MAIN STREET
WHITTLINGS

The coming fall political campaign promises to be one where scoop fulls of mud will be thrown by both parties. The candidates that win will be forced to wipe the mud from their eyes to read the election returns. A man's history will be told; his family and his fireside will be bombarded—nothing will be held sacred. The principles of government, the concepts of the two great political parties and their platforms will be barely mentioned for the fear of offending some faction in the coming fray.

Some wonder why American politicians always indulge in personalities, rarely in principles. The politician answers because that is what the American people want.

The high cost of living, profiteers and strikes are with us again after an absence of about twenty years.

C. Wallace Howard, pike fisherman extraordinary, has claimed right along that the northern pike loses its teeth about this time of the year. Sunday he caught a small pike which had lost most of its old teeth. The fish's gums were soft and sore. Small teeth could be seen pushing their way through the gums. That is probably one of the reasons why no big pike are being caught at present.
