

POETICAL ASYLUM,
(ORIGINAL.)

ODE

For the Fourth of July, 1809.

WE celebrate that glorious day,
Our rights were free'd from tyrants sway;
By war we gain'd the precious prize,
By war we gain'd &c.
And now our graceful ensigns wave,
As far as Ocean's waters lave,
Independence ever bright,
Offspring of celestial light;
This first fruit of freedom's tree,
Well deserves a jubilee.

CHORUS

In this point we all agree,
To maintain our liberty;
Peace we love, but fear not war,
Union is our polar star.

Forever shall our natal day,
Shine as the Sun's meridian ray,
In every clime the freeman's soul,
In every clime &c.
On this great day will feel the flame,
That from fair freedom's altar came.

Wife and gen'rous let us be,
Blest with peace and liberty,
But when horrid wars arise,
Then be bold as well as wife.

CHORUS.

In this point, &c.

The sages who devis'd the plan,
To vindicate the rights of man,
The heroes who maintain'd the fight,
The heroes who &c.
Their fame shall stand the test of time,
Their worth be known to every clime.
Lo! the shade of WASHINGTON,
From Elysium looketh on,
And COLUMBUS fees with joy,
That our love's without alloy.

CHORUS.

In this point &c.

Now may the love inspiring fair,
Of all our blessings freely share;
At dawn of this celestial day,
At dawn &c.
Deception's train shall sink in night,
While female virtues grace the light,
Matrons good, and Maidens fair,
Choiceft gifts of Heaven's care;
Purest joys forevermore,
Wed them to our social care.

CHORUS.

No deceptive airs are shewn,
Virtue's blossom is full blown;
Love and freedom triumph now,
They receive our sacred vow.
