AFFAIRS OF THE RAILWAYS.

THE BIG FOUR WILL PURCHASE THE C. W. & M.

They Will be Joined in the Purchase by the Erie-Mackey Refuses to Talk on the Subject.

At their meeting in New York Wednesday the directors of the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis declared a semi-annual dividend of 1 1/2 per cent. on the common stock and a quarterly dividend of 1 1/4 per cent. on the preferred stock. It is understood that negotiations are under way for the purchase by the Big Four and the Lake Shore railroad companies of the Cincinnati, Wabash & Michigan railroad. The Cincinnati, Wabash & Michigan is a valuable piece of property and is a valuable feeder for the Big Four. The line is 165 miles in length and runs from Benton Harbor, Mich., to Anderson, Ind., where it makes direct connection with the Big Four. The latter now owns an interest in the road in conjunction with D. J. Mackey, president of the Mackey roads. A New York reporter sought an interview with D. J. Mackey while that gentleman was in New York but Mr. Mackey refused to be interviewed in regard to the deal. There seems to be little doubt, however, that the purchase will be made, as in its present condition the Cincinnati, Wabash & Michigan is of little value to Mr. Mackey, he holding only a part interest in the line. It is also a fact that Big Four money is behind the extension of the Cincinnati, Wabash & Michigan extension from Anderson to Rushville.

Railway Rumblings.
George B. Willie, traveling passenger agent of the Illinois Central, is in the city.

The preliminary statement of the Union Pacific for October shows: Gross earnings, $1,306,022; increase, $5,364; net earnings, $1,482,508; decrease, $482,459. The expenses show an increase of $487,723. For the ten months ending October 31st, the showing is: Gross earnings, $13,559,783; increase, $3,485,502; net, $12,019,294; decrease, $783,059; expenses increased, $4,300,098.

James C. Pinsky, treasurer of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, was summoned before Judge Blodgett at Chicago Wednesday and fined $500 and costs, with commitment until paid, for refusing to answer questions put to him by the grand jury and for declining to produce books and papers of the company to assist in its investigations by the interstate commerce commission for violations of the law.

The Pennsylvania has withdrawn its order to give a free pass to each party of ten and two free passes to each party of fifteen and check 300 pounds of baggage for each member of such party, in addition to giving a rate of 2 cents per mile for baggage passengers. This wide open order was issued to meet secret competition by rival lines on theatrical traffic and it is understood that the Pennsylvania has gained its point and secured satisfactory assurances that secret cutting will be discontinued.

A call for a meeting of the Western with it a preliminary agreement of going around. C. P. Huntington of the Southern Pacific, has signed it, and R. R. Cabell of the Rock Island, announces his willingness to sign. President Perkins of the Burlington has been authorized to sign by his board of directors. It proposed to form a new combination to succeed the present several associations existing west of Chicago and St. Louis. The new association is to embrace all roads west of Chicago to the Pacific coast, and is to continue not less than five years; is to have a general manager or commissioner with such assistants as may be agreed upon or found necessary; will regulate, through competitive tariffs, the management of competitive business and the conduct of outside agencies for the procuring of traffic as well as routing it.

Marshall.

Miss Ida Mitchell is visiting relatives in Charleston. She attended the wedding of her cousin, Miss May Mitchell, of that city, last night. L. M. Day has been spending a week in East Chicago, Ind., with relatives. Miss Nellie Young, of Chicago, who has been spending several weeks with relatives here, went to Terre Haute today. After a few days' visit, she will return to her home in Chicago. Taubenecker started today Tacoma, Wash., to look after some business. A. Ross has moved into the house he recently purchased of Martin and Legore. C. H. Griffith, Jr., of Galesburg, came down today to attend to some business. He will return to-night, taking his daughter with him. It is stated that the Casey Acorn, the F. M. B. A. organ of the county, is soon to be moved to Marshall. Andy Kaufman, of Terre Haute, was in the city today. Chenoweth, of Louisville, Ky., came to Marshall Tuesday to perform an operation on the arm of Mrs. Jane Chenoweth, who has been here for some time with her daughter, Mrs. P. L. Bland. A few months ago the old lady (her age is 86) fell and injured her side. The bruise developed into an abscess. This was opened at the operation, which was a complete success. Mrs. Chenoweth is getting along reasonably well, though advanced age renders her complete recovery very doubtful.

The Andrews Opera Company gave a fine performance of the opera "Pretty Persian," at opera hall, last evening. They went from here to Brazil, Indiana. John C. Black, recently the leading grocery dealer of Marshall, to-day opened a butcher shop in partnership with his brother Flem. The board of supervisors has been in session the last four days. They had quite a stormy session and little business of importance was accomplished. An effort was made to borrow $5,000 to pay bills allowed at this session and other obligations due, but it was unsuccessful, it being shown that the supervisors cannot borrow money for the county, unless a vote of the people authorizes them to do so.

