ABOUT MAKING MONEY.
It is easy to be hypocritical on the subject of money. We have formed a habit of pretending publicly to despise money, while actually working our heads off to get more of it, writes Bruce Barton.
We make speeches to young men advising them to "seek the higher good," and hurry straightway to our offices to make up for lost time.
Let us have done such with hypocrisy.
We are all out to make money; nor is there anything reprehensible in that fact.
Wise old Sam Johnson said: "There are few occupations in which men can be more harmlessly employed than in making money."
It is not "money" that is the "root of all evil," as we often misquote, but "the love of money."
How much of yourself are you willing to sell for money?
The answer to that question is none of my business. It is a personal question—a question for you to ask yourself.

If you are the sort of person I think you are, your answer will be something like this:

There are some things I am not willing to sell for money.

I will not sell my health. Not for all the money in the world will I die twenty years before my time, as Harriman did; nor spend my old age drinking hot water, like John D. Rockefeller.

I will not sell my honor. I will forget my business when I leave my office. My home shall be a place of rest and high thinking and peace—not a mere annex to my factory or office, where the talk is of nothing but gains and loss.

I will not sell my honor. I will not engage in any business, no matter what the profit, that does not contribute something to the happiness and progress of the world.

King Midas, in a fit of covetousness, prayed that everything that he touched might turn to gold.

And his prayer was granted. The food he was lifting to his mouth turned to gold; his wife, if he had touched her, would have turned to gold.

There are too many King Midases loose in the world.

They do not have the Midas touch; they have the Midas look.

They see nothing but money.

A beautiful garden to them is merely something that "must have cost a thousand dollars."

They look on their homes and they see, not a home, but an expense of so much a month.

They look on their wives, and figure how much less it cost them to live when they lived alone.

The universe, to them, is a balance-sheet; their minds are adding machines; their hearts beat in tune with the ticker.

God pity them—the men with the Midas look!

Get money—but stop once in a while to figure what it is costing you to get it.

No man gets it without giving something in return.

The wise man gives his labor and ability.

The fool gives his life.

"CAMP ROOSEVELT."

America is awake to the urgent need for stamping out radicalism in this vast "Land of the Free". In every newspaper and magazine there is heard the loud cry for "Education" to rid us of this menace. Senators and statesmen are profuse in their calls for help on this score. At dinners and banquets the question is discussed, and the answer is always the same: "Education must eradicate this evil."

To educate the foreign-born in the rudiments of civics is, therefore, one of the most important tasks before our country today. To educate the children of these foreign-born is an equally important task, for it involves the peace and security of our coming generations. The introduction of the Junior Reserve Officers' Training Corps in the Chicago Public High Schools, during the winter of 1917, was the fulfillment of a plan inaugurated by Captain F. L. Beals, Professor of Military Science and Tactics and Director of Physical Education in the Chicago Public High Schools, pointing in this direction. The fact that today most of the large cities in the country are following this plan is proof of its utility.

With the idea of furthering the interests and welfare of our great American boyhood, a summer training high school camp was inaugurated by Captain Beals during the summer of 1917. Five miles south of Jackson, Michigan, the camp named CAMP ROOSEVELT, in honor of that great statesman and soldier whose name it bears, and the high ideals for which he stood in his lifetime are the fundamental character-istics underlying this great movement. The camp has the backing of the Chicago Board of Education, as is shown by a letter submitted by Mr. Peter A. Mortenson, Superintendent of the Chicago Public Schools:

"It was my privilege to spend a day at Camp Roosevelt. To enjoy the expanse of grounds, flanked by tree clad hills, the splendid arrangements for the comfort and progress of the cadets, and to feel the atmosphere and spirit of service, is to appreciate the camp. Results in scholarship, as well as physical and mental development under these ideal conditions, were remarkable. Camp Roosevelt is another word for Opportunity."

It is interesting to note also that the War Department of the U. S. Government has adopted the Camp Roosevelt Plan as a national policy, and is endeavoring to establish three or four more camps similar to Camp Roosevelt.

THE RICHEST MAN.

One of the richest men in the world is unknown to most of us. This man is Edward J. Myers, and he is the village blacksmith of Pierce, Nebraska.

Writing to the editor of the Norfolk (Neb.) Daily News, Mr. Myers says: "I wonder if you know that one of the richest men in the world lives fourteen miles north of Norfolk, right in Pierce, Neb. That man is the writer. I am just a 'plug blacksmith,' but, oh right! I go to my labors each morning, work until noon, go to dinner, return at 1 p. m., and work till 6 o'clock. I enjoy the greatest of all blessings, good health. Rockefeller would give all he possesses in money or holdings for my stomach, but he can't have it."

"Each day sees something accomplished and every job of work I turn out, I feel that I have done my customer a service worthy of my hire."

"I have a most wonderful little wife. She has stuck to me twenty-two years now, so I know she must be a dandy to accompany that. I have a little home, a beautiful little daughter, a son grown to maturity, and now in life's game for himself. Rich? Why, man alive, who could possibly be richer? Then, to add to all the above riches, I take down my old shotgun in season and ramble through fields, woods and tangle in search of the elusive cotton-tail, teal and mallard with my faithful old pointer at 'heel' (now past 11 years), and he is as happy as I when on the hunt. Then, when I get back, oh, how good everything does taste! Then, when night has spread its mantle over this good universe, I settle down in a good easy chair, enjoy a smoke and then roll into bed to be embraced by Morpheus and never hear a sound until the beautiful break of another day. Rich? Well, I guess! Dollars? No, not many. You inquired about RICHES, not material wealth.

"The height of my ambition is to so live that I may have no regrets for having lived when the time comes for me to shuffle off this mortal coil, and I hope by that time to have accumulated enough dollars that myself and mine may not be objects of charity."

"This, then, is my idea of a rich man. If anyone enjoys life more than I do, he is to be envied for his riches."

A French scientist claims to have isolated the influenza germ. If he has really accomplished this feat he has performed an invaluable service to humanity. Millions of lives are sacrificed every year as the result of this scourge, which is more destructive to life than war.

The Day's Best Lunch—the fact that delegates from twenty-eight foreign countries attended the Anti-Alcohol congress in Washington, with the intention of finding out how the United States does it!

No man can be an editor long without getting a thick skin, so you can see what Cox and Harding have to be thankful for.

The republican boys, out to "get the money" showed they knew, who had it. They went after the coal men.

A suspicious nature is usually associated with ignorance, and perhaps more or less crookedness with it.

About the only way to control a landlord is to be one yourself. Own your own home.

Some candidates have dry platforms and wet basements.

The idea of a mirror floor for cabarets is a late inspiration of some genius. This ought to double the attendance at these popular places of amusement.
