He called attention to the fact that provision has not been made whereby a boy can gain access to the lake except where a street runs down to the lake. He spoke of the value of a beach and park for Syracuse young people.

MUCK SOIL THE PROMISED LAND

Yields of more than a thousand bushels of onions per acre, 500 bushels of potatoes and other crops in like proportion ought to truly justify the name "The Promised Land." Such a land known as the muck soil area lies in Northern Indiana.

More than 300,000 acres of this land, known as muck soil, in varying stages of decomposition, lies in this Northern Indiana area. It plays an important part in the agricultural activities of Newton, Jasper, Starke, Pulaski, St. Joseph, Marshall, Fulton, Elkhart, Kosciusko, LaGrange, Noble, Whitley, Allen, DeKalb and Steuben counties, and is of lesser importance in Lake, Porter, Huntington and other nearby counties.

Of this vast area, less than half is in cultivated crops, and of this, approximately 77,000 acres is in truck or vegetable crops.

Some of the more important crops grown on this muck soil are onions, about 8,500 acres, with an annual production of one and one-half million to three million bushels; 42,000 acres of mint, used for the extraction of mint oil; 12,000 acres of cabbage, and 15,000 acres of potatoes.

Aside from these main crops, limited acreages of celery, carrots, parsnips and other vegetables are grown for nearby markets. Greater opportunities for the best uses of this soil, for the growing of more diversified crops, for better grading, standardization and marketing of muck crops will result in additional hundreds of thousands of dollars of newly created wealth coming to producers in this region. In turn part of this money will find its way into the usual channels of trade of this territory.

When it is remembered that Northern Indiana is the center of industry of the United States and that it lies at the center of the consuming population of the country, the significance of this great tract of virgin muck soil is apparent.

To help in the development of the Indiana muck area the Northern Indiana Muck Crops Show was organized, and the first show was held at Nappanee with 5,000 in attendance. Last year at the second show at Garrett more than 4,000 turned out to see Hoosier muck soil products and learn more about how to increase the wealth from muck soil.

The third Muck Crops Show will be held at South Bend on November 10, 11 and 12, and promises to be the largest and most attractive muck crops show in the entire country. Growers, business men and everybody in the muck soil area are interested in this show which is playing an important part in pointing the way to the steady development of this vast muck soil area.

"Look Your Best if You Would Be Happy" Says Beauty Specialist

AN Interview With Graduate Beautician Who Is At The Royal Store This Week.

There was a time when women dressed and "prettied themselves" in the hope of making themselves more attractive to some man, but that is not quite so true today, according to Mrs. Pearl Crane, wellknown beauty specialist who is at The Royal Store this week.

"Of course women still want to look their best in the eyes of the other sex," continued Mrs. Crane, "but they value more and more the compliments of their women friends, the esteem of women whom they meet, and their own self respect."

"The increasing education of women, growing enrollments of women at colleges, the ability of women to-day to make their own way, and to meet men as equals—all these things are responsible for this changing point of view."

"The modern intelligent woman realizes that keeping herself looking her best is a duty she owes herself," said Mrs. Crane, who continued: "Life seems more pleasant; people appreciate you more when you look fresh, vital, glowing with health and charm. And furthermore, the woman who knows she is looking well has more confidence in herself, and therefore gets more out of life. The modern woman, whether she is the mother of a family, or a young girl, knows that beauty isn't a matter of makeup alone, but of following certain scientific principles that nature has laid down—which have remained for students of scientific beauty culture to discover."

"These scientific principles are exemplified by the Dorothy Perkins' products which are especially adapted to each woman's individual needs. These products enable every woman to obtain greater loveliness the natural scientific way."

Mrs. Crane is giving private consultations, illustrated by a complete facial treatment, to all women who call at The Royal Store.

This unusual service is given without charge as a courtesy of the store. Mr. Connolly suggests that those who wish to take advantage of this opportunity make an appointment as soon as possible, as engagements in other cities make it impossible for Mrs. Crane to remain here after Saturday.