Annual Sale of Thoroughbreds.

LEXINGTON, December 5.—Breeders and owners of racing stables from all over the country are here to-day to participate in the annual sale of thoroughbreds, which opens this afternoon and continues for five days. The two most important stables to go under the hammer are those of A. J. McCampbell & Co., forty-one head, and J. K. McGibben & Co., a total of thirty-seven head. In both stables there are good racers now in training, several horses that have been successful on Western handicaps, tracks and a number of finely bred yearlings, which were bought at the Spring sales and some of which have been well tried.

IN THE DEEP SEA.

Vegetation Can Not Maintain Existence at the Ocean's Bottom.

Animal life is ultimately dependent upon the vegetable kingdom, and that kingdom in turn is dependent upon the light of the sun. Miles below the ocean surface the sun can not penetrate, or at all events vegetation, with all its powers of bottling up the solar rays, can not there, so far as a present known, maintain an existence. The water at very great depths is in most parts of the world near the freezing point. Further, the pressure upon every square inch of the surface of a body under three miles of sea water, instead of being 15 pounds, as in atmospheric air, is three tons, or, in other words, 6,720 pounds. It was not, perhaps, irrational to suppose that a sponge or a delicate fish would be crushed into nothingness if coiled upon the surface of its surface were subjected to such a weight as a score of the strongest coal-heavers in the world would stagger under. It rather humbles one's pride in the prowess of human reason to see how sometimes its apparently most cogent and most readily accepted arguments suddenly lose all their force when unexpectedly confronted with facts.

The skilled ornithologist, after pointing out that the owl in the barbers' shop was so badly stuffed that it could not be taken to represent either an owl or any possible member of the bird creation, might well be disconcerted when the interviewee stepped down from his perch and proved to be not a stuffed owl, but a live one. Even lawyers and law givers, theologians and political economists, have occasionally made mistakes, and the votaries of natural science are also human. Now that we know that animal life can be and is supported under enormous pressure in the cold, dark depths, where even kelp and sea moss take no foothold, reason is equal to the task of explaining how the difficulties of the position may be encountered. Though plants can not grow without sunlight, yet when their life in the upper region of the sea is over they may sink, as diatoms undoubtedly do, through all depths to the bottom. Even if the deepest living animals had no access to vegetation they might derive the benefit of it through a chain of consumers, ending with themselves, but beginning with the vegetable feeders.

Many of the dwellers in the deep sea have no eyes, and are, therefore, comparatively unaffected by the absence of light; for others that have eyes the gloom is relieved by the luminous organs which they or their neighbors possess. The temperature, we may be assured, is well-suited to the permanent inhabitants of each region, so that those surrounded by water nearly at the freezing point would not thank us for warming it for them any more than the Eskimo is pleased when a rise in temperature every time he sits in his pajamas. The pressure, too, however stupendous to our imagination, is evidently borne without concern by creatures which are themselves permeated by fluids of the same density as the surrounding medium. Though also to our taste the chemistry of sea water is unpalatable, we know that most marine animals can not live without it, and distribution, and often put to sore straits by the scanty supply of fresh water, to the denizens of the sea the resources for the quenching of thirst are always at hand, never failing, practically infinite.—Edinburgh Review.

A BRUTAL MURDER.

M. Morris Horribly Shot Down by His Own Son.

New York, December 5.—A London cable says: A dispatch from Vendome gives details of a terrible family drama which has just happened at the Chateau de la Monsardiere, at Villeurbanne. A young gentleman named Camille Morris, 18 years of age, and the principal landed proprietor in the vicinity, had frequent quarrels with his family, which at last became so violent that he left the house and went to lodge at a farm belonging to his father. From time to time the father and son encountered each other, and on one occasion the most violent quarrel immediately broke out. On Monday, towards 11 in the morning, when the general was alone in the chateau, his wife being absent on a journey, he saw his son enter the drawing room where he was waiting. A fresh quarrel so serious that M. Morris, being annoyed by his son Camille, left the room to look for his revolver in a neighboring apartment. During this time Camille drew a miniature revolver from his pocket, and at the moment his father entered the room, he took refuge behind a sideboard and opened fire on him with such precision that of the five balls with which the weapon was charged, three took effect. The unfortunate gentleman, who was wounded in the shoulder, skull and abdomen, sank bleeding to the ground and in a few minutes was a corpse. The murderer, after accomplishment of his crime, at once left the chateau, and going to the nearest town, gave himself up to the gendarmes. The crime is made all the more revolting from the fact that the victim was the only son of the murdered gentleman.

