There seems to be some method in Hanly's madness.

Hearst has a few more explosions to offer before the campaign closes.

If Hanly is "mad" as has been charged, there are a lot of other crazy ones with him.

The government has gone so far as to demand that maple syrup be made from the sap of maple trees. This is too much.

Haskell threatens to sue Editor Hearst for exposing his crookedness. Haskell seems to be as big a bluffer as he is a crook.

If the INDEPENDENT was a sport it would not be afraid to bet that Marshall will be elected governor of Indiana and Taft president of the United States.

The new county local option law will be effective upon publication of the law which will be within ten days or two weeks of its passage, which was September 26.

The passage of the county local option bill by both branches of the legislature was somewhat of a surprise to many people. It was carried in the house by a vote of 55 to 45. It was promptly signed by Governor Hanly.

Charging a man with trying to bribe another to vote for local option is about as reasonable as it would be to charge him with bribing a person to join church. The bribery charge against Hanly is ridiculous on the face of it.

Governor Haskell of Oklahoma, the Standard Oil crook, is after President Roosevelt's hide and declares that he will show up Teddy in his true light. Whether it is stealing a horse or some other equally terrible thing that the president is guilty of, the irate Oklahoma governor does not as yet design to intimate. The public will be in a state of great anxiety until it learns what this wonderful exposure is.

Governor Hanly has been exonerated from all charges of bribery made against him by Representative Knisely. Upon the demand of Governor Hanly an investigating committee composed of republicans and democrats was selected from the house and after a thorough investigation the committee failed to find any facts to support Knisely's charges and made a report exonerating the governor from all blame. Senator Wickwire, who was included in the bribery charges, received a vote of confidence from the senate. The whole lamentable affair was doubtless a dirty scheme on the part of Knisely and others to injure the governor and their temperature cause he espouses.

President Roosevelt has put his son, Theodore, Jr., to work in a carpet manufacturer. There is nothing so very wonderful about this, only the president is setting an excellent example for "high-up" people who fail to instill useful lessons of industry into the minds of their precious offspring.

IEWS OF THE PRESS.

Unworthy candidates are found from time to time on the ticket of one or both of the parties. In such an event the duty of the patriotic citizen is plain. Just scratch the fellow who should not hold office. It will prove a wholesome lesson to the party managers and a distinct gain to the public service.

Roosevelt kicked out DuPont Friday on account of his connections with the powder trust. Of course the republican leaders did not know he was badly hooked up with a bad trust when they made him head of the speakers' bureau. There are a few other republican leaders who are in equal danger of getting the boot for the same reasons.—Columbia City Post.

Twelve years ago the cry on both sides was that prices were too low and each claimed that their success would enable the down-trodden farmer to get more for his stuff. This year the general cry is that prices are too high, and the politicians are trying to devise schemes to induce the farmer to take less for his cattle and his corn. We have heard no complaint from the d. f. that those who are doing the squealing are the ones that are doing the buying.—Indianapolis Independent.

Thomas A. Edison, world famous inventor, declares he is willing to state his reputation as a prophet that within five years airships carrying passengers on regular schedules will be making trips across the Atlantic ocean. Admitting Mr. Edison to be a gentleman of unusual and remarkable acumen, still one is not prevented from suspecting that it may possibly have happened during some of his recent scientific researches that he discovered a new kind of pipe.—Lafayette Courier.

President Roosevelt evidently knew his man when he broke with Foraker years ago and refused to have any dealings with him. In his statement published Tuesday and based on Mr. Hearst's exposure, he reproduces a letter written by Mr. Taft, July 20, to the Ohio state committee, expressly refusing to enter into any agreement to support Foraker for the senate in consideration of the latter's support of himself for the presidency. His reason was that Foraker had fought the administration's reform policy and to combine with him would be a sacrifice of principle. All this is very creditable to the president and Mr. Taft. It is plain now that Foraker's attacks on the president were inspired by the Standard oil crowd, in whose pay he has been for years.—Indianapolis Independent.

Hearst charges C. N. Haskell, governor of Oklahoma and present treasurer of the Democratic national committee, with having been a tool of the Standard Oil company at the time Frank S. Monnett was attorney general of Ohio and was engaged in the prosecution of the Standard Oil company. Haskell calls Hearst a liar and asserts that the Haskell mixed up in the affair was W. C. Haskell, a man who is no relation to him. Hearst charges that the Standard Oil company contributed a large sum to the Democratic national campaign fund and that Haskell was the man who succeeded in getting the contribution. Of course Haskell is not a candidate on the Democratic ticket, but he is connected officially with the management of the campaign, and if he can not clear his skirts of the charges preferred by Hearst, he should lose no time in handing his resignation. Nobody, however, believes that the Standard Oil company gave a large sum to the Democratic committee.—Columbia City Post.

FOUR COUNTIES

News of St. Joseph, LaPorte, Starke and Marshall Counties Boiled Down.

Daniel Webster was the orator of the day at the first Fourth of July celebration ever held at LaPorte, about 70 years ago.

John Schroeder caught a pike above the dam in Yellow river today which weighed about 25 pounds. It is the largest fish taken out of the river for some time.—Plymouth Independent.

Hon. Edwin C. Laidlaw died at his home in Mishawaka recently, aged 64 years. He was an honorable citizen, a veteran of the civil war and at one time a representative in the state legislature. He was born on the old homestead near Mishawaka where he lived until a few weeks ago, having recently moved to Mishawaka.

That Hole in the Ground.

Owing to a cave-in at the water works and electric light plant on Tuesday, the town was without electric light service three evenings this week. The pumping of so much water and sand in digging the new well undermined the foundation of the building and caused it to settle, also the foundation of the engine, which is out of plumb. A casting on the flange union on the engine was cracked and also the suction main leading from the well was broken in two by the settling of the building. This result has been feared, and a little more caution might have been used to prevent such an unfortunate occurrence. If the new well had been located at least 15 feet further from the building, much trouble might have been avoided. The engine is being leveled again and the foundation re-inforced with fresh concrete. It is hoped that the electric light service can be resumed again by this (Friday) evening.

Walkerton has a good water works and electric light plant, notwithstanding some unfortunate mishaps. Some mistakes have been made, which are common to the majority of men—(of course, there are some who never make mistakes nor anything else to speak of)—but we believe that most of the trouble is over with and greater precaution and a more careful supervision of the work of those under the direction of the Town Board will be observed in the future. The most of us learn by experience.

He Wondred.

Senator Clark of Wyoming is credited with the retelling of a story by Bishop Potter, to the effect that a young clergyman went to preach one Sunday afternoon at an insane asylum. When he reached the asylum he discovered that he had left his notes at a hotel in the city. He told the superintendent that he could not preach without those notes and that the services for the afternoon must be abandoned. The superintendent insisted upon some sort of a sermon, because all of the inmates were expecting it; and they could not endure the disappointment. The young man had delivered a sermon on foreign missions that very morning and had the manuscript with him. The superintendent insisted that he should preach to the insane, concerning foreign missions; and he did so. The audience gave silent and almost rapid attention to the discourse. When it was concluded quite a number of the patients came up to be introduced to the preacher. One of them had been particularly attentive and the young preacher asked him what part of the discourse had especially attracted his attention. He answered:

"When you were telling about the heathen mothers in India, pitching their little children under the wheels of Juggernaut, I was wondering what kept your mother from doing that righteous act when you were a baby."
