After three weeks from next Monday we can all rest in peace.

It is authoritatively stated that President Roosevelt will not take the stump in this campaign, as has been reported.

If son-in-law Nick and Alice would go home and stay there until after the close of the campaign they would not be seriously missed.

The republicans and democrats at national headquarters both express confidence of winning the presidential contest. They each give figures and estimates to prove their claims. Take your choice.

Governor Haskell has issued a letter to President Roosevelt asking an explanation of certain transactions concerning oil leases in Indiana. The governor is getting to be real amusing.

The war cloud in Europe, while threatening, will probably pass away without serious harm. The prospects for war among the nations of Europe are, notwithstanding present delicate complications, rather remote.

Business is reviving, not rapidly, but steadily, as is evidenced by the gradual resumption of activity among the railroads, manufacturing industries and the various commercial lines. The semi-panic has touched bottom and is now on the upward course.

E. H. Harriman finds only a rosy outlook ahead for American industry. "We find ourselves," said Mr. Harriman, "in far better shape after the senseless money panic of last fall than might have been expected, and the last year leaves us with hardly a scratch." We are in a position now to go ahead and complete the work laid out and will do so.

Mayor Busse and other prominent people in Chicago are taking active measures to relieve the large number of hungry school children in that city. It is estimated that about 15,000 poor children have been going to school each day with little or no breakfast to begin the day's activities. A concerted movement is being made to bring relief to these suffering children, whose homes are rendered destitute in many instances from drunken and shiftless fathers. Free meals are being served in a number of the churches to hundreds of the needy children. The committee in charge of this charitable work is investigating the situation and will try to give the children relief in their own homes instead of in a more public manner.

The passage of the county local option law in no way interferes with the present township remonstrance law. It is supplementary to and not amendatory of that law. There is a provision in the law which expressly provides that none of the provisions of the Moore remonstrance law is to be repealed by this enactment. The law requires that in order to hold an election to vote upon local option there must be a petition filed with the county commissioners with names of qualified voters to the number of 20 per cent of those who voted for secretary of state at the last preceding general election asking for such an election. It is then the duty of the commissioners at their next regular session to order a special election not less than 20 nor more than 30 days thereafter, when the people will vote "yes" or "no" upon the question whether the county is to have prohibition or not. In case the election results favorably for prohibition saloon licenses issued subsequent to the passage of this act will expire within 90 days, but licenses issued previous to this enactment may run for their full period. No election on local option can be held oftener than once in every two years under this law.

VIEW OF THE PRESS.

Neither one of the national parties has any right to complain because funds do not pour in in desired abundance. Both parties have made it a question of honor to pay to any man to pay into such fund by the tacit official recognition of corruption in the source and in the use of these funds.—Elkhart Review.

Cheap indeed were the bribery charges brought against Governor Hanly by Representative Kniesly, the poor, weak tool of Taggart, Jackson and the brewery combine. Kniesly was reprimanded by a committee composed of two democrats and two republicans. That's the end of the miserable affair.—Starke County Republican.

Several counties are exceedingly anxious to test the new county local option law, but as the law will not be in force for some weeks they will have to bide their time in patience. Some strange things may happen when it goes into effect. It is believed by many that the law will make dry nearly every county in the state. It has surely operated well in other states and it may do equally as well in Indiana. Some argue that it will not. Many wards and townships have gone dry under the remonstrance law but in many instances it took much labor to secure the requisite number of remonstrators. Not a few who signed their names to have done so under duress and would cancel their act if they had an opportunity to do so at the polls. However that may be, county local option is now the law and it behooves all good citizens to give it a fair test. Good laws are usually retained in force; bad ones become obsolete.—Rochester Sentinel.

A 1,000 Mile Test Run.

A 1,000 mile test run is being given under the auspices of the Chicago Motor Club, several leading makes of automobiles being used in the test. There are four routes mapped out, Walkerton being on the third route which extends from Chicago to Plymouth, LaPaz, South Bend and back to Chicago via Michigan City, Hammond, South Chicago, etc. There are 20 cars in the race, all of which passed through Walkerton Thursday, each car flying streamers bearing the name of the machine. Pilot and confetti cars went ahead to mark the route for the contestants to follow. The cars went in bunches of two to four several minutes apart. They were making good time and attracted much attention and interest on the way.

Fooling Days Are Past.

The day for fooling the people has become a part of the past. The great mass of voters today do their own reading and thinking and by keeping themselves informed on the causes and effects of governmental policies have placed themselves in position to decide intelligently upon their course of action. They have taken politics to their homes and analyzed and digested it. They have studied the relation of public policies to their personal welfare and happiness and they have learned that there is something in the right of suffrage besides keeping certain individuals or sets of individuals in office. The spoils of politics have lost their lustre with the average voter. He is now less interested in what the officeholder is going to get out of office than in what the officeholder is going to do in office. The man who does things from the high motive of bringing benefit to the whole people is wanted. The man who seeks preferment from any other motive need not apply.—South Bend News.

THE LUXURY OF ILLNESS.

As Experienced by Wealthy Women Patients in Hospitals.

When the wealthy woman of to-day goes to a private hospital she takes with her all the comforts of home and more than are dreamed of in the average domestic circle. One woman whose name is synonymous with millions, engaged not only a large double room in a certain hospital but a single one connecting. In the latter the bed was taken down, and by her orders all the furniture was removed from the large room. From her house she sent down a complete outfit to replace it. She had her own bed, dressing table, chaise longue, tables, rugs, draperies, lamps, and other decorations. Pictures were hung. Her maid, who arrived with her and stayed the entire time, brought all the accessories of an elaborate toilet, and madame was arranged each day by most perfect art to look her best.

In the small room soft draperies were put at the windows, and the place was converted into a luxurious reception room, conspicuous in which was a perfectly appointed tea table.

In charge of this room was "Buttons," sent for by madame as soon as she was installed, and the page's duty was not only to open the doors to receive the cards of madame's many callers, but also after she began to mend, to see that the decanters on the tea table were never empty, that cold siphons were always at hand, and cakes and biscuits never lacking.

It is quite usual for women patients at hospitals to take their own linen for beds and washstands. Maids who accompany their mistresses to hospitals rarely find their work simple. Women who are only ordinarily particular as to how they dress when well are impossibly fussy when ill, and the toilet becomes a function which nothing can hurry.

The expense of illness gone through with in this way makes it impossible for any but the wealthy. Rooms selected are of a size costing never less than $50 a week, and usually $100. While this includes board, the meals are never eaten by such patients, and those ordered from outside are of the most expensive kind. A maid ever in attendance requires her own room at night, and the invalid also has a day nurse and another for night. These she pays $25 a week each and their board and lodging, as well as their laundry.

Such is the luxury of illness when money is no object.

KING EDWARD GROWING DEAF.

English Monarch Greatly Annoyed by His Affliction.

During the recent visit of President Fallieres, of France, to England, a report came out to the effect that King Edward was ill. The rumor seemed to be based on nothing more substantial than the fact that Edward, who has the invaluable gift of always looking most genial at public functions, undeniably looked the reverse upon two notable occasions—his visit to the military tournament and the gala performance at Covent Garden.

The fact is that the King, whose general health is excellent, is much troubled by increasing deafness. Three months ago it barely was noticeable, possibly because every one in the royal set habitually talks in a loud tone, owing to the Queen's deafness, which has been relieved recently. But since his return from Biarritz the King has been worried about his own diffi-