ANOTHER BANQUET.

A Second Banquet to be Given to Thurman.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, December 5.—The supplementary banquet, which is to be tendered next week to Allen G. Thurman by the Columbus Club, will be very largely in the nature of a protest against the partisan purposes that the banquet tendered to him on his birthday proper were made to subserve. When the Thurman Club banquet was originally planned it was upon the distinct understanding, on the part of many who contributed largely, both in time and money, that it would be a purely non-political affair, and of the eleven hundred tables, having paid ten dollars each, for the privilege, fully one third were Republicans or Mugwumps. It was not the fault of the speakers from abroad that the affair developed into a political meeting for none of them were offered the exact character of the affair. There has been more or less ugly growling, however, ever since the event, and in the coming banquet politics will be to the table with the knowledge that the banquet is a purely non-political testimonial to a friend and a neighbor, and the Republican participants will be able to discuss the men with the knowledge that their digestion is not to be disturbed by orations bristling with—to them—obnoxious sentiments.

AMONG PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

"A PAIR OF JACKS" TO BE PRESENTED TO-MORROW NIGHT.

Charles Hoyt's "A Midnight Bell" As put on the Boards Last Evening. The Blue and the Gray.

The author of "A Pair of Jacks," H. Grattan Donnelly, in the compounding of his mythical play has departed entirely from the former time-worn standards, and by so doing has produced a play entirely new and original. From the rising of the curtain to the falling of the same the interest never flags, and the humor never loses its pungent flavor, and the entire piece goes rippling onward to an uproariously hilarious termination. The situational nature, and there is a perfect embarrassment of riches in the number of specialties introduced. The company engaged to illustrate "A Pair of Jacks" is by long odds the strongest combination of its kind ever formed. It will be put on the boards at Naylor's to-morrow night.

"A MIDNIGHT BELL."

A Brilliant Audience Witnesses Its Initial Presentation Here.

Charles Hoyt's first departure from the rough-and-tumble farce, and indeed his most thoroughly enjoyable production, was presented at Naylor's last evening before a very fine and a warmly appreciative audience. "A Midnight Bell" scored a great triumph, and its presentation to-night will doubtless be greeted by an even larger audience than that of last evening. The piece is a light character-comedy, cleverly portraying life in a New England village. Through it runs a vein of dramatic coherence, a rather slender but ingenious and vividly defined plot—which has a happy and satisfactory finale in the union of loving hearts and the triumph of right over wrong. There is now and then a touch of farce, a glimpse of the old-time Hoyt, in the play, but its general character is quiet and consistent with the line of sentiment and fun, a pretty succession of mild dramatic climaxes, a number of beautiful stage pictures and a wit and vigor of dialogue about the play that renders it one of the most delectable productions in the stage of the city. It is presented in a highly satisfactory manner and is produced by one of the best balanced companies that have been here this season. Richard J. Dillon's characterization of the clergyman was a study. He was gentle of voice, but in manner exhibiting a firm look and actions a mildness, a generosity, a nobility of nature that did credit to the cloth. He was not only the clergyman when acting, but was the clergyman while sitting aside. His benediction of men and women was delivered in a tone of voice that was a study. Mr. Dillon's representation of the minister is a carefully sustained and an artistic portrayal. George Richards scored a personal hit in the role of the deacon. No man on the stage could play the part better than he did, and few men could play it so well. The character of his Yankee wit was keen and infectious. Frank Lane, as the lawyer, J. W. Hague, as the villain, William Dalton, as the hero of the village, and Eugene Canfield, as the country boy, were all excellent in their parts. Fannie McIntyre, a graceful actress of rare talent, made a most pleasing role of that of the village school-marm. She brought a quiet grace and sweetness into her work, and her straight to the point delivery of her lines, straight to the point, as the minister's sister, was pretty and winsome. Marie Urt gave an unusually clever characterization of the old maid. Mamie Ryan was a capital comedienne. The little rosette of a heroine, as she was called, was played by a young girl, who looked as sweet as a blossom, and who looked as sweet as a blossom. The following persons compose a quartette of the sweetest singers that have been heard on the opera house stage in many a day: Wm. Moore, Harry Lakstone, Marie Urt and Sallie Stembler. "A Midnight Bell" goes.

The Blue and the Gray.

