

On the 24th of October Admiral Walker, Bey, left Beyrout, in company with the Talbot, for St. Jean d'Acre, which place they reached at 11 P. M. They have to until morning, when they were joined by three other vessels; Admiral Walker hoisted a flag of truce and stood in, and repaired in person to summon the town to surrender, but the boat was ordered away, and the letter containing the command to surrender was refused.

Admiral Walker then proceeded to consult Sir R. Stopford on the expediency of storming the town. Sir Robert Stopford determined upon postponing further operations, and recalled the British force off Acre. Admiral Walker then gallantly determined upon starting in alone, and braving the enemy. He accordingly ran his flag ship in right under the fortresses, and fired a broadside, but notwithstanding 200 guns might have opened their fire, not a shot was fired.

On the 30th a council of war was held and the attack decided on, and on the same evening the superannuated force of Royal Marines were embarked on board the respective vessels. On the following day 300 Turkish troops were embarked, Gen. C. F. Smith accompanied them. At daylight on the 3d, the Turkish and Austrian ships came up, and they continued to throw shells into the town throughout the day.

On the 3d, at half past 2, the batteries of Acre were opened on the ships, and they immediately opened a tremendous fire in return. At half past 4, the action being at its height, a terrific explosion, occasioned by the ignition of the principal powder magazine of the city, took place, by which an entire regiment, posted in its neighborhood, was destroyed, consisting of 1500 to 1700 men.

Soon after the Egyptian troops which survived, left the town, and 300 Turkish troops, and a detachment of Austrian rocketeers, took possession at day light.

The carnage was dreadful, but the loss of British seamen and marines was very trifling, estimated at from 17 to 24.

It was generally believed that Louis Philippe had succeeded in negotiating a marriage between his youngest son, the Duke de Montpensier, and the Queen of Spain, so far at least as the consent of the Ex-Queen Regent, her august mother, can go towards completing such an arrangement.

The steam ship President, from New York 11th, arrived on the 27th.

The above was received from a passenger. The mail will not be delivered for some time, the steamer having parted three lawers in getting into dock, and is now in the stream.

A short time since, John Wright & Co. bankers of London, failed; they held large sums deposited by Catholic families. The wake of Norfolk had £2,000 sterling in their hands, and another nobleman had £10,000.

The immediate cause of the failure is said to have been the wild and random speculations of John Wright himself, in various things. One of his wild investments took place in the United States, in loaning to a company, or rather buying from them, the town site of Cairo, located at the confluence of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers, and after advancing about $200,000 or more towards building it into a city, by making levees, erecting houses, work shops, etc. When I passed the same town site, in May last, the place was, nevertheless, ten feet under water, and the people were compelled to pass from one house to the other in boats. The place is not only liable to inundation, but, with all, is considered a very unhealthy location during the summer months.

The "President" will not leave again for New York till the 10th of February. The mail being about to close, I must close also. Adieu.

the great proportion of these "luxuries" as an evidence of "British influence!" O the sagacious—the candid Globe! Patriot.

The importation of silk into this country in 1839 amounted to nearly 23,000,000 dollars.

There is not perhaps to be found, in the whole range of its history, a purer specimen of loco locoism than the following. Bucknam was dismissed from office by Governor Woodbridge—became a persecuted patriot—was elected Sheriff by the loco focus—Swartwout for Texas—was overtaken and brought back.

Pontiac, Dec. 4, 1840.

POLITICAL RESIGNATION.—The editor of the Philadelphia Ledger, a few nights since, saw three officers of the present administration, walking down the street with reversed umbrellas, whistling the dead march. The patient spirit of philosophy they evinced in their measured tread and composed features, was worthy of the school of the ancient stoics.

A YOUNG SUGAR.—The New York Titler tells how an old woman the other day was taught, by her grandchild how to suck eggs. "Grandmother," said a philosopher in frock and trousers, "we must cause an incision at the apex, and create a corresponding aperture at the base, then apply it to the lips, and at the first inhalation the contents are extracted." "Lord-a-mary!" said the old lady, "how amazing! When I was a child we only broke a hole in both ends and sucked it. Well, I declare, what privileges the children nowadays have!"

A potatoe diet is found greatly to improve the quality of the blood. Hence roasted or baked potatoes are successfully employed as a specific against the scurvy, when other remedies have failed. This discovery was made in France. It is singular that boiled potatoes do not seem to have the same good effects.
