Town Board

At the last meeting of the board, May 1, town attorney Bruce Frey gave the opinion there were perhaps 18,000 square feet of land available.

But Dalton, in his presentation, stated that "Our opinion," derived by the plans drawn up by Herbert Underwood, a surveyor, is there are only 14,000 plus square feet available.

Each unit is supposed to contain at least 2500 square feet, and, Dalton argued, an eight-unit building would therefore need 20,000 square feet of space, even more than Frey's estimate of what is available.

Another major point of contention is the plans show the edge of the stairwell will be only two feet from the property line, whereas zoning ordinances prescribe that there must be at least a five foot set-back.

Questions of sewage and parking were also raised. Dalton suggested that the Front street residents were asking only that someone be hired to calculate the actual square footage available for a building.

Frey opened his remarks speaking of a compromise which had been reached at an earlier meeting with the board of trustees, a representative of the Pinneys and at least two Front street residents. He emphasized the compromise was reached on a strictly legal basis. Questions such as sewage and parking could not enter into the decision, as the law states if the zoning requirements are met, the permit must be granted.

Frey observed finding the exact square footage of the lots is not important, as current opinion is there is enough room for either six or eight units. He also commented if the building does not fit on the available land, the Front streeters will obviously "win by default."

Frey advised the board to deny the petition as out of order. The board, he said, cannot even consider denying a building permit, as it has already been issued. The board did not issue the permit, he reminded those present it came in in the middle of the situation.

Frey called on the Front street residents to enforce their rights under the zoning ordinance. If they want to carry through with their objections, the burden of proof is legally on those objecting to the permit. He remarked it is not incumbent on the board to pay for an accurate measurement of the lots; that is the job of the those who are appealing the permit.

Much discussion continued on the legality of the permit, the board's authority and whether or not the building, as it is now planned, will be two feet out in the water.

However, as a compromise had been reached earlier, stating the Pinney's could build a structure with no more than eight units, further discussion was called to an end by Louis Kuilema, saying, "We've gone about as far as we can go."

In old business, Joe Hughes questioned whether the town should continue to buy gas from Heyde Oil, as the station was not always open when he needed gas for the fire trucks. He cited two instances when this had occurred. The question was tabled and it was decided to continue to buy from Heyde for the next month, as scheduled.

Joe Gray spoke about the drainage problem at the Little League park. He stated they had not yet discovered if the problem was in their drainage system or if it actually involved a much larger area. This question was also tabled until the board could get further information.

The board approved a request from the Frog Tavern to recommend them for a Sunday liquor license.

In new business, representatives from the Warsaw Lions club discussed the annual Makahiki with the board.