"The Blue and the Gray" is the title of Shook & Collier's new military drama. The war plays that are now crowded upon the American stage are in the main being terribly overdone, but "The Blue and the Gray" is charmingly free from the painted blood and gore of supermarines and burlesque battles. In but one act there is any of the war spectacular, and through the whole piece it is left as a very pretty conception, and as rendered is made an unusually interesting play. The cast is a good one, the dramatic action excellent and the effects pleasing. The love plot that runs through the play is charming and the denouement of the play is a very touching climax. The piece will be presented here with some beautiful scenery.

Contes College Concert Course.

The young ladies of Contes college are again united to the city's vote of thanks for their new contract just closed with the Ovide Musin Grand Concert Company. The head of this company and its chief attraction of course, is Ovide Musin who, since Ole Bull, has been pronounced by many the world's master violinist. The stars he has grouped about him are of course in line with their leader. On Friday, December 5, at the Central Presbyterian church in this city. Full course tickets, each admitting two persons to all the concerts, are on sale at J. C. Button's for one dollar and seventy-five cents. Single tickets, fifty cents. Reserved seats, ten dollars extra. Musin in January, Aus der Ohe in February, and more to follow.

Lillian Lewis' Credit Lorraine.

The New York Dramatic News published in its columns Credit Lorraine as presented by Miss Lillian Lewis on her opening of her engagement in Washington, proved such success it formed the production of the week. The play is strongly written, and the opportunities of the difficult part of Lenora di Castiglioni are of an unlimited nature. She was superb in the characterization, at times rising to the highest pitch of dramatic art. Miss Lewis will appear at the opera house Tuesday evening, December 9th.

Stage Gossip.

Julia Marlowe is rapidly recovering. Lovers of the drama breathe again. Carmencita, the Spanish dancer, will begin Monday her forty-third consecutive week in New York. She holds the favor of the public.

Ex-President Cleveland is said to have first met his wife in the opera house of Ithaca, N. Y.

Frederick Warde and Edwin Booth both played "Othello" in Philadelphia one night last week.

The benefit given Mrs. Agnes Boucicault at the Fifth Avenue Theater last Tuesday evening was a great success.

The receipts at the Thanksgiving day performances in New York surpassed the business of any previous similar day.

Lillian Ramsden, who went out with "The Hostler" at the beginning of the season, is lying in a New York hospital.

Francis Wilson will play eight months at the Broadway theater in New York next season—a risky move for an entertainer in comic opera.

Three burlesques of the McAllister screen on "Society" as he found it have appeared within three weeks, two in New York and one in the West.

Besides putting on several light operas and standard comedies during the last eight years, Nat Goodwin has created leading comedy roles in fourteen plays.

Miss Mary Howe, the lyric soprano over whom Berlin raved, made her New York debut in a concert last week. The critics praised her as a charming if not a wonderful singer.

R. B. Evans, better known as Bob, the efficient and highly esteemed trombone player and treasurer of the Ringdolls, goes with his mother to Monaca, Mo., where they make their future home. The Ringdolls will miss him.

Clara Morris has been on the stage for a little more than twenty years. Her first appearance in New York was in 1870, with Daly's company, when on short notice she took a part that had been assigned to Agnes Ethel.

The Booth-Barrett engagement at the Chestnut street opera house, Philadelphia, which closed last Saturday with "Macbeth," was one of the most successful ever played by these famous tragedians. The receipts of the two weeks were nearly $40,000.

Mrs. Kendal, the popular English actress, says that she has been made an honorary member of every woman's club in the United States. Mrs. Kendal is shown by this statement to be capable of getting very wild. If she is an honorary member of any woman's club in Terre Haute (and Terre Haute is a city not to be overlooked by Mrs. Kendal, or anybody else) the fact is not generally known.

A NOTEWORTHY EXCEPTION.

(From the Kimball (S. D.) Graphic.)

While the columns of the Graphic are open to any and all unobjectionable advertisements, yet it is quite impossible for us to speak knowingly of the merits of the various articles of merchandise advertised. Particular notice is given to such of our advertisements as are of a permanent character. But there are exceptions occasionally and a noteworthy exception is the celebrated Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. This now universally known medicine has been advertised in the Graphic for four or five years but not until recently had we any personal knowledge of its wonderful efficacy which has come about through the prevailing influenza and the stubborn cough that has so often attended it. In the writer's family this medicine has on several occasions been used with a cough that baffled any and all other remedies and the number of families in Kimball and vicinity, in which this remedy has been used with fine for coughs and colds of every nature.

A very small boy
May be looked at as something
Resembling a vest,
And a very small boy,
It must be confessed,
Makes a very big joke

He doesn't look bad
In the vest of his dad,
And he's splendidly dressed
In his father's fine vest.
The cream of this enterprising little
