

DOCTOR.

ST. PATRICK.

Every reader, we suppose, is familiar with the service St. Patrick is said to have rendered in Ireland, in freeing the soil from all kinds of reptiles. Assuming the fact, we present to the readers of the Atlas the following eulogistic verses describing the event, which we copy from a late Dublin paper.—[N. Y. Atlas.]

St. Patrick was a gentleman,
He came from decent people—
He built a church in Dublin town,
And on it put a steeple.
His father was a Gallagher;
His mother was a Brady;
His aunt was an O'Shaughnessy—
First cousin to O'Grady.

Oh success attend St. Patrick's fist,
For he's the dearest Saint O!
Oh! he gave the snakes and toads a twist,
He's a beauty without paint, O!

The Wicklow hills are very high,
And so's the hill of Howth, sir;
But there's a hill much higher still—
Much higher than them both, sir;
Twas on the top of that high hill
St. Patrick preached his sermon,
That drove the frogs into the bogs,
And banished all the varmint.

There's not a mile in Ireland's isle,
Where dirty varmint musters,
But there he put his sweet fore foot,
And murdered them in clusters;
The toads went pop—the frogs went hop—
Post haste into the water,
And the snakes committed suicide,
To save themselves from slaughter.

Nine hundred thousand reptiles blue
He charmed with sweet discourses,
And dined on them at Killarney,
In soups and maigre courses;
Blind worms crawling in the dust
Were a shame to all the nation,
But he gave them a rise, and opened their eyes
To a sense of their situation.

No wonder that these Irish lads
Should be so gay and frisky,
When Patrick taught them all the use,
And the way to make—good whiskey.
Oh, was I but so fortunate
As to be back to Munster,
'Tis I'd be bound that from its ground
I never more would once stir.

'Twas there St. Patrick planted turf,
And plenty of the praties,
With pigs galore, ma gra n'a asiore,
And cabbages and ladies.

THE HALF POUND OF SNUFF.
Some time since, in the days of the flying Dutchman, and the Cataract of the Ganges, a foreign artist was employed in giving new foliage to the trees and brushing upendry little cherubs among the faded clouds of a flat on the stage of "Old Drury," assisted by the hand of a deputy: when finding his tabac on the decline, he intimated a wish to the latter to have his box replenished, at the same time requesting the purchase of a demi livre. The assistant set out, but distrusting his memory and the accuracy of his construction, applied to a friend to put the matter into good English, upon a piece of paper.

"Que voulez vous?" demanded the friend.
"Demi livre de tabac."
"Bon! Dix mille livres de tabac, voila!"
Showing the paper with ten thousand pounds of snuff written upon it. Nothing could be more similar than the pronunciation of the words significant of the amounts, however dissimilar in quantity. But the obsequious assistant took the paper without glancing at it; and with a bow and a "mercie," took his leave to L—.

Entering the store, he presented the order to the lad at the counter, who stretching his eyes to the circumference of extreme wonder, exclaimed—
"He! Do you want all this?"
"Oui, demi livre de tabac, pour—pour—comme ça," imitating the act of snuffing.

"Do you want it right away?"
"Oui, oui, right away; toute de suite."
The lad rubbed his eyes, and again examined the order. There could be no mistake in it. The words were as plain as the hand writing upon the wall of Belthazzar's palace—as mystical too. 'Twas a prodigious pinch, and enough to stifle a dozen connoisseurs at a new opera. And here was a little man with an order for ten thousand pounds of snuff. Spirits of Madame de Stael and Lady Mary Wortley Montague!

The head clerk was called, and altho' exhibiting a sensible expression of surprise he had much good sense and knew too well that the house of L. was not unfrequently honored with orders of similar amounts. But there was something in the air of Monsieur that impressed the clerk with the conviction that he was no snuff dealer, and much less a snuff taker. He ran with an enquiring eye over the pen-dant extremities of his cravat, the buttons of his vest and anxiously sought some convincing hue of faded yellow lingering about his nostrils. Then glanced at the hands of his fingers as they were impatiently thrumming upon the counter. He was in despair, and thrusting a little "finch" between his teeth, to keep fresh resolution, and invited Monsieur to a seat.

So large a customer must be treated with some consideration, and by some means detained until the principal returned. A bottle of pale sherry was accordingly cracked, and a dozen Havana "crappers" laid upon the table. "This at least would put an end to the perplexing inquiries of Monsieur. They were soon as happy as Jove in a cloud, drinking nectar from the fair hand of Hebe. The colloquy was not spirited, but the gesture—were; and many a lady of "bon, bon, bon," there's to you," with an occasional smack of the lips, alone interrupted the delightful occupation, if we accept now and then the preliminary note of a chanson a boire.

