IMPROVEMENT OF THE WABASH.
The following communication from the Governor of Illinois was recently received by the Governor of this state. Andrew Gardner, Esq. of Knox county, has been appointed by Governor Noble on the part of this state. Mr. Gardner was recommended to the Governor by several of the Wabash delegation as a gentleman well qualified for the station.

BELLEVILLE ILLINOIS, 13th March 1834

To his excellency N. Noble, Gov. of Ind.

St: I have the honor to receive your communication, together with a certified copy of an act of the Legislature of Indiana relative to the improvement of the Great Wabash River; and I can assure you that the people of this state will co-operate with the state of Indiana in this work of improvement with great cordiality. The improvement of the navigation of this river is very interesting to the people of this state, and more particularly to those residing on the eastern part. They are much pleased with the course adopted by the state over which you preside, and will join in the work with that good feeling which become each state to observe towards the others.

SAMUEL MUNDAY, Esq. is appointed Commissioner by the General Assembly of this state, he is a gentleman of good character and standing, and resides in the county of Wabash, near the contemplated improvement of that river. The commissioner on the part of this state has been informed of the appropriation made by Indiana, and that a warrant on the Treasury of this state will be issued in his favor so soon as he is qualified in office.

Having furnished the above information, the commissioner on the part of Indiana may be enabled to correspond with Mr. Munday on the part of this state; so that the preparations for this desirable work may commence immediately.

With great respect,

I am your obedient servant,
JOHN REYNOLDS,
Gov. of Illinois

Yesterday, an owner of one of the principal Cotton Mills in this neighborhood, gave notice that on the first of April, the mill would be stopped and the hands discharged. This information was quickly circulated through the village, and produced a scene of distress rarely witnessed. One of the overseers called to inquire if it could be possible that he was rightly informed? and, on being told that the stoppage of work must take place, he turned away with tears in his eyes, and exclaimed, "My poor wife, my poor children, must you suffer, must you starve? God knows I can willingly endure any hardship for your good, but it will break my heart to see your misery!"

This man is but one of thousands who are brought to the verge of despair by the cruel "Experiment," which is proving fatal to the liberty and welfare of our beloved country. Fellow-citizens! are you slaves, that you suffer yourselves thus to be trampled upon?—Rise and let your voices be heard; and if you must sink under oppression, let it not be said you feared to assert your rights. It is time to act! I appeal to every mechanism to say, how long it will be before he will be obliged to exclaim, "My poor wife, my poor children, unless a change takes place in the course pursued by the President.

NOBLE ACT.

On the passage of the steamboat Fairy Queen from Terre Haute to Louisville, the son of our fellow-citizen W. C. Linton, accidentally fell over board while the vessel was under full headway. At the moment of the accident, GURDON HUBBARD, Esq. of Danville Illinois, at the imminent peril of his own life, sprang fearlessly into the water, swam to the little boy, who had sunk and risen several times, and nobly rescued him from almost certain death. The boat having no yawl the gallant man had to support his little charge till assistance was rendered by those on board. Such a deed deserves a monument, and though none of brass or marble will perpetuate or honor the deed, grateful hearts will long cherish for him the unabated feelings of a father's a mother's love—as the preserver of their child—their deliverer from sorrow and tears! Heaven will surely reward such generous, such noble deeds, with double portion of its favor!—Wabash Courier.

A HEROINE.

A pale and healthy looking matron from the Emerald Isle—says the Portland Courier—called a day or two ago to know if we would be so kind as to put a notice in the paper for her. Her name was Sarah Scott, and her story ran thus: She found it was no use to stay in her country and starve. She had six children besides the old man, and he was miserable, and could not do much, and the taxes took all they could earn, and it was more than they could do to bring the year about. So she resolved to come to America. Having succeeded in procuring means to pay her passage, she took her husband, half aiding to her children and her old man, and embarked for St. John's, from which place she wandered into Maine as far as Portland. She betook herself to the severest labour, principally washing, and by rigid economy, she after a while earned enough to pay for the passage of two children to this country. She accordingly sent for them, and they arrived. Animat ed by her success thus far, she toiled on, and procured the passage money for two more, and they arrived also. She toiled on—for what will a mother not do for her children?—till she earned the passage money for the remaining two; and she heard in June last that they had arrived in Quebec. "And now," said she, "I am going to send for the old man, and then we shall all be here." If such a mother and such a wife does not deserve a statue to her memory, who does?

GONE!—Married, in this borough, on Tuesday last, Peleg Sturtevant, Esquire, editor of the "Liverpool Mercury," to Miss —— She don't like to see her name in print, but she is a pretty girl, anyhow.

MISSING.

FRANCIS HENRY SHIELDS, aged 19 years, about five feet six inches high, sandy or reddish hair, and good complexion; he had been in Philadelphia from the beginning of October, 1832, to the middle of March, 1833, and was employed there in a printing establishment; on or about the 14th of March, he left Philadelphia for New York, via Albany, &c. On his passage he lost his trunk containing all his Wearing Apparel, several letters, and other things; from New York he wrote to his parents in Ireland, informing them of the above circumstance, also of his intention to come home per the "North American," then in the river, which he stated was to sail on the 1st of April. To Messrs. Dubois and Stoddart, New York, he mentioned his intention to go in pursuit of his lost trunk, and that he would return in a few days, and embark for Ireland. It is conjectured that he went from New York to Trenton, and possibly to Albany; his parents have been unable to learn any thing of him whatever; they are very apprehensive that some fatal accident has befallen him, and earnestly entreat that if this advertisement shall come under the notice of any humane person who can give any information respecting him, that they will be so kind as to communicate it to Messrs. Dubois & Stoddart, 167 Broadway, New York, or to Wm. Nixon, Fourth street, Cincinnati, or to John Shields, Pittsburgh, Ireland.
