

Stockholm, July 7.—Major Arfwedson has returned from his mission to the French emperor and has brought passports for a negotiator to proceed to Paris. Baron Von Essen is to be the ambassador.

Stralsund, July 15.—The French general Baron Coultrais, commanding here, has formally authorized an establishment of a communication between Sweden and the continent through this port.

From the 27th Bulletin.

"Znaim, July 12.—On the 10th the duke of Rivoli, beat the rear guard of the enemy before Hollobrunn.

"On the 11th at noon, the emperor arrived opposite Znaim. The battle had begun. The duke of Ragusa, had attacked the city, and the duke of Rivoli had taken the bridge, and occupied the tobacco manufactory. We took from the enemy in the different engagements on this day, 3000 men, two standards, and three pieces of cannon.

The emperor was informed, that prince John of Lichtenstein, had entered our out posts, ordered the firing to cease. The annexed armistice was signed at the prince of Neuschattel's. Prince Lichtenstein was presented to the emperor, at two in the morning in his tent." (Here follows the armistice which is already published.)

We understand from an authentic source that a revolution has recently taken place at Algiers, by which the then reigning Dey (originally a Mahometan priest) was deposed and put to death. He was succeeded by one of the soldiery, who was placed by the military at the head of the Regency without the occurrence of any sanguinary event except the strangling of his predecessor. This revolution occurred about the 4th of November last. The present Dey is represented as a man of considerable abilities for the station, and the unfortunate Iman whose place he occupies as having been an imbecile ruler.