But these things could not last forever, and notwithstanding the deference thus shown to the customer, and the exorbitant gratitude exhibited for the purchase of a half pound of snuff, Monsieur was rising the principal came in. He explained, while Monsieur bowed. Could not the order be delayed a week or two. He positively had not that quantity on hand; but he would set his people at producing it with all possible expedition. Was the order imperative as to time? Could the gentleman wait?

"Point de tout—je must have de tabac tout de suite—diable!"
The principal soon hit upon an expedient that promised to solve the difficulty at once. He named Monsieur to the table again with another bottle of sherry, and introduced a French friend.

"Voulez vous monsieur, dix mille livres de tabac?"
"Bah, non, non, non—Demi livre."
"Voici l'ennemi! He want von half pound of de snuff and no ten thousand pound."
"The Devil!—John, give the gentleman a half pound of snuff, and place the balance against the wine and cigars to the account of profit and loss."

A dandy, strutting about in a tavern, took up a pair of green spectacles, which lay on the table, put them on his nose, and turning to the looking glass, says: "Landlord, do these become me? Don't you think they improve my looks?" "I think they do," replied the landlord, they hide a part of your face."

DANCING.
A young man who had attended more to the cultivation of his heels than of his hand flattered himself that he could better his condition by shaking his feet, rather than an empty skull, issued the following proposals:

DAN SING SKULL.
"Missster lightfoot proposees toe o pen a dan sing skull in witch that hellegant butt will bee tort in the new west fashion. Lad dies and gentleman hoo nia sea fight. parun eyes him in his under take in will please to sin there nams to this paper. Skull toe bee o pen as sun as Twen tea sinners do sin."

THE MAGAZINE OF USEFUL AND ENTERTAINING KNOWLEDGE.

Conducted by N. SARGENT, Member of the New-York Lyceum of Natural History, and Asst. Halsey, Vice President of the New-York Lyceum of Natural History, and Cor. Secretary of the New-York Horticultural Society.

PUBLISHED BY J. LEAVITT, 132 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

A Periodical Publication, conducted in a popular manner, and devoted to subjects of a practical and scientific nature, is one of the most effective means of diffusing knowledge among the great mass of the community: the importance therefore of such a work at the present day, need not be urged. Such is intended to be THE MAGAZINE OF USEFUL AND ENTERTAINING KNOWLEDGE. Among the great variety of subjects which its plan will embrace, the following may be mentioned as some of the most important: namely, Biography, Natural and Civil History, the various branches of Natural Philosophy, Education, Agriculture, Horticulture, Useful Arts, Statistics, Domestic Economy, &c. These, however, will not exclude others of a less grave and perhaps more attractive character, though it is intended as a FAMILY READER. COMPANION, nothing will be admitted which a judicious Parent would be unwilling to place in the hands of his children.

The Editors are not inconsiderable of the importance and difficulty of the task of conducting a magazine designed not only to convey instruction, but to afford amusement to their readers; yet they are not without the hope that by so interesting and entertaining and treating them in a popular manner, they will be able to render it interesting and instructive to every class of readers. To add to the value of the work, each number will be embellished with one or more wood cuts or engravings, executed by the best artist, illustrative of some subject treated of.

To the friends of extended information, and to a liberal Public, the Editors look with confidence for that encouragement and support, without which it is impossible the work, however useful it may be, can long be sustained, and they pledge themselves that no exertions shall be wanting on their part to render it creditable to the City in which it is published, and worthy of that patronage which they respectfully but earnestly solicit.

Six numbers of this work have already issued, and it affords the Editors much pleasure to be able to present those who have not had an opportunity of examining it, the following RECOMMENDATIONS.

Having seen several numbers of "The Magazine of Useful and Entertaining Knowledge," it gives me pleasure to express a sentiment decidedly approbatory of the work, as well calculated to answer the valuable end of promoting the general diffusion of interesting and profitable information. It is not intended, however, to express any opinion as to any subject of political economy that has been, or may hereafter be, introduced within the contents of the work.

BENJAMIN T. OGDEN.
New York, Nov. 4, 1830.

