared that Reminshaw Abbey was a delightful place to stay at. But they were apt in quiet moments, when the master of the house was absent, to gather into little groups and discuss his peculiarities.

"The creature is so candidly vulgar," said one.

"I wonder why Lady Charlotte touts for him; she seems quite to have taken him up. He isn't in her set, I know—in fact, I don't think he is in any set at all. Do you think she means to marry him for his money?"

"I should hardly think so. They say he was a pork butcher in America. Then there was Lady Charlotte's affair in India, don't you know?"

"Do you think that means anything? There always are affairs in India, don't you know, when young women go out with their husbands. So much scandal and backbiting and so little else to do, they are obliged to take refuge in flirtation," the conversation drifted away from Lady Charlotte and her intentions.
