

new sky, and novel manners; in fine, by adventurers who disconcerted in Europe with their existence and fortune, went to seek towards the poles a term to their wandering life, an unknown and other destinies. One day or other, the barbarous of this new world will take their rank among civilized states. The colonies of America intended to become integral states and Oceanica, yet a desert, will be peopled by European colonists.

Col.

From the Buffalo Journal.

A very heavy gale of wind was experienced on lake Erie on Tuesday last. Several vessels were driven down the lake and some considerably injured. The Schooner Nautilus from the port of Sandusky was upset about 50 miles above Erie. The passengers and crew succeeded in saving themselves upon the side of the vessel, until she drifted down the lake nearly off Erie, when Lieut. Newcomb, of the U. S. army, lately from Sacket's Harbor, as a last resort left the vessel & attempted to reach the shore by swimming; being exhausted, having been on the wreck forty eight hours without any kind of sustenance, he was overcome by the violence of the waves, and soon sunk to rise no more. The remainder of the passengers and crew were soon after received by a boat from the shore.

The Packet Boat President Monroe, owned by Mr. L. Hodge, of this village was also upset off unkirk. The crew were saved by the assistance of the boat from the shore which took them off after they had been in the water several hours. Some trunks of clothing, &c. were lost, one of which belongs to a Mr. Peck, of Auburn a passenger.

A clergyman traveling a road that led from a noted tavern overtook a man on horseback, who had treated himself so kindly with good stuff, that his body was subject to a constant vibration from side to side: for the sake of good company, he made exertion to keep his horse along side of the clergyman's, to the great hazard of loosing his seat on the saddle. Friend said the clergyman, "whoever, you be, you seem to be very happy." "I hope," said the man, "I shall be happy in the next world; I know you very well, though you are unacquainted with me— you are the very man who converted me." Very possible said the clergyman, and it looks like some of my bunging work which I shall be obliged to do over again.

HUMAN GRANDURE.

The sketches of Chateaubriand during his Travels in Greece, tales in Egypt and barbaries, may please the enthusiastic reader. We copy the following Catskill Reader.

SPARTA

"Sparta was then before me; and its theatre, to which my good fortune conducted me on my first arrival gave me immediately the positions of all the quarters and edifices. I alighted and ran up to the hill of the citadel. Just as I reached the top the sun was raising behind the hills of Mantinea. What a magnificent spectacle! but how melancholy! the solitary stream of the Eurotas running beneath the remains of the bridge Babys; ruins on every side and not a creature to be seen among them. I stood motionless, in a kind of stupor at the contemplation of this scene; a mixture of admiration and grief checked the current of my thoughts, and fixed me to the spot; profound silence reigned around me.

Determined, at least to make echo speak in a spot where the human voice is no longer heard, I shouted with all my might "Leonidas! Leonidas!" No ruin repeated this grate name, and Sparta herself seemed to have forgotten her hero.

The whole site of Lacedemon is uncultivated—the sun parches it in silence, and is incessantly consuming the marble of the tombs. When I beheld this desert, not a plant adorned the ruins, not a bird, not an insect, not a creature, enlivened them, save millions of lizards, which crawled without noise up and down the sides of the scorching walls. A dozen half wild horses were feeding here and there upon the withered grass; a shepherd was cultivating a few watermelons in a corner of the theatre; and at Magoula, which gives its dismal name to Lacedemon I observed a small grove of cypresses. But this Magoula, formerly a considerable Turkish village has also perished in this scene of desolation—its buildings are overthrown, and the index of ruin is itself but a ruin."

NEW-YORK, Oct. 2.
Capt. Spillman of the sloop Emily, arrived at Norfolk on Sunday, in 18 days from St. Jago de Cuba, reports that the sloop Highflyer, formerly of Norfolk, had been seized by a Spaniard, who was under the impression that she was the Amphytrite, also formerly of that port, but which had been taken from him at sea by a Carthaginian privateer. The Spaniards had several hands at work, cutting her to pieces to find certain marks under her cabin ceiling which some of the workmen deposited to as the marks of the Amphytrite. It was the opinion of our consul at St. Jago that she would be condemned.

Truth is indeed the noblest characteristic of man, but we should know how to be discreet and sincere at the same time. He that makes unguarded truth the rule of his life rushes like Isadus naked into the ranks of war; the lustre of his moral beauty may for a while suspend the blows of his assailants, and he may by miracle, escape un wounded; but the award of prudence is not to be bribed by any result and her voice even in the hour of triumph will pass on him the sentence of punishment.