The periodical conducted by Messrs. Sargent and Halsey, under the title of "The Magazine of Useful and Entertaining Knowledge," appears to me to be a work richly deserving of public patronage. The object of the Editors is certainly a most laudable one, and no plan can be better adapted than the one here pursued for disseminating useful information in a popular shape.

DR. CHAPMAN'S

Anti-Dyspeptic or Sour Stomach Pills.
Indigestion or Sour Stomach is acknowledged by Medical writers to be a complaint of such kind, at all times very difficult of cure. This is sufficiently illustrated in the disappointment of those who unfortunately suffer under it, as they, for the most part, find that, after having tried many things to little or no purpose, they are at last obliged to use, perhaps for the remainder of life, such articles as can best palliate the disease. Under such circumstances, any medicine capable of removing the complaint, must surely be anxiously highly deserving the attention of all those who are afflicted with it. The proprietor of these Pills is therefore happy in offering to the afflicted an invaluable medicine, the success of which has never yet been equalled for the cure of Dyspepsia in its most complicated forms, such as loss of appetite, nausea, or sickness at the stomach, and sometimes vomiting, belching up of water, which is sometimes tasteless, but most commonly sour, gnawing pain in the stomach, heartburn, or what is called sour stomach, costiveness, paleness of the countenance, languor, looseness of spirits, palpitation of the heart, vertigo or giddiness, and disturbed sleep, &c. Whoever applies these Pills in the above disease according to the directions, will never be disappointed, as they have never been known to fail in producing a radical and permanent cure. The use of a single box will convince the most unbelieving of their efficacy. They will most effectually remove all sources of the stomach, not merely by neutralizing the acid, but by converting that morbid state of the secretions which give rise to it, and at the same time will restore to the debilitated organs of digestion that tone and vigor which is absolutely necessary to the well being of the animal economy.

The following is a certificate from Dr. Walter C. Cohen, late member of the American Philosophical Society, &c.

Sir—I cheerfully add my testimony in favor of Dr. Chapman's Anti-Dyspeptic Pill as a remedy for Dyspepsia. And the experience I have had from using them in my practice for several months past fully convinces me that they are equal, and in many cases superior to any other preparation I have ever known. And in all cases where the stomach and bowels require evacuation by the intervention of a cathartic, they are in my opinion, the most convenient and efficacious Pill of any in use, at the same time, being safe and easy at the operation.

LADIES' MUSEUM.

Western Repository of Belles Lettres.

—CINCINNATI—

EDITED BY J. T. CASE.

In presenting his proposals at this time to the public, the publisher deems it unnecessary to say many words. The work has been a long time in the press, and is now entering the last half year of its second volume. The continuation of the work, under present prospects, is no longer a matter of doubt—and it is no longer doubtful that a publication, embracing the objects which this prospectus is actually called for, and will be generally sustained in the western country.

A single reference to the plan and execution of the work will, it is believed, give a better satisfaction generally, than long explanations and many promises.

The Ladies' Museum embraces in its general subjects, Original and selected Poetry, Tales, Essays, Notices and Reviews of New Works, Natural History, Sketches of Biography and History, Reports of Fashions, occasional articles relating to the culture of Plants, Fruits and Flowers, with such Intelligence, Anecdotes, choicest effusions of Wit, sentiment and Humor, as will impart variety and furnish an agreeable miscellany.

This work is especially dedicated to the Ladies, and through them to the cause of knowledge, virtue, and amusement. Their patronage is respectfully solicited, with the assurance that no pains will be spared to acquire for it a character of superior, if not unequalled excellence.

Arrangements have been made with distinguished artists to give occasional engravings, and cuts on wood. Should the publisher meet with sufficient encouragement, he intends publishing the third volume on an extra fine sheet, with one page of music at least twice in each month.

CONDITIONS.
The Ladies' Museum is published every Saturday, at Two Dollars and Fifty Cents per annum in advance, or if paid within six months and three dollars if payment is delayed to the end of the year.

LEE'S ELIXIR
Has, for twenty years, been a most successful medicine for the cure of colic, coughs, spitting of blood, asthma, consumption, and other complaints of the lungs and breast, as many of our poor citizens have certified.

To Mr. Noah Ridgely, Baltimore.

Sir—My daughter, Sarah Coleman, has been from infancy greatly afflicted with a distressing cough, which her friends very desirably would terminate, in some fatal fatal disease. A bottle of your Elixir was procured—less than half a bottle entirely removed this tormenting cough; she has not the least return of it since. This excellent medicine has, in all probability, done the blessing of Divine Providence, been the saving of her life.
